(5) The outfall sewer and the sewage disposal work are forced upon us by law and we can't avoid them; but the expense can be lessened by providing that instead of pumping, we can let storm water run off by gravity at no cost other than providing storm drains. The extent to which this work will be done will depend on circumstances. Less will be done if our factories employ all our labour. More will be done if employment is needed, for otherwise idle workmen.

(6) To see that, after paying fair wages, the city gets value for every dollar so spent, and that neither time nor material shall be thrown away.

(7) To see that the requests of the most humble citizen that approaches the council shall receive as prompt and courteous consideration as would be given to a large and wealthy delegation—that equal rights shall be given to every ratepayer.

(8)—To see that many more streets are properly oiled (or watered), and that when this cannot or is not done that no resident of any street shall be called upon to pay for service or advantages he does not get—virtually placing street oiling or watering on a frontage tax basis.

(9)—To see that an Advisory Board, composed of ex-Mayors and ex-Aldermen and experienced men of business, be created to confer with and advise the council upon all important public and civic questions and enterprises, so that the city government shall not lose the benefit of their experience.

(10)—To see that the Hydro-Electric Commission, be urged to get and give to the city a report upon the cost of operating radial railways as proposed for this district; and an estimate of their business benefit to Peterborough; and that, before one dollar shall be spent by the city in respect to such proposed radial railways, the proposition shall be placed before the people for their judgment upon the scheme.

The city is faced with large and expensive and formidable undertakings, which will need men of experience, sound business ability, and wisdom, to protect and safeguard the interests of the people. And I think it is fair to assume that if my own business have shown some of that energy, and sound judgment essential to success, my application of these qualities in the government of the city in the capacity of Mayor, should result for the good of our civic interests.

Being one of the heaviest ratepayers in the city, with large personal interests at stake, it should be to my own advantage as well as yours, to endeavour conduct the city's affairs in a prudent, economical and business-like manner.

I have been identified with every committee of the council, and been chairman of the most important—Fire, Water and Light, and Board of Works. In every capacity I have endeavoured to give painstaking attention to the city's interests. With this experience and the knowledge gained, by three years' service, of the needs of the city, I have confidence in my ability to fill the position of Mayor in the best manner in which the city's interests can be promoted.

I will not be able to personally canvas every elector in the city in the short time remaining before polling day. I therefore respectfully submit these views to you, and trust that I may have so favourably impressed you as to be deserving of your votes and support.

Wishing you all, Ladies and Gentlemen, my very best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

G. WALTER GREEN

GARBAGE COLLECTING AREA TO BE CONSIDERABLY INCREASED COMMENCING SATURDAY NEXT

Another Page Will be Added to the History of Peterboro's Progress in Sanitation—Routes Have Been Arranged—Rules and Regulations

On Saturday next, January 1st, 1916, another page will be added to the history of Peterborough's progress in sanitation when the garbage collecting area will be considerably increased. The Sanitary Inspector has arranged the routes of the extension as follows:

Mondays and Thursdays—Westcott, Lake, Perry, Rink, George, Aylmer, Bethune, Stewart, Rubidge.

Tuesdays and Fridays—Romaine, Parnell, Lock north of Romaine, Chamberlen, Alfred, Albert, Lafayette, Jackson, Monaghan Rd., Park St.

Wednesdays and Saturdays—Driscoll Terrace, Cricket Place, Douro, Hunter, Rogers, Mark, Robinson, Sophia, James, Maria, Charles, Dale, Burnham, Engleburn.

The old area will be collected on the same days as formerly.

List of Rules.

The following rules are being left at every house, and if these rules are strictly followed, the citizens are assured of satisfactory and efficient service:

1. Garbage receptacles must be placed out on the morning of collection three feet back from the front line or angle of the house, or where there is a lane, just inside the door or gate, and the door or gate must be unfastened.

2. Receptacles must not be more than two cubic feet in capacity, and when full must not weigh more than 75 pounds.

3. Receptacles for garbage must be of galvanized iron with tight fitting lids.

4. Table and kitchen waste must be drained and wrapped in paper before being placed in receptacles.

5. Waste paper should be tied in bundles.

6. A . s must not be mixed with other refuse.

Letters To Prisoners in France Tell of Germany's Sad Condition

Paris Temps Quotes Extracts from Correspondence Which Show The Tragic Impression Made on German Populace by the Appalling Wastage of Men.

Letters to German prisoners of war in France furnish irrefutable evidence of the sentiments pevailing at present in Germany. The correspondence invariably refers to the constant drain on the male population, owing to the extension of the conscription system and to the steadily aggravating conditions to which those at home are subjected. The Paris Temps quotes a few extracts from such letters. Here is one:

"Gorgast, Oct. 26.—There are now few of us left in this village. Nearly everybody has gone to the war. Many have been killed or grievously wounded. Some have escaped with less damage. It is terrible. Those still left here will soon have to go, too, and we have asked for some Russian prisoners of war to do the work for our families in our absence. I have had a letter from Gustav. He is in Berlin being trained for active service, and he says that the daily drilling goes pretty hard on him. You know he is in his forty-sixth year."

Another prisoner received the following:

"It is a pity to see what poor wretches they are sending off to war these days, old men upward of sixty and half-grown boys of eighteen. Some are one-eyed, others limping. It looks as if they tried to rake together all they can get hold of, only to throw them into the roaring furnace. This cannot possibly last more than a few months at the most. These latest conscripts will be killed, too, in their turn, and we have no more to put in their places."

In Schleswig an dHolstein several training camps have been organized, where both minors and superannuated recruits are being instructed. Persons between forty-five and fifty years of age, who have not been called to the colours as yet, have been forbidden to leave the country, and all boys over sixteen years have been informed to keep themselves in readiness, in anticipation of orders to report at some army depot for preliminary military instruction.

According to a recent ordinance, the details of which were published shortly after its promulgation, the defectives who had once been exempted as unfit for active service have been re-examined. The number affected by this order amounted to about three million, and of these over sixty per cent. were passed by the surgeons. Measures of this kind show to what lengths the German government is determined to go and the common people naturally feel dismayed at the desperate state of things. Some envy the fortunate ones who are safely imprisoned in the enemy's country. One young girl writes to her fiancee in a French prison camp:

"My little boy, you should not grumble, but rather feel satisfied, for you could be in a much more sad situation. I cannot explain now, but will tell you all about it some time. Heinz and August are worse off than you."

"At home we are losing courage altogether. Mother is in despair and most miserable, and father has lost twenty-three pounds. One feels like tearing one's hair, but what good would that do? When I get the blues and am complaining, the others chide me and tell me that I, at least, have nothing to worry about, since you are safe and can hope to return home once more."

Presentation To Miss A. Edwards

A pleasant social evening was spent at the home of Miss Annie Edwards, Villiers, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 21, when her fellow members of the Sunday school class, No. 3, "Willing Workers," of Villiers Sunday school, presented her on the eve of her marriage, with a dozen silver teaspoons. The teacher read the following address:

Dear Classmate,—We the members of your class, hear that you are about to sever your connections with us. We feel we could not let the occasion pass without showing in some tangible way our respect and esteem for you. We ask you to accept this souvenir as a slight token of our hearty good wishes for your future welfare.

Signed by class—Bella Hood, Bella Hastie, Edith Steele, Edith Wood, Mabel Steele, Agnes Wood, Emma McCormick.

VIENNA MUST SUBMIT, IS VIEW IN ROME

ROME, Dec. 28.—The Tribuna, commenting on the second American note to Austria-Hungary regarding the Ancona, says the firmness of its substance admits of no doubt of Washington's intention to obtain satisfaction. Any possible doubt of such an intention, adds the newspaper, would be resolved by the expressions of the American press, "which considers the note a semi-ultimatum."

The Tribuna declares the only solution possible is the absolute submission of Austria or the rupture of relations with the United States.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

The Y.M.C.A. building was open most of Christmas Day, and was visited by a good number of young men. This is a very busy week at the Y. in view of the school holidays.

The supper which was to be served to the workers of the membership campaign on Monday will be served to-night (Tuesday) at 6.30 o'clock, and it is hoped that every man will be present.

The Intermediate Gymnasium leaders will have their turkey supper to-night, and as they are a good lively crowd, it is assured that they will have a good time.

There will be a short New Year's Eve programme for the boys on Friday night, and the following programme will be run off during New Year's Day: Morning, Gym., Baths, Plunge, Boys' Games, etc., which will be open to the boys of the city, whether they are members or not. In the afternoon, from 3 to 5.30, the ladies of the auxiliary will receive. Special music will be provided in the lobby, and a gymnasium programme will be carried out.

In the evening there will be bowling and basketball contests.

The privileges of the Association are offered free to the young men of the city from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. on New Year's Day.

This includes baths, billiards, and bowling, so we trust that a great number of the young men of the city will sample the various privileges offered in the remodelled building.

The boys' game room, gymnasium and baths will be open to all boys between the ages of twelve and seventeen from nine a.m. to twelve o'clock in the morning.

From two to five in the afternoon the staff would like to see as many of the older boys of the city make use of the privileges as possible. Everything will be free and a good time is promised.

Come and bring your father with you.

RUSSIAN LEADER PROMISES GOOD NEWS HENCEFORTH

General Alexeieff, Chief of General Staff, Who Foiled All German Attempts to Trap Russian Army, Says That Critical Periods Has Passed

In the Paris Figaro, Mr. Charles Stienon gives a brief sketch of the career of General Alexeieff, chief of the Russian General Staff, who was recently made a grand officer of the French Legion of Honour.

"Since Michael Vassilievitch Alexeieff assumed the important post he now holds," Mr. Stienon says, "a new spirit has been infused into the Russian armies. He replaced General Januchkevitch as chief of staff on 4th September. Before this appointment General Alexeieff had been in command of the armies in the Baltic provinces. The new chief is very popular with the rank and file. Wherever he has been stationed since the beginning of the war fortune has smiled on the Russian arms. Alexeiff was one of the commanders whose vigorous offensive inflicted on the Austrians so many crushing defeats in the early days of the conflict. In the Carpathian campaign General Alexeieff, against who advice the extensive drive across the mountains was attempted, extricated the Russian troops from many a difficult situation and conducted a retreat in a most orderly manner.

"General Alexeieff was graduated from the Imperial Military Academy at Moscow in 1874. A few years later he saw his first active service in the Russo-Turkish War, during which he distinguished himself for bravery and cool judgment. He was wounded on three occasions in this campaign. In 1880 Alexeieff receive appointment to the General Staff, and later on was assigned to lecture on Russian military history at the war colleges of Moscow, Petrograd, and Nicolaieff.

During the war with Japan, General Alexeieff was placed in command of the Third Army of Manchuria. Even the enemy commanders gave expression to their great admiration of the masterly strategy revealed in this Russian general's operations. At the conclusion of peace the Russian Emperor presented the gallant officer with a golden sword studded with gems in appreciation of his efficient services.

"Nothing pleases General Alexeieff better than hard work. He is a born soldier and loves his profession, to the enactments of which he is giving all his time and efforts. It is hazardous to make prophecies these days, but when the appointment of General Alexeieff as chief of staff became known, it was commonly predicted that Russia's fortunes of war would take a lucky turn and improve steadily unto a victorious end.

"On being notified of his appointment as chief of staff, the General paid a visit to the Duma to say goodbye to a few personal friends. He asked Mr. Demidoff if the Duma had any message to send to the army. 'Tell them,' replied the latter, 'to fight to the end.' To this General Alexeieff rejoined, 'Very well. Hereafter you will receive only favourable news from us. The critical period has passed, and the situation cannot but improve from now on.'

"Later events have proved that this was not an empty boast. Indications of a new Russian offensive in Courland and Volhynia appear daily in the bulletins from that front. Germany, it will be observed, is no longer celebrating with much ostentation any Hinenburg victories in those parts. Its great field-marshall is being put on the defensive and is preparing for the attack which the conscientious and painstaking Alexeieff is undoubtedly preparing. There is not much show about the Russian commander. He goes about his work in a quiet, modest way, just like the grand old soldier who holds supreme command in France.

"In expectation of renewed Russian successes on the Dvina and the Styr, it is comforting to recall that the new leader of the armies is the man who won the early victories of the war and who led the masterly retreat from the Vistula, when the Kaiser thought he already had the whole Russian force within the grasp of his mailed fist."

More small towns in Norway use electricity than in any other country, owing to the abundance of water power.

Summary of Mr. Hall's Argument In School Board Investigation

"Inquiry Was Remarkable For The Entire Lack of Any Evidence Whatever to Show Any Wrong Doing on the Part of any Member of The Board of Education," Says Mr. Hall

1. This long and searching investigation is remarkable for the entire lack of any evidence whatever to show any wrong doing on the part of any member of the Board of Education.

2. There is no evidence whatever that Mr. W. H. Hill, during the time that he was a member of the School Board for over twenty-seven years, ever personally canvassed any school teacher for life or fire insurance.

3. There is no evidence whatever that during Mr. Hill's whole term of 27 years as a member of the Board he ever instructed any agent to canvas any teacher for fire or life insurance.

4. There is no evidence whatever that during the whole course of the twenty-seven years, any agent ever mentioned Mr. Hill's name in canvassing any teacher.

5. Such being the case there was no more objection to any teacher insuring in any of the Companies represented by Mr. Hill than for such teacher to consult a doctor or buy dry goods or boots and shoes from any merchant, etc. etc., who happened to be a member of the Board.

6. It is intolerable to have a reputable citizen like Mr. Hill misrepresented as he has been, before the ratepayers of Peterborough on a pretended charge of this kind in which there is no evidence whatever to support.

7. The investigation into the purchase of typewriters shows that during the year 1914 the Board of Education traded nine old typewriters for ten new Underwood typewriters and the Board gave $75 to boot. If the Board of Education had given $75 to boot they still would have made a good bargain.

8. Mr. Hill at first objected to the bargain because he did not think it was in the interests of the pupils to have their whole knowledge of typewriting confined to one type of machine, but when he found that no other member of the Board, except Mr Ackerman, was in sympathy with his views and as good a bargain could not be made for two or more typewriters of different designs he withdrew his objection. It seems, however about this time that Mr. Hill, himself, made an exchange of typewriters for the Sun Life Insurance Company, and on behalf of himself and his partner, and without any connection whatever with the Board of Education typewriter transaction. In fact the agent for the Typewriter Company said when he was discussing the typewriter transaction and his insurance transaction with Mr. Hill no other subject was discussed.

9. A person who could smell improper conduct out of a transaction of this kind must be among the lowest and meanest type of citizenship and "could smell fraud 45 miles away" out of the most innocent transaction.

10. The suggestion that on account of Mr. Hill being a member of the School Board certain insurance policies were placed with Companies that he represented is equally groundless.

11. The rules and regulations of the School Board show that the Finance Committee has the exclusive control over the placing of fire insurance, and the evidence shows that never at any time was Mr. Hill a member of this Finance Committee and there is not a tittle of evidence to show that he ever canvassed or solicited fire insurance from any member of the Board.

12. It is true he represents the leading and strongest Fire Insurance Companies doing business in Canada and Great Britain, and the Board of Education would be derelict in their duty to the ratepayers if they did not divide up their insurances among the chief and soundest Fire Insurance Companies, regardless of the fact whether Mr. Hill was an agent for any of them or not.

13. Were Mr. Hill to give a rebate to the School Board in connection with his commission on insurance premiums paid to the Company, and were the School Board to accept such rebate they would all be guilty of a quasi criminal offence to rebate any part of insurance premiums.

14. The alleged charges are groundless, petty and vexatious and reflect discredit upon those who inspired them.

15. Mr. Hill has been a member of the School Board for twenty-seven years, and has been a most valuable member and well merits and deserves the continuous honour and confidence that has been reposed in him by the ratepayers of Peterborough, and there is nothing in his past or present conduct as a member of the School Board which casts the slightest stain upon his honour and good name.

Lack of Clothing For Belgian Children Closes Many Schools

Miss Jeanette Hall, of Chicago, who assisted in Belgian relief work, in a letter to the Commission for Relief in Belgium, No. 71 Broadway, tells of the appalling need for clothing among the poor of Belgium.

While the American public is responding wonderfully to the appeal made by the Clothing Committee, of which Mr. Oscar S. Straus is chairman, the need for clothes and shoes for the three million destitutes in the war ridden country is greater this year and is increasing daily, says Miss Hall. She writes of conditions in a little Belgian town last winter:—

"When we went to Willebroeck it was just the kind of bleak gray day, half snowing and half raining, that would eat the heart out of a giant. And if one kind hearted man had not led us along the canal on the two mile short cut, and another had not put our grips on his wheel-barrow, and two others found us a home with friends of theirs, and the mother there had not immediately given us some hot soup, I doubt whether there would have been any of me left to tell a story.

"We thought we knew how it felt to be insufficiently clothed, for the kind of wind that blows across those wet lands below the level of the sea is so deadly cold and penetrating that no clothing could stop its cutting; and that kind of weather lasts steadily until in April, with the ground under foot as wet as a sponge and as cold as melting snow—though where we were it never dried up and snowed.

"The director of the public school was so proud of being able to continue regular sessions that he asked us to visit the principal schools of the town. But as we noticed that more children might have occupied the rooms, he took a graphic way of giving us the reason for their absence. In each room of the schools he had all the children hold up their hands who were wearing their best clothes; nearly all did. Then he asked all to hold up their hands who were wearing their only clothes, and again nearly every hand went up.

"Some of those little boys were wearing their sisters' clothing, and some of their mothers'. All sizes were put on all ages of children. Then the director asked them tactfully—as all the questions were asked—how many had brothers and sisters at home who ordinarily were in school; and again nearly all the hands came up, though some of the little faces were very troubled. And turning to us, with his fine face reflecting the trouble he knew to be in their minds, he said:—'Every family sends the brightest child to school with all the clothing there is; the rest of the children must stay in bed, or at least in the house near the stove to keep warm. They may not come on the street in what clothing there is left for them, or they would be ill with cold.'

"Sometimes we had to go along the streets, for women who knew we were Americans would stop us to ask if we couldn't get clothing for the children next door, or the woman around the corner who had fever and was not strong; not once did any one ask for anything for herself, nor expect us to supply her because we could easily see her need. They asked with the manner of proud gentlewomen, as I do not doubt some of them were.

"I think I told you about the only woman we saw weeping in all Belgium. She and her husband were just recovering from typhoid, and four of their children had had it: she would not have cried if she were well; from their attitude I judge it is not supposed to be courteous to trouble Americans with that sort of thing when there is so much to be grateful to America for. That family had been burned out, had lost all their stock, had all had typhoid, and were living in a part of a barn when we found them. They certainly needed clothing, and the poor, frightened mother cried when she got it."

GERMAN TROOPS HAD A CHRISTMAS TREE CELEBRATION

With the German army in Northern France, December 26, (via Lille and Berlin, to London, December 27.)—War is no respecter of customs. Therefore there was no cessation of activity along the line in northern France on Christmas Eve—if possible the French artillery fire more nearly approximated the celebrated "drum fires" of the late September offensive than at any time since then. Christmas to the average German, however, is the most important day of the year and the Bavarians in northern France refused to allow the French artillery to spoil their celebration. All along the line, from the most advanced trenches to the communication points in the rear, Christmas trees blazed almost as if in opposition to the flare of exploding shells.

It was the lot of the Associated Press correspondent to spend Christmas Eve with a Bavarian reserve company, every member of which had been in the field for at least a year. French guns boomed incessantly, shells ripping up acres of the ground.

HAD THEIR TREE.

All the members of the company had gathered in a little wooden hut just behind the front. A tiny stage had been erected for the inevitable orchestra and speakers, and in one corner stood a little Christmas tree laden with tinsel and sweets. Adjoining it were long tables on which were cigars, socks, mittens, chocolate and wearing-apparel—mostly home made articles. Not a man of the company was less than 30 years old, and the majority were 45. Nine out of every ten, as one could tell by the rings upon their fingers, were married. The majority, too, had sons in the field, and many had lost their nearest and dearest. The company's captain, in private life a lawyer and one of the oldest men in the service, had learned but a short time before that his son had fallen but a few miles away, yet he mounted the little platform and spoke to his men in firm, ringing tones.

SANG HYMNS.

The music was without exception devotional rather than patriotic. The room fairly shook as the bearded men, most of them peasants, stood and sang hymn after hymn. After the first song servants brought in huge mugs of Munich beer sent especially from Bavarian breweries. The captain had received literally bales of presents for his men, and as far as possible had divided them equally. They lay in little piles on the tables, past which the soldiers filed. Each reservist had to pass his captain and for each the officer had some special greeting. "Hello Fritz, have you something from your wife?" "Merry Christmas, Johann. Is that boy of yours getting better?" were examples of his salutations.

LAUGHED AT CANNONADE.

Cannon were booming incessantly meanwhile and the glare of exploding shells was constantly visible. When a shell exploded especially near or with an unusually loud report the whole room broke into laughter. As midnight approached the scene became gayer. Approximately every five minutes the orchestra started a hymn, in which everyone joined.

Not as an officer to private, but as man to man, the captain thanked his soldiers for what they had done. He referred to the hopeful expectation that peace would come soon, calling upon them to continue to combine their services to the Fatherland. At his final words a tremendous French artillery salvo sounded with a boom that drowned every other sound. It was followed by another salvo of pledges from the soldiers to stick it out to the last.

ATTENDED CHURCH.

Wherever possible German soldiers attended church on Christmas Day. In Lille there was a special mass at the Cathedral at which German priests officiated in the presence of hundreds of soldiers.

Trip Was An Interesting One

Mr. B. W. Manning of the Manning garage), and wife, have just returned from a trip through Western Ontario. In their trip Mr. Manning visited the Studebaker plant in Detroit and Walkerville, where he was very kindly shown through the works there. They also visited London, Goderich, Atwood, Guelph and Berlin. In Berlin Mr. Manning went to the Dominion Tire Factory where the celebrated nobby tread tires are made. He saw the entire process of the tire being built from the raw state to the finished product. This was very interesting and beneficial to Mr. Manning, as he is an expert in the tire repair work.

Voice of The People

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It is really remarkable how much the working class ratepayers are beloved at this time of year. Aldermen who for eleven months don't give a tinker's curse for the labouring man, begin to trim their sails around Christmas time. The platform of ex-Alderman Green breathes love and undying affection for the working men. We wonder how he managed to dissemble his love during the past two years. Was he giving them a token of his affection when he voted for the Warren and Standard Paving Companies with their 17c per hour, and their gangs of imported foreign labourers? We are pleased to see that he at last sees eyes to eye with the Trades and Labour Council with regard to placing a clause in city contracts calling for loyal labour. But why, oh why, didn't he vote for a by-law to that effect when he had the opportunity? And if a local labour clause, why not another clause for a living rate of wages? The Trades and Labour Council believe that it is inimical to the best interests of the city for a partner in a firm tendering for city contracts to be a member of the City Council, whether as alderman or mayor, and therefore adjudicating on his own firm's tenders. It is entirely wrong in principle, and is likely to lead to graft and bribery. It is not fair to the other aldermen to have to decide between their own colleague and an outsider. We strongly urge every ratepayer who has the real interests of his city at heart not to be led away by claptrap, but to vote for the man who will do his best to study the ratepayers. J. J. Hartley has worked all his life in the city, and has a stake in it. His election promises he intends to keep, and what he cannot perform he will not promise. Thanking you Mr. Editor, we are,

Municipal Committee Trades and Labour Council.

The Ninty-Seventh Canadian Battalion

This is Canada's American Legion—its officers and men without exception Americans who have gone across the border to enlist for service under the Union Jack. A breach of neutrality? Not at all. Neutrality is for governments, not individuals. These Americans are within their rights, as were those other Americans who preceded them in the service of Sir Sam Hughes and as are the still other Americans who are fighting under different flags in Europe.

So far as has been discoevred, not one of these Americans has been howling for opportunity to "get out of the trenches," either before Christmas or after, unless it was to get in the direction of the enemy. Nor was any such cry heard from the many Canadians who came down from the North to serve under the American flag in the Civil War. They came to fight, and did fight; the Americans of the new "American Legion" and the other Americans who are with the Canadian forces have joined to fight, and, you can count upon it, will fight in a way that does credit to their rearing.

The Toronto Globe calls this Ninety-seventh Canadian Battalion "the pledge of North America to the world's democracy." At least it serves to show the solidity of this North American continent and is eloquent evidence of conviction on the part of the men who have placed their lives at stake that Canada's fight is our own.

APSLEY ITEMS OF INTEREST

Twenty-Five Recruits is The Objective of This Enterprising Village

A recruiting officer has been busy around here for the past week in the hope of securing twenty-five recruits. If the desired number is obtained the boys will be allowed to drill at home for the winter months. Several names are already on the list.

Personals.

Miss Marion MacPherson of Clydesdale, spent a few days the guest of Miss Ella Brown.

Mr. John Tucker spent Sunday the guest of Miss Flossie Stevens.

Mr. John Bounds was the guest of Miss Gertie Windsor over Sunday.

A number of the young people attended the party given in the Town Hall Wednesday evening.

A Concert.

A number of the young people attended the Christmas Tree and concert given in aid of the Red Cross, held at the Clanrboarda School, and all report a good time. The programme opened by 'Welcome Chorus' by the school children, and the rest of the programme was as follows:

Chairmans' Address.
Recitation by Harvey Windsor.
Violin selection by Hughie Caldwell.
Recitation—Richard Elley.
Solo—Mrs. Harry Roberts.
Recitation—Helen Windsor.
Dialogue—"Tom's Practical Joke".
Recitation—Eva Elley.
Solo—Mr. Harry Elley and Miss Alecia.
Recitation—Scott Windsor.
Dialogue—"Boys' Rights".
Violin selection — Messrs. Daniel and Willie Gooley.
Reading—Marion MacPherson.
Speech—Lieutenant Carter.
Dialogue—"A Surprise Party".
Recitation—Mary Windsor.
Solo—Mr. James Roberts and Mr. Harry Elley.
Recitation—Thomas Dane.
Reading—Mrs. Harry Roberts.
Dialogue—"Advertising for a Servant."
Recitation—Margaret Elley.
Chorus—School.
Recitation—Verna Roberts.
Violin selection — Messrs. Hughie Caldwell and Willie Gooley.
Recitation—Ruby Rickles.
Dialogue—"Art Critic".
Violin selection — Messrs. Hughie Caldwell and John Mahoney.
Recitation—Gertrude Dalton.
Dialogue—'Josiah's First Courtship'
Chorus—"Christmas Bells".

The programme was closed by an eloquent speech by Mr. William Tucker, who very ably filled the capacity as chairman, thanking both the teach and pupils, and all who assisted in making the event such an enjoyable one. Also for the splendid order given during the entertainment. During the singing of the National Athem they were aroused by the visit of Santa Claus, who distributed the gifts off the tree. The occasion was suddenly brought to a close by the serving of luncheon by the ladies of the district.

ENGLISH GIRLS TO THE RESCUE

LONDON, Dec. 27. — Twenty-five girls, supplied from the London County Council's training classes for replacing men called up for service, have taken positions with the National Amalgamated Approved Society, an English insurance corporation. They were a first draft. Many more girls are being trained to fill future vacancies.

The case is interesting as showing the forethought with which the more provident employers are safeguarding themselves against the big inroads that will be made into their clerical staffs as Lord Derby's "groups," volunteers for the war, are called up. It is known that in the earlier "groups," especially between group two and group fifteen, the proportion of clerks is very high. Of the three hundred thousand clerks in England and Wales, probably well over one-half are within those groups.

The National Amalgamated Approved Society, though a big concern, is a new one, and its staff was young. Four hundred of its clerks left to enlist. Of the remainder very many are of military age and fitness and liable under the group system for service. The company formerly employed eight hundred men and five hundred women. The chairman of directors, Mr. Thomas Neill, heartily supported Mr. Cecil Harmsworth's committee's report urging the training of women, and undertook to engage a sufficient number of women clerks to justify the London County Council Education Committee forming special insurance classes for his company.

The twenty-five women engaged are the first instalment of women from those classes, which the company now regard as their most important source of supply for clerical labour. At first, these new clerks will work under supervision, so as to get a full insight into the work of the office. Girl applicants who now apply direct to the company for posts are being referred to these training classes. Some are engaged subject to their attaining proficiency at the classes.

The London County Council's "banking" classes are the result of a similar arrangement between the banks and the County Council. Some of the things the "bank girls" learn are:

The use of telephone; methods of copying letters; handwriting—the importance of legibility and neatness; arithmetic, with special reference to mental calculations—the importance of speed and accuracy in making additions; the use of the adding machine.

It is a pleasure to think that we have not followed the impious assumption of another State that the Almighty is leading is to victory.—Lord Bryce.

S. A. NOTES

A grand concert was present at the annual Christmas tree at the Sunday school at the S. A. Hall near Brailey's school house last night. A lovely service of song was rendered and all reflected much credit on the leaders and the scholars of the Sunday school.

Santa Claus made his appearance in good time and presented presents to all the Sunday school scholars.

The second Christmas tree and entertainment of the S. A. Sunday school at Byersville will be held to-night at the hall near Byers' store. Moving pictures, recitations, songs, drills, etc., will constitute the programme, after which Santa Claus will make his appearance and distribute presents to all the Sunday school children.

Sergt. and Mrs. Cunningham have done well with their opportunity in that end of the city, which is appreciated much indeed by all their comrades and friends of the S. A.

COUNT BURIAN AIMS TO PREVENT BREAK

LONDON, Dec. 28. — A message from Baron Burian, Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, to Baron Zwiedenek, Austro - Hungarian Charge d'Affaires at Washington, is circulated in London by the Wireless Press. It is dated Vienna, and was picked up in England on its transit by wireless telegraph to the United States. The communication reads as follows:

"The American note was handed over to me on the 21st. Till the Secretary of State the answer we are now preparing will be guided by the same concern for good relations between both countries as mentioned by the federal government. In consequence of the Christmas holidays, our answer cannot be expected before next week."

"HIGHLAND HORSES" IN ACTION—This detachment of Canadian Scottish, being detained for a long time at the base of supplies, were called upon quite frequently to help motor transports in difficulties from various causes. A waggish corporal dubbed them the "Highland Horses" as the result of these activities and the photograph shows them at work.

THE GOOD DEATH

A Talk With The "Slackers" By a Peterboro' Boy at The Front

There was a time when death was an ugly thing to me. The war has changed my mind. It has made death a sublime splendour. You remember the fat, foolish scullion in "Tristram Shandy." When Obadiah in the kitchen announced the news of Bobby's death, the fat, foolish scullion, scrubbing her pans on the floor, triumphantly cried, "So am not I!"

In the old days before the war, I felt, I thought, like the fat, foolish scullion whenever I heard the news of a friend's death. Down deep in my soul I whispered to myself, "So am not I!" I was stupidly proud of being alive, and contact with death merely sharpened my gross relish of life.

* * * * * * * * * *

The war has transformed my frame of mind, my state of soul. When I regard the roll of honour and see a name I know, or hear of the death of some comrade, I still say "So am not I!" But I do not mean what I meant of old. There is now no triumph in my secret comment. There is everything but triumph. And to the civilian "slacker," who reads the Roll of Honour every morning surrounded by luxury, there should be a certain shame, a certain humiliation, a certain envy. In one sense, it is good to be alive in this heroic age, but in another sense it is not good. It is not good to live the safe and sheltered life while braver and better men are joyously dying that freedom may live. It is not good for you to eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow they die. It is not god to hoard your days while the young heroes are flinging theirs at the feet of liberty in a rapture of devotion. It is not good to be a smug civilian, while the knights of chivalry are gaily leaping into the vast unknown.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Bobby is certainly dead," says Obadiah. "So am not I," says the fat, foolish civilian, with his "war edition" in his hand, "and well it would be for me if I were." You may not be fit to live, but it is not given to every man to be fit to live. You may not be fit to die, but unfitness for life is easier to bear than unfitness for death, now that death is a holy fellowship, a sacred sodality, a chapter of nobility. These radiant crusaders have made death more eloquent, more just, and more mighty than it has ever been since the first man died the first death. They have purged it and purified it. They have turned the sepulchre into a shrine in the temple of humanity. They have robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory.

* * * * * * * * * *

These are the musings that should move in your mind as you stare at the tale of dead heroes up to the end of the most tragic May in the history of the world: 3,327 dead officers and 47,015 dead soldiers. Verily, a terrible tale! "Bobby is certainly dead." Yes, fifty thousand of him! "So am not I,' exults the fat, foolish civilian, as he looks at the sands running to waste in the hour-glass of life. You may watch the sands trickling slowly for five or ten or twenty years, and you may die a straw death, a cow death, but it will not be a death shining with the white glow of self-abnegation. It will be but the common death of common men.

* * * * * * * * * *

"Sentiment," sneers the cynic, "romantic rhetoric." And he will proceed to deride the fat, foolish civilian who hides behind the young soldiers. He will accuse the fat, foolish, civilian of being blood-guilty. He will even say that he sent these happy warriors to the bloody trenches of Flanders and the Dardanelles. But these young soldiers are not sent, they go. They are volunteers to a man. This is especially and peculiarly true of the Territorial heroes, and of the heroes of the new armies. They choose. Their choice is made in the light of the new knowledge with which this war has drenched the world. They kiss their mothers, their wives, their sisters, and their sweethearts with death overlooking the last caress, and the last sob. In the presence of such selfless valour the sourest cynic might well be abashed. War is not their trade. Fighting is not their profession. How many of them must have hated the stony face of duty, and the visage of harsh honour! Life was sweet to them, and home, and the tender bonds of love. But other things were sweeter.

* * * * * * * * * *

And let us not, in our reverence for them, do scant honour to the soldiers and seamen who, in the monotony of peace, made their choice. They embraced the noble profession of arms without feeling the thrill and sting and bite of the great war. They toiled and slaved long before the red dawn. They were not too greatly esteemed in those days. Their rewards were not lavish. In lonely holes and corners of the earth they did their duty. Then in a great hour they died and were forgotten. It hurts me to think of those grey colonels and grizzled sergeants and time-expired soldiers who are sleeping their last sleep under strange skies, in strange earth that blooms with no native flowers. Their glory is different, but is it not even finer than the glory of the elate and eager volunteer? The prose of sacrifice is not so easily written as the poetry of sacrifice. Remember Mons and the Marne!

* * * * * * * * * *

Let me confess that I am trying to console those who have been stricken. It is a rash adventure, for the heart knows its own bitterness, and consolation is but a sorry impertinence. But we are all in this affair, and the comforter of to-day may be the mourned of to-morrow. The waste of the great madness tortures every house in the Empire, and to some it is almost harder to live than to die. A friend of mine told me that he pitied those who were left behind. "It is worse for them than it is for us," he said. But only the soldier has the right to say that, or think it, but it is true.

* * * * * * * * * *

Faith helps—faith in the good death for the good cause. But it helps the fat, foolish civilian even more than it helps the lean, wise soldier. There are wars that are all waste, but this war is for the saving of the soul of the world. One does not argue. One knows. One feels. There is nothing but evil in the mouth of a Krupp cannon. Our young men do well to die for the great good things. They are the salt of life. They are the sanity of the soul. If they perish we all perish with them.

* * * * * * * * * *

Not one of you will live to see the laurels which generations yet to be will lay on the graves of our soldier heroes. More history is being made by them than shall be written for centuries yet to come. There will come a great good time, when a redeemed humanity will kneel before the banners of the knights who fell in the last great crusade of all. The good death they died will be sung by poets long after war has been banished from the world. Let that be our solace. If they had lived something holier than life would have died.

* * * * * * * * * *

Young men of Canada, how much serious thought have you given to this? This war must be won, and the issue affects you personally. There are many gaps to be filled, comrades to be avenged. What does your real conscience tell you to do?

Plague of Rats in Trenches Has Become Very Serious

500 Ferrets Arrive in Flanders to Help Get Rid of The Pests

LONDON, Dec. 28. — Soldiers on leave from the front report that the plague of rats in the trenches is becoming serious. These rodents eat clothes as well as the food left about The medical authorities are doing their utmost to stamp them out, recognizing the peril which may arise through their conveyance of disease. A ferret dealer in Kent has recently sent 500 ferrets to Flanders to help rid the trenches of this pest. In fact, rat hunting has become the daily sport with the troops.

France, Sunday, December 5, 1915.

The Editor, Peterborough Examiner, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I am enclosing herewith a little effusion of mine. It was written some little time ago, but I have re-written it as it was likely to be lost or destroyed, and was rapidly becoming undecipherable.

I thought you might care to publish same in your sheet, as communications from the front, especially from a fellow-townsman, may be of interest to your readers.

Please accept apologies for awful writing, but there are many contributary causes for that. Naturally my handwriting has gone off considerably. The pen I am writing with is terrible, and also I quite forgot to bring my "roll-top" with me.

I have met many boys out here from the old burg, some, alas! since fallen. I will miss many of my old friends if I ever get back to Peterborough.

I joined in Toronto on 1st Sept. 1914, left England for France 1st Feb. last, and have been everywhere the 1st Canadian Division has been. I have had many close calls, but am thankful to say I am still in one piece and very much alive.

I hear from old C.G.E. colleagues once in a while, and now that they have got into the shell game I suppose the war cannot last very much longer. No wonder the Kaiser flew to Ferdinand for help!

It may interest you to know that Lieut. W. N. Nicholls (son of the president of the C.G.E.) was my company officer for some months, including those strenuous days of Ypres and St. Julien. He is back in Canada now, and I have transferred to another unit.

Well, Christmas will be with you, maybe over, by the time you receive this, and I could not tell you how much I wish I was going to be in the old town then. However, here's hoping that I may be at Xmas, 1916, and this old war all over and the Kaiser secure in St. Helena.

My address is as follows:

Corpl. W. R. Patterson (37292),
Canadian Corps, T.S.C.,
Canadian Headquarters, B.E.F.,
France.

Well, I will wish you and all your readers a Merry Xmas (merrier than my last one was or this one is going to be), and all good wishes for a prosperous New Year.

I remain, sincerly yours.

Wm. R. Patterson.

RATEPAYERS' ASSOCIATION FOR EAST CITY

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Ratepayers' Association for the the Eastern section of the city—East Ward—is called for Thursday evening, December 30th, in St. Luke's Men's Hall, Hunter Street, East.

Scramble For Deputy-Reeveship of Monaghan

Mr. W. G. Howden Will Contest Election With John McIntosh

The North Monaghan nominations yesterday were not without a breeze or two stirred up by the passing of the 1915 Council. From the list of those nominated it is evident that the ratepayers will have plenty of material to choose from. W. G. Howden is going to give John McIntosh another run for the Reeveship, and Herb. Forster, apparently, has three or four on his trail for the deputy-reeveship. Robert Dobbin, Wm. Robson, Jos. H. Bell and Harold B. Rye are named, but it is likely that some of them will decline to allow their names go on the ballots. It is understood that "Bob" Dobbin would like to have a single-handed round with Mr. Forster, claiming that last year's three-corner affair with Mr. T. Young in it, worked out to the advantage of Mr. Forster, who was returned with a majority of 19 over Mr. Dobbin. It is also generally stated that either Mr. Rye, Mr. Bell or Mr. Robson will give Mr. Forster a battle, and at that rate another three-cornered contest would be seen. However, the candidates will be known to-night. There is a general scramble for the Council with considerable young blood nominated. Here, again, it will not be until to-night that the personnel of the ballots will be known.

In the nomination addresses in the town hall yesterday it is learned that Mr Howden charged that the McIntosh Council did not carry out its promise of keeping the taxes down; and that Mr. McIntosh replied that when he took up the reins there was an overdraft of about $1,400 inherited from the Howden Council which had to be provided for; and also that had it not been for this debt the taxes would have been held down this year.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Lindsay Intermediates Have Dropped Out of The Race

Somebody ought to explode a stick of dynamite under the management of the Lindsay Hockey Club. After the Intermediate group had been drawn up, Lindsay woke up and asked permission to enter a team. The O.H.A. left the matter up to the other clubs in the district who waived objection, allowed Lindsay to come in, changed the schedule accordingly, and settle away for the group race. The Lindsay team was scheduled to play here Thursday night, but this morning notified the local club that they had decided to drop out of the group, so that there will be no O. H. A. game here until Friday, January 7th.

CURLING

Neutral weather has not helped the ice at the curling rink, although it is fit for games. A good hard frost would stiffen it, however, and produce a hard surface. Two rinks were in use last night.

On New Year's Day the annual games between the President and Vice-President will take place. Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald is president this year, and Mr. J .H. Ferguson is vice-president.

Junior Hockey League Is Being Considered

The prospects of a Junior City Hockey League appear to be improving, and all the teams of boys under eighteen should be giving the matter some consideration. One proposal is to limit the age to those who do not reach their eighteenth birthday until March 1, 1916. This should put all the boys on an equal footing and give the lads from 15 to 18 a good opportunity to develop. They would not be called upon to play against older and more experienced boys. There should be many teams from the various sections of the city, and it is believed the plan would provide a good junior team in a year or two, and also assure a supply of senior material.

Mr. Hartley Denies That He Opposed The Hydro-By-law When it Was Up

Mr. J. J. Hartley stated that a rumour was being circulated to the effect that he had opposed the city's Hydro-Electric by-law of a few years back, and that he had been lined up with Mr. Kendry and other water interests. This is the report that has reached Mr. Hartley's ears, and he has requested that it be strongly denied. To The Examiner he said that rather than opposing the Hydro by-law he had always been in favour of it, had supported it, and had voted for it. He could not have done anything more, he states, to have shown his active sympathy for the Hydro-Electric by-law.

SALONICA MECCA OF GERMAN SPIES

Central Allies Have Agents Who Watch Every Train and Vessel Without Molestation

From Salonica an English press correspondent communicates, under date of 25th November, the following account of the spy system established there by Germany and her allies:

"Since it became the base of the Anglo-French operations in the Balkans, Salonica has attained an importance unprecedented in all its history. It has become the gathering place of a heterogeneous assemblage of soldiers representing nearly every race under the sun, and besides it has been infested with such an army of spies that one fairly stumbles over them. Salonica seems to have become a veritable paradise to these contemptible individuals, who strut about here at their leisure, without being interfered with in the least. They perform their tasks with a cynical audacity which is really provoking.

"Here one will find the elite of the German, Austrian, and Bulgarian world of espionage. As soon as a traveller alights from a train at Salonica some sly-looking person is sure to be on hand, sizing up not only the new arrival himself, but also his baggage, etc. If possible, the watchful person will try to get a peep at the newcomer's passport, too, when this is presented for inspection. The trail is followed to the hotel, where subsequently the clerk will be pumped for all the information he may be able to supply. Then the waiters are enlisted in the service of the spy, and if they cannot pick up enough satisfactory news through bits of casual conversation with the patron, some outsider will be hired to occupy the nearest table in the dining-room, in order to try to draw out the stranger by the approved 'hail fellow, well met,' method.

"If the goings and comings of ordinary private persons are observed so closely, one may rest assured that not a single transport arrives, or a soldier disembarks, without that fact being reported immediately to Sofia, Constantinople, or Berlin. Nor can the Greek government be blamed for not intervening in the nefarious business. Greece maintains its neutrality, and on the whole this neutrality is benevolent to the Allies. On the other hand, the English-French military authorities have their hands tied in this matter and are quite impotent to take any efficacious measures for protection against the spies.

"The problem, however, is one which calls for prompt solution. No doubt the Greek government will recognize the equity of the Allies' demands in this respect and permit them to devise some means for ensuring their own safety. The Allies should have a right to examine all persons arriving at or leaving Salonica and they also should be authorized to expel any suspects from the military zone. And furthermore," the correspondent asks, in closing, "how will it be possible to preserve the secrecy so essential for the success of military operations as long as the consuls of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey still remain in Salonica?"

JOHNSON AND BROWN

Johnson and Brown, in pursuit of frivolity
Strolled by the sea on their weekly half holiday,
Smoking cigars of a "guaranteed" quality,
Handsome young fellows were Johnson and Brown.

Johnson and Brown, in search of hilarity,
Stopped where some pierrots of great popularity
Sang in support of the local war charity—
"This is worth hearing," said Johnson and Brown.

Item, a dance of the ragtime variety,
Item, a song re papa's sobriety,
Item, a speech from young Sergeant Moriarity—
"Rather uncommon," said Johnson and Brown.

Hardly a speech, but its merit was brevity;
Bandage and crutch proved the speaker's sincerity,
Banished all laughter and gone was all levity—
Somewhat uneasy were Johnson and Brown.

He would go back, but he'd lost his agility—
Who'd take his place? "Sure there's some possibility
Here in this crowd of a man of utility"—
"Toss for it, Johnson! What say you!" said Brown.

Johnson said "Head" with some impetuosity;
Up spun the coin with unwonted velocity.
"Head" was the verdict amid much verbosity—
"So you're a soldier!" said Johnson to Brown.

Brown stood astounded at Johnson's duplicity,
Silent a moment, then smiled with felicity,
Calmly accepting the role of simplicity—
"Yes, I am in for it, Johnson," said Brown.

Brown in his khaki showed great perspicacity,
Brown has been mentioned for deeds of audacity,
Brown wears a cross, a reward for tenacity—
Folks will keep talking to Johnson of Brown.

Johnson's enlisted—a post of obscurity—
Better than shirking at home in security.
Brown's gallant feat will resound to futurity—
Who won the toss, sonny—Johnson or Brown?

LUNGS OF A BATTLESHIP

Ventilation One of the Worst Problems of Britain's Defenders

One of the most difficult problems in building a modern battleship is to secure satisfactory ventilation. She is such a complicated creature, made up of so many steel boxes, large and small, for the accommodation of officers, men, coal, ammunition, and stores; dotted here and there with so many steel ladders, automatic lifts, steel bulkheads, and watertight doors, varied here and there by miles of electric wires belonging to lights telephones, bells, and motors, to say nothing of the endless mileage of pipes for flooding, draining, pumping, fresh water, fresh air or compressed air, and speaking tubes.

First in importance comes the ventilating of the boiler and engine rooms. When you begin away in the bowels of the ship at a temperature of 120 degrees; when, too, you commence to realize that unless the furnaces receive their required draught the speed of the battleship drops to below that of her sisters in the squadron, you appreciate the importance of the steam-driven fans to the furnaces and boiler rooms. The supply of air comes down through large water-tight trunks which are continued right up to the weather deck, armored gratings being provided at the protective deck.

WORDS OF WISDOM

Flash. Thoughts of Famous People Put Into Words

Make one penny do the work of two.—Mrs. Pankhurst.

With the will to conquer, we are certain of victory.—M. Poincare.

Do not let doubt creep into your mind . . . the essential condition of victory is patience.—M. Paul Cambon.

We recognize that this is a big business, and no time for talking.—General Sam Hughes.

All the easy talk of peace is but froth upon the water when such a storm as this is raging.—Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

Men and women must do all things in proportion. They must be natural as well as national.—Bishop of Birmingham.

The secret of Germany's strength, wealth, and efficiency may be summed up in a single word: discipline. —Mr. J. Ellis Barker.

The moment has come when, so far as personal expenditure is concerned, it has become a virtue to be stingy.—Mr. Herbert Samuel.

A wholesome, good comic song very often helps a great deal in the cure of our wounded soldiers—quite as much as a hymn.—The Bishop of London.

For us, high or low, to whatever profession we belong, there must be no holidays till the great task is finally accomplished. — Mr. Walter Long.

The true victory will not lie so much in the tactical gains on the battlefield to-day as in the quality of the men who have to carry on the work of the nation after the war is over.—General Sir Robert Baden-Powell.

PERFECT EYESIGHT AGAIN

What it means to struggle along for years handicapped by failing eyesight, when the eyes refuse to act as they once did, things lose their clear outline to you, letters run together in a jumbled mass when reading, and perhaps you hardly understand the reason, or hate to admit a weakness of vision, and then to have that eyesight made perfect as it was in your youth, can only be understood in its fullest sense by those who wear Fowler's Pebio Glasses. The relief is a source of endless delight.

A BIG TIME AT THE SHELTER

The Nineteen Children There Were Remembered on Christmas Day

Thanks to the generosity of the citizens of Peterborough the nineteen children in the Children's Aid Society had a royal time on Christmas Day. In addition to many packages of toys, books, candy, fruit, etc., $33 in cash was subscribed and the result was many useful and appreciative gifts for the little waifs who had the time of their lives on Saturday. Superintendent Henry had arranged a big Christmas tree and after a monster holiday dinner had been partaken of the gifts were given out to the youngsters.

The Children's Aid Society wish to express their hearty thanks to the many kind friends who helped in making Christmas a memorable occasion for the little folks.

Conscription Foreshadowed In Britain

SINGLE MEN WILL BE FORCED TO ENLIST

Britain Will Introduce A Modified Form Of Conscription

Bill Will Be Submitted To The Commons Next Week---The Greatest Parliamentary Battles in Many Decades is Foreshadowed in To-day's Announcement---Cabinet Will Meet Again To-morrow.

RESIGNATIONS RUMOURED

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Conscription in modified form is to be brought into effect in Britain. The Bill will be introduced in the Commons next week. Unmarried men are likely to be forced to enlist. It is reported that Reginald McKenna and Walter Runciman have resigned.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The greatest parliamentary battle in many decades was foreshadowed to-day by the authoritative announcement that the Government intends to introduce next week a Bill providing for conscription of single men.

Lines were being drawn to-day An informal conference of Labour members of the Commons now in London was called. Trades union heads, who early in the war denounced conscription, were exchanging messages. Before Parliament meets to hear from Premier Asquith, the Labour party may make known its decision on compulsory service.

Some hope is expressed by conscription leaders that the Labourites will not stolidly oppose the modified form of conscription understood to be planned by the Government.

The solid opposition of the Irish party, if Ireland is included in the conscription, is expected.

In many quarters it was reported to-day that the Government will exclude Ireland to escape the antagonism of John Redmond and other Irish leaders. At the same time such a course is bound to draw vitriolic attacks from other members.

The Cabinet will meet again to-morrow.

Suspect Monkey of Killing Girl

Paris Police Investigating a Case Similar to Poe's Rue Morgue Murder

PARIS, December 29.—The murders in the Rue Morgue, as depicted by Edgar Allan Poe, are having their counterpart in real life at Clermont-Ferrand during the unravelling of the mystery surrounding the death by violence last August of Mlle. Marie Christophle, a young woman belonging to one of the wealthiest families of the place. The police have been investigating a report that the girl was slain by a monkey.

During the night on which Marie Christophle met her death a fire occurred in her home. Neighbors rushed in and found her dead. Various theories were put forward as to the cause of death, and the Christophle family offered a large reward for the capture of the person or persons who killed her. Last October the inquiries by the police led to the arrest of the girl's brother, Jean Christophel, and her mother, Mme. Marguerite Christophel, who were alleged to have had a hand in her death. Recently reports became current in Clermont-Ferrand that a monkey had gained entrance to Marie Christophle's chamber and had killed her. As a result the police searched the town. They found five of the animals out an alibi has been established for each.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is sluggish, and bowels torpid, and you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail to do their work, then Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the best in the world. They are worthy of trial, and also quite beneficial to the bowels. MURDERED CABIN MATE AT LANGLEY

VANCOUVER, Dec. 29.—In the arrest and confession to-day of Rocco Ferrante that he had killed a countryman named Nick Cocaci at Langley, 30 miles from Vancouver, the police believe they will very shortly fanthom the mystery of the tragedy of the killing last April of Jesse Magoun, an electrical engineer. Last night, Ferrante, an Italian shot and beheaded Cocaci, his cabinmate. This afternoon as he was crossing the international line, Ferrante was arrested, and, on being questioned regarding a bloodstained knife in his pocket, confessed to the killing of Cocaci.

To-night Ferrante declined to discuss the shooting of Magoun, which occurred last April. Margoun's fellow-workmen at the B.C. electric sub-station at Langley smelled smoke and, on breaking into his room, found him dead and his naked body lying on the bed. Ferrante was accused of the murder, the theory of the police being that he was jealous of the favors of a school teacher whom he thought was too friendly with Magoun. At the assize a few weeks ago, Ferrante was acquitted. In the light of to-day's crime there appears no doubt but that Ferrante shot Magoun and probably blamed Cocaci for getting him into trouble.

Found Head in Well.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 29.—The head of Nick Cocaci, who it is alleged was murdered near Sumas, was found in a well at the rear of the shack in which the victim and Rocco Ferrante lived. An inquest was held, and it was expected Ferrante would be taken to New Westminster some time before morning. That Ferrante had confessed to the crime was stated in police circles to-night. According to a statement made by him he attacked Cocaci with a knife which has a blade nearly a foot long. With this he slashed his victim's throat and then cut off the head which he wrapped up in a cloth and flung into the well.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter to-day than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feeling make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine", simply a highly concentrated oil-food, free from harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood, it gives fat to lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes.

A NUMBER OF VESSELS LOST

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Dec. 29. —A number of vessels of neutral countries were sunk by mines or lost in a heavy gale in the last twenty-four hours. The Dutch trawler "Erin" was blown up by a mine. Three of the crew were killed, three wounded and eight rescued. Norwegian steamer Hernelen sunk north of Bergen with a loss of one life. The wreckage from the Norwegian steamer Heldrum and a body, about which was strapped one of the Heldrum's life belts, was washed ashore at Mullion, England.

EIGHT SCOTTISH STARS GIVE THEIR LIVES.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The number of Scottish League football players killed in the war has been increased to eight this week by Robert Milligan, of Clyde, falling in action.

The other players who have been killed in action are:

Houston (Partick Thistle), Armstrong (St. Mirren), Speedie and Gracie (Hearts), Herbertson and Bellringer (Ayr United), and E. Garvie (Queen's Park).

Peterborough Scots football followers will easily recognize these names, more especially those of Speedie, Gracie, Armstrong, Houston, and the latest hero, Milligan.

Overloading The Stomach

Causes Incomplete Digestion, Weakens The System, and Breeds Dyspepsia

TRIAL PACKAGE OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS FREE.

Gluttony is no vice a sin as drunkenness and its evil results are more terrible, and far more rapid. The human system turns into the stomach and the alimentary canal from 7 to 15 pounds of digestive fluid every twenty four hours. Cram your stomach with food and you exhaust these juices. If your stomach cannot digest the food because it lacks juices to do it with, you should either eat less or make more gastric fluids.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain ingredients each grain of which will digest 3,000 grains of food. With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in your stomach the evil effects of over eating are removed, for these little tablets when dissolved attach to the food and digest all the food from it. They won't abandon the stomach and leave a mass of decaying unassimilated food to putrify and irritate the tenderest membranes. They store up nourishing properties of gastric fluid, help the intestines, enrich the blood, prevent constipation, and gluttony, while sinful, may yet be made less harmful by the use of these tablets.

Every druggist carries them in stock; price 50 cents per box, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package free by mail. Address, F. A. Stuart Co., 256 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Presentation An Address To The Rev. Father Fitzpatrick

Retiring Pastor Was Presented With a Leather Club Bag—Ennismore Schools Held a Christmas Concert

On Wednesday evening last, the Ennismore schools held a very successful Christmas concert. Each school was represented on the programme and the children throughout performed so well that the greatest credit is due to the teachers who took such pains training them.

The most interesting feature of the evening was an address to Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and the presentation of a beautiful leather club bag. Towards the end of the very interesting programme, Mr. Claire Moloney, who ably filled the chair during the evening, called upon Father Fitzpatrick to come up on to the platform. Miss Gladys Kennedy stepped forward and in a very clear voice read the address. A boy representing each school lined up on the stage, and Francis Crough made the presentation.

Father Fitzpatrick was taken wholly by surprise and at first found it rather difficult to reply, as he said himself it was no easy matter to tear yourself away from children in whom you had had such a keen interest. However, in his usual clear, forcible style, he briefly reviewed his work in Ennismore in connection with the schools and thanked the parents and pupils for their co-operation with him in his efforts to further education.

A very pleasant evening came to a close at about ten thirty. The people had thoroughly enjoyed the concert, yet returned to their homes with sorrow in their hearts as they fully realized the loss they were sustaining by the departure of such a beloved pastor.

The Address.

The address was as follows:

Reverend M. F. Fitzpatrick,
Ennismore, Ont.

Reverend and Dear Father,—It was with feelings of the deepest and most sincere regret that we learned you were about to take your departure from our midst.

The fourteen years you have been with us—years that for us have been filled with the blessed sunshine of your presence; years in which you have established yourself in our hearts in such a way that your approaching farewell fills those hearts with inexpressible sorrow.

During your stay with us, your never failing devotion to your clerical duties and your noble self-sacrifice wherever the spiritual interest of your flock was concerned has won our respect and admiration; your wholesouled generosity to the poor and needy has edified us beyond measure, your kindness, thoughtfulness and tenderness to those in affliction have endeared you to each parishioner; your great interest in educational matters has proved an everlasting blessing to the community.

In few rural districts are such educational advantages enjoyed as in this fair little township. The schools throughout have been a credit and to a great extent the success has been due to you, for in your frequent visits among them your words of encouragement and sound advice always stimulated the interest of the pupils and produced more diligent work. The duties of the teachers, too, were made easier, since they always felt that in you they had a staunch friend, and one who would ever lend a sympathetic ear to their troubles. The continuation school which you have established will always shine forth as a glorious memorial of your work in Ennismore, for by it you have been instrumental in exalting the lives of many. Needless to say the parents, pupils and ex-pupils, who have taken their place out in the world and are a credit to you, feel they owe you a debt of gratitude that can never be repaid. In short, you have not only been a model spiritual guide, our Boggarth Aroon, but you have also been the kindliest of temporal benefactors. Though henceforth you shall not be with us in person, yet the cherished memory of such a saintly pastor will always dwell in our hearts and be a lasting power to guide us over the rugged pathways of life which have so often been smoothed by your tender solicitude. Your far-reaching influence will serve as a pilot to guide us to the blessed haven where partings are no more.

May your life in your new field of labour be filled with the richest spiritual blessings of the Divine Master, to whose service you have devoted your life; may health and happiness crown your future with temporal welfare; and may you be long spared to labour in the Master's vineyard in the blessed mission of leading souls to God.

When we try to realize all you have done for us, words seem inadequate to express our appreciation, but be assured, dear Father, that our hearts overflow with gratitude, and in our daily prayers we will always remember you as your good deeds and kindness to us has been painted in our memory in colours that time cannot fade.

Although we are deeply grieved to have you leave us, yet we feel it would be selfishness on your part to even desire that you should remain, since God has need of you for a greater work and in His goodness has seen fit to crown your labours in His ministry by calling you to take charge of such an excellent parish.

As a slight token of appreciation of the kindly interest and sympathetic feeling you have manifested towards us we ask you to accept the accompanying gift.

(Signed) The Teachers and Pupils of the Ennismore Schools.

We Thank You

WE thank OUR FRIENDS and CUSTOMERS for the Confidence placed in us during the year of 1915.

We solicit a continuance of your kind patronage in the coming year and take this opportunity of wishing all HEALTH and HAPPINESS during 1916.

Woman Had Thirteen Husbands

CHAMPION MARRYING WOMAN LIVED IN EVANSVILLE, INDIANA.

If a woman really loved her first husband—or rather if it was the general opinion that she did—in the days of our grandmothers, and married again, no matter how young a widow she might be, it was the cause for biting criticism. For our grandfolk argued that love came only once in a lifetime. Strangely enough, they did not apply this logic to man.

Not so to-day.

The champion marrying woman of America, who died last month at Evansville, Ind., bears this out. She was Miss Polly Anne Wood Strodes. Lillian Russell was a novice alongside her, for Mrs. Strodes had thirteen husbands and was preparing to marry the fourteenth as soon as she had gained a legal separation from Harrison Strodes.

The ties that bind are ties in vain.

PRUSSIAN PRESS MUST BE GOOD

Minister of Interior Assumes Editorship of All Papers, and "Subs" Take His Orders.

BERNE, Dec. 24.— In a recent despatch received in Switzerland the text of a confidential circular issued by the Prussian Minister of the Interior to local authorities instructing them to exercise effective supervision over the newspapers of their districts was quoted. Copies of other confidential orders given by the same Minister which fell into the hands of German socialists have also reached Switzerland, and their contents show how much pressure is exerted in Germany to compel the newspapers to express the opinions dictated to them by the governments in Berlin.

In September, 1915, the Prussian Minister of the Interior, Herr von Loebell, sent new instructions to all local authorities, directing them to "persuade" the proprietors of provincial newspapers to subscribe to the Central Bureau for the German Press, an agency founded by and conducted under the direct control of the Ministry of the Interior. The subscription to this Press agency is nominal, amounting to $10 a year, payable in monthly instalments. Local authorities were specially requested in this circular to bring about the publication of all articles and news of the Central Bureau which are marked with a star, the sign that the government attaches unusual importance to their appearance in as many papers as possible.

During the last three months, in consequence of these orders from Berlin, local authorities in all parts of Prussia have been extremely active in "persuading" editors to print articles and news despatches supplied by the Central Bureau. A local paper at Bromberg, West Prussia, received from the district censor this official communication:

"Herewith you are requested to send me in writing an unconditional promise to subscribe immediately to the Central Bureau for the German Press, and to publish such articles as are recommended to you by Imperial or Prussian authorities without any curtailment or alteration within twenty-four hours of receiving them at your office. It is necessary that I should have this written pledge within twenty-four hours from now."

When the proprietors of this paper appealed to the supreme local functionary, the Regierungspraesident, to interfere on their behalf and to prohibit coercive measures of this kind, all the satisfaction they obtained was a warning that they must obey, otherwise their journal would be suppressed for the duration of the war. The Regierungspraesident added that instructions received from the Ministry of the Interior justified him in adopting this attitude.

"With a view to supplying the local press with reliable news, copies of everything supplied by the Central Bureau for the German press will be sent to all newspapers, and you are urgently requested to publish every word emanating from this source. Such particles as are marked with a star must be printed. In consequence of orders received from the highest quarters it will be necessary for us to take punitive measures against those papers which refuse to publish the articles and news of the Central Bureau."

When this case an appeal was lodged with a still higher official, the Vice-President, who replied that the instructions given by the censorship authorities were legally valid under martial law, and also reasonable, so that they must be obeyed without hesitation.

Most Eminent Medical Authorities Endorse It.

Dr. Eberle and Dr. Braithwaite as well as Dr. Simon—all distinguished authors—agree that whatever may be the disease, the urine seldom fails in furnishing us with a clue to the principles upon which it is to be treated, and accurate knowledge concerning the nature of disease can thus be obtained. If backache, scalding urine or frequent urination bother or distress you, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, gout or sciatica or you suspect kidney or bladder trouble just write Dr. Pierce at the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y.; send a sample of urine and describe symptoms. You will receive free medical advice after Dr. Pierce's chemist has examined the urine—this will be carefully done without charge, and you will be under no obligation. Dr. Pierce during many years of experimentation has discovered a new remedy which he finds is thirty-seven times more powerful than lithia in removing uric acid from the system. Bulgaria Tired of Kaiser's War

COST OF GERMAN-CONDUCTED CAMPAIGN AGAINST SERBS SAID TO BE 100,000 MEN.

SALONICA, December 24.—A Greek who has arrived here from Constantinople and Philippopolis gives an account of the conditions in Bulgaria.

Though the Bulgarians, according to the Greek, are pleased with their success in occupying Macedonia, there is a very evident undercurrent of uneasiness among the more intelligent classes of the population, who feel that they have been made the catspaw of Germany in what may yet prove a perilous adventure. Much greater help was expected from the Germans than has been received, and it had been hoped that the price of victory against the Serbs would be limited to about ten thousand casualties. What the actual losses have been is unknown, though Bulgarian rumour places them even as high as the evidently exaggerated figure of 150,000.

The most rigid martial law prevails throughout the whole country. All news of the war except official communiques are repressed. Relatives are not allowed to see their wounded or to receive any news from them. No one is permitted to leave the town without a permit. Bulgarian residents in Philippopolis who want to go to the station, even to meet a friend are unable to do so without a pass. The windows of all the passenger cars are painted over and fastened so that it is impossible to see through them.

Popular opinion realizes its effectiveness against the government, but the impression of the Greek is that the mass of the people regret Bulgaria's entry into the campaign and would be glad to see a chance of making peace. German influence in the country however is omnipotent. German officers are to be seen in the streets of the towns and in considerable numbers at Sofia. The peasants, though fearing to express themselves openly, are emphatic in conversation that they will not fight against the Russians, and if a Russian landing on the banks of the Danube, which the Bulgarians apparently consider likely, were to be made the Mahometan Bulgarians who have now been called on for military service, probably would be the first troops to be sent against them.

The Turkish casualties in the Dardanelles are very high, one estimate placing them at at least 200,000. The Turks maintain their confidence that the Dardanelles cannot be forced, and look forward to the time when they will receive ammunition from Germany and will drive all the Allies off the peninsula.

Decorations for Women.

A decoration exclusive to women is the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. This was founded by Queen Victoria, and is bestowed upon the wives of the Indian Viceroys, upon certain of the native Indian princesses, and very occasionally upon noble women connected with the Viceregal Court. Lady Randolph Churchill is one of the best-known women who have been the recipient of this coveted decoration.

The Order was instituted by Royal Warrant on January 1st, 1878, and the first investiture took place on April 29th following, when twelve ladies in all were decorated amid scenes of pomp and ordered splendor such as had rarely been witnessed in Great Britain.

The insignia of this coveted Order is very beautiful, consisting of the Royal Imperial Cipher, V.R.I., in diamonds, pearls, and turquoises, with an oval ornamental border of pearls, surmounted by the Imperial Crown. The ribbon is of light blue watered silk, edged with white.

Puns on Tombstones.

The punster is irrepressible; he even indites his jokes on tombstones. An epitaph in Waltham Abbey informs us that Sir James Fullerton died "fuller of faith than of fears, fuller of resolutions than of pains, fuller of honor than of days."

There is another of Daniel Tears: "Though strange, yet true, full seventy years was his wife happy in her Tears."

This was written of an organist: "Here lies one blown out of breath, who lived a merry life, and died a Merideth."

Another says: "Here lies Thomas Huddlestone; reader, don't smile, but reflect as this tombstone you view, that Death, who killed him, is a very short while will huddle a stone upon you."

It is a great step in the interpretation of life when we have discovered that all events are ultimately spiritual.—Bulwer.

A Queer Tree.

The sneeze-wood tree is a native of Natal and other parts of South Africa. Its odd name was given to it because one cannot saw it without sneezing violently. The dust of its wood has just the same effect as the strongest snuff, and is so irritating to the nose that workmen are obliged to sneeze even when they are planing it. If a piece of wood of this tree is put in the mouth it is found to have a very bitter taste, and no doubt it is this bitterness which prevents insects of any kind from attacking the timber of the sneeze-wood tree. The fact that insects find it so disagreeable makes its wood very valuable for work that is required to last a long time.

Plenty of Help.

The Militia Department at Ottawa has a vast quantity of work, but it is not short of help. A very large staff is engaged on the casualty and record office work, but the department needs no more help as it is said there are over 1,000 applicants for positions on the waiting lists, mostly young ladies anxious to serve their country in some capacity.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Terribly Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

Mrs. Louis Jos. Martel, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'

A BISHOP'S STORIES.

Dr. G. F. Browne Recalls Episodes of a Long Career.

Because his career has covered such a wide range of interests—university life, fishing, mountaineering, social, court, church life, and politics—and because he possesses that keen sense of humor which has led him to seize upon the lighter side of his work, revelling in anecdote and story, the reminiscences of Dr. G. F. Browne, formerly Bishop of Stepney and Bristol, are the most entertaining ecclesiastical memoirs published in recent years.

He tells with glee, for instance, how one little mite of Stepney, to whom he had spoken, referred to him as "'Im with the tight legs," while when he first went to Stepney, "feeling very queer about my bishop's hat," he was greeted by three factory girls in feathers, one of whom, with a well-acted air of having been struck dumb, exclaimed in a tone of sympathetic admiration, "Oh, my boy, what a lovely 'at!"

His Mother-in-Law's Rebuke.

A keen fisherman, Dr. Browne frankly tells how the pursuit of salmon once led to friction with his mother-in-law. For hours he had tried to catch a "perfect fiend," and his mother-in-law, who was, "with all her charms, of an imperious nature," met him as he entered the house after eleven at night.

She had sent my wife off to bed, and, stamping in her wrath, finished me off, very staccato, with, "Why—didn't you—cut—the string—and let—the wretched—thing—go?"

King Edward's Story.

Talking of his Cambridge days, Dr. Browne says that the rough-and-ready joke and repartee was worth many votes at the county elections. One year the Lord Royston of those days, who was an undergraduate, was the candidate for the county.

"He was supposed," says Dr. Browne, "to have got into not quite the right kind of difficulty over a horse—say, Orinoco, for want of a more correct name. In the middle of his speech an opposition farmer shouted out, "'Ow about Orinoco, my lord?' 'All right,' was the reply; 'wait till I have finished and I will tell you.'"

At the finish of the speech the man who wanted to know about Orinoco was pushed to the front looking very hot and silly.

"You want to know about Orinoco?" "I do, my lord." "Well, it's like this—Orinoco's a hoss and you're a hass!" The roar of laughter with which this sally was received rings in my ears still. It was scandalously audacious, ludicrously unfair, and it took just because it was.

I once told this story to King Edward, an old friend of Lord Royston, at Biarritz. He laughed heartily, and told an excellent story in reply, as he always could do. A certain peer, who had just succeeded an excellent father, and was not a man of careful life, was making a speech on some local public occasion. He had had a little too much, shall we say, cider. He told his audience he hoped to walk in his father's footsteps. "You'd better learn to stand steady in your own, my lord!"

Warned.

May—Maud, dear, did you know that the last legislature passed a law punishing kidnaping very severely? Maud—No. But what of it? May—Well, if you aren't careful Cholly Softleigh's relatives may cause you trouble.

A Long Drink.

Extract from a sentimental letter: "Last night I sat in a gondola on Venice's grand canal, drinking it all in, and life never seemed so full before."—London Mail.

If we desire the flowers of paradise we must sow the seeds.

FLEETEST OF ALL DOGS.

Greyhounds Can Run as Fast as Carrier Pigeons.

Comparatively few persons realize what remarkable speed dogs are capable. The wolf can run between fifty and sixty miles in one night, and the arctic fox can do quite as well, if not better. Nansen met one of these foxes on the ice at a point more than seventy miles northwest of the Samoiloew territory, which is 400 miles from the Asiatic coast. Maimo and Siberian dogs can travel forty-five miles on the ice in five hours, and there is one case on record in which a team of Eskimo dogs traveled six and one-half miles in twenty-eight minutes.

English setters and pointers beat at the rate of eighteen to nineteen an hour, and they can maintain the speed for at least two hours. Fox-hounds are extraordinarily swift, as is proved by the fact that a dog of this breed once beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in six and one-half minutes. Greyhounds are the swiftest of all four footed creatures, and their speed may be regarded as equal to that of carrier pigeons. English greyhounds which are carefully selected and which are used for coursing are able to cover at full gallop a space between eighteen and twenty-three yards every second. It is said that a hare at its greatest speed never goes faster than at the rate of eighteen yards a second. These interesting statistics fully prove the right of the greyhounds to rank as the swiftest of the quadrupeds.

Natural Age of Man.

The question as to what is the natural age of man is by no means settled, of course, but many are of the opinion that the Frenchman Flourens was not far out of the way in his estimate of the time a man should live. Taking his observations from the group mammalia, of the class vertebrata, as having the closest resemblance to man and such species as are permitted to live the full term of their natural life under circumstances not admitting of error or doubt, Flourens found that their natural life extended to about five times the period of their lives from birth up to maturity. Applying the rule thus obtained to human life, and taking the age at which the body is fully matured to be twenty years, he concluded the natural duration of the life of man to be 100 years.

Something Saved.

"What success did you have raising chickens?"

"Very little. Some escaped, thieves stole others and a large number died of a mysterious disease."

"That was tough luck."

"However, I beat the jinx to the last one."

"How was that?"

"Before anything could happen to it I had it killed and put in a pie."

Many Species of Banana.

The banana as a substitute for the potato would have one drawback. It has been found that those who live mainly upon this article of diet soon tend to become what is politely called "tubby." The banana with which we are all familiar is only one of many useful species. Cochin China produces a single fruit that is an ample meal for three men, and in East Africa an intoxicating drink is made from the native bananas.—London Chronicle.

The Reason.

"The first year of married life is always the most troublesome. After a couple passes that safely the great danger of separation is over."

"Why do you say that?"

Tearing Sounds.

The ear can be trained to accustom itself to the sound of the tearing of various materials. The noise accompanying the tearing of cotton is unlike that of linen. The warp has its voice and the filling quite another, the former being shrill, while the latter is apt to be dull.

These Dear Girls.

Alice (just engaged)—What do you think Jack said to me last night? That if he had to choose either me or $10,000 he wouldn't look at the money. Marie—Dear, loyal fellow! Wouldn't like to risk the temptation, I suppose.—Boston Transcript.

Curiosity.

Gladys—Why are you going to all that trouble to open that letter so carefully, Maud? Maud—Oh, I had a quarrel with George and intended to send his letter back unopened, but I just thought I would see what he said before I returned it.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE BEGINNING OF A LONG JOURNEY.

By GEORGE HERBERT BOHN.

A few years ago I was obliged to connect between two railroads by stage-coach. I had been doing some hard traveling, was tired out, and my nerves were generally unstrung. The only other passengers in the coach were an old gentleman and a young lady whom I presumed to be his daughter. They occupied the back seat and I the front. There was no middle seat. Indeed, the coach was a small, shabby affair, a ghost of the solid, imposing vehicle in which our ancestors used to ride. Both windows were up, and, thinking to improve the air, which seemed to me to be very stuffy, I let down the one next to which I was sitting. The young lady sat directly opposite me and when I lowered the window cast an apprehensive glance at her father, another at me, then coolly put the window back in its place.

Had she been a man there would have been an explosion then and there. As it was, I set my lips together, breathed hard and racked my brain for a gentlemanly means of crushing her. At last, finding what I considered a honeyed thunderbolt, I launched it.

"Madam," I began icily, "did you"—

"Beg your pardon, sir, but I am not madam."

This took away something of the steel cold sharpness of what I had to say, for I couldn't begin with "Miss;" it would sound ridiculous.

"I assure you," I began again, "that whether you are miss or madam makes no difference whatsoever in this instance. I was about to say"—

"It makes some difference to me whether or no I am addressed properly."

I whited a few moments.

"Had you," I began a third time, "said to me, 'May I ask you to allow the window to remain closed, my father being delicate and I fearing a draft for him?' I would certainly"—

"Had you said, 'Do you object to my lowering the window?' I would have had an opportunity to tell you whether I wished it open or closed. You took it upon yourself to lower it, and I therefore took it upon myself to close it."

"Technically you are right, really wrong. With a stuffy atmosphere like this it is to be presumed that you would prefer at least one open window. Common politeness compelled me to lower it."

"And common protection of my right to be consulted in the matter compelled me to raise it."

I knew in my heart that I was wrong, but when the nerves are the mainspring of one's acts one gets deeper into the mire.

"I have supposed," I replied after some silence, "that a woman's strength is in her weakness. Granting your right to be consulted—and I concede you this right as one of the softer sex"—I put an unnecessary inflection on the word "softer"—"as to granting this right, I say, would it not have been more effective with a gentleman to have"—

"With a gentleman, yes."

"You must excuse me," I retorted hotly, "from further discussion with one who forgets"—

At this point something occurred to stop my speech—something that filled me with astonishment. The old gentleman, who had been paying no attention to our tilting, took an orange out of his pocket, tore off a large piece of the rind, and threw it out of the closed window. It went right through the glass without sound or resistance. I put my hand where I had supposed the pane to be, and there was no pane there.

Ordinarily I should have laughed too. But in addition to a headache and strained nerves I had placed myself in a false position and about nothing.

"Did you know there was no glass there?" I asked in the same cold tone as before.

"From the first."

"Then your fear of a draft upon your father"—

"This gentleman is not my father, nor is he with me. I don't think he has understood what we have been talking about. I heard him speaking German with the driver. You acted without consulting him or me, so I concluded to"—

"Teach me politeness."

By way of reply she took up a lunch box and, opening it, handed me a chicken sandwich. I took it and several more, following them up with other eatables. Then I took out my flask and washed the whole down with a stiff horn. I was about to take out my cigar case when I stopped suddenly.

"Do you object to smoke?" I asked politely.

"Nor that confounded old fellow beside you?"

"I can't tell, not speaking his language. But since he is a German I presume he doesn't. Besides, there is plenty of fresh air coming in through the closed window."

Whether it was the lunch or the mellow corn juice or a pair of dimples I now noticed flanking the girl's smile, the rest of the journey was as delightful as its beginning had been unpleasant. Indeed, it has never ended. That girl and I are traveling on through life in company.

ACTION OF PEROXIDE.

It Cleanses a Wound, but Does Not Aid in the Healing Process.

"It would be well for people to understand what peroxide of hydrogen will do and what it will not do," remarked a dentist just after extracting two old roots on which a large abscess had formed. "It is one of the best, if not the very best, antiseptics we have, but it has no healing qualities. Many people imagine that it will heal a sore place in the mouth, yet that is just what it will not do.

"I have just injected peroxide and water into the cavities in the gums from which I extracted those roots. I did that to destroy the pus that had been left behind by the abscess, for that is the use of peroxide. It unites chemically with the pus and kills the germs that make it. But this is all that it does. And if you continue to use it you will retard the healing instead of hastening it. Peroxide, improperly used, has injured almost as many mouths as it has benefited. The sore place in your mouth is clean now, and all it needs is something to keep it clean while nature heals it. Peroxide will not do that—in fact, it will retard it."

The dentist then prescribed a healing wash. There are many such on the market, but any one having a tooth pulled is foolish to select his own.

The First Canal Builder.

General Goethals is the latest canal builder to achieve fame, but he has had many predecessors, and the earliest so far as is known was one Naram-Sin, who nearly 5,000 years ago opened a canal from Nippur to the Euphrates. This was discovered by Dr. George A. Barton in deciphering some of the ancient Sumerian tablets at the museum of the University of Pennsylvania. He found a tablet dated "the year when the divine Naram-Sin opened the mouth of the canal Erin at Nippur." This was not an Irish canal, so far as is known, but it was a great event in the history of Nippur, which gave it transportation facilities with the rest of the world. Naram-Sin was a king of Babylonia, and he is responsible only for financing the canal, and slaves probably did the work.

Getting in Trim.

"You're going to the gymnasium pretty regular now, aren't you?"

"Yes. Bill Hawkins called me a liar three months ago, and in about three months more I'll be ready to tell him he's another."

Bull Fight Whistles.

Nearly every spectator at a Spanish bullfight carries a whistle, which he blows if he considers a toreador to have broken any of the rules of the "game."

Enforced Truthfulness.

Blobbs—Wigwag is the most truthful man I know. Slobbs—Yes. Wigwag has such a bad memory he has to stick to the truth.

BIG GUNS OF A CENTURY AGO

The Turks Used Cannon That Fired Great Granite Bowlders.

It would scarcely appear feasible that a shot weighing 800 pounds could have been employed a century ago, yet the Turks, who used the largest cannon in Europe, actually used guns of such caliber at that time.

When Sir J. Duckworth passed the Dardanelles to attack Constantinople in 1807 his fleet was dreadfully shattered by the immense shot thrown from the batteries. The Royal George of 110 guns, was nearly sunk by only one shot, while another cut the main mast of the Windsor Castle almost in two, a single shot knocked two ports of the Thunderer into one; the Repulse (seventy-four guns) had her wheel shot away and twenty-four men killed and wounded by a shot, the ship being saved only by the most wonderful exertions.

The heaviest shot which struck the British ships was of granite, weighing 800 pounds, and was twenty-six inches in diameter. One such shot, to the astonishment of the Turks, stove in the whole starboard bow of the Active and, having crushed this immense mass of timber, the shot rolled ponderously aft, the crew standing aghast at this singular spectacle.

One of these guns was cast in brass it was composed of two parts, its breech resting against massive stone work, and the difficulty of charging such a monster would not allow of its being fired more than once.—Dundee Advertiser.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

CRABS IN FULL DRESS.

Some Species Are Fond of Finery and Clothe Themselves Carefully.

Many of the crab species of shellfish clothe themselves. Some species dress elaborately by taking small pieces of different colored weeds and sticking them on the shell, so as to look like a stone covered with weed. They spend hours, with the utmost perseverance, in making these pieces adhere, by trying the same piece over and over again till they succeed. They have a fine sense of symmetry and always put a red piece on one limb to match the red piece they have put on the other, and a green piece to match a green piece, though how they know red from green in the dark pools where they live is hard to say, unless it is by taste or smell. When once their dress is completed it improves the older it becomes, as the weed actually grows on them.

Another species, with like habits and a most decided love for finery, was described at a meeting of the Linnaean society, as clothing themselves with bits of bright colored seaweed, sponges, and so forth. If the crab be despoiled of its garments it at once proceeds to clothe itself again with care and deliberation, manifested not only in the selection of its articles of apparel, but in the proper shaping of them by means of its pincers.—London Spectator.

The Attorney in England.

The use of the word attorney denotes a belated mind. Since Nov. 1, 1875, attorneys have ceased to exist, their title merged by law into that of solicitor of the supreme court of judicature, says a writer in the London Mail. The name had long been used as a term of abuse. Johnson observed of an acquaintance that "he did not care to speak ill of any man behind his back, but he believed the gentleman was an attorney."

Archbishop Trench in 1859 noted that the word attorney was going out of favor and that the lower branch of the legal profession preferred to be called solicitors. So when the judicature act of 1873 was before parliament a clause was inserted abolishing the obsolescent title. But with our delightful conservatism we still honor the "attorney general."

Knocking on Wood.

"Knock on wood" is one of the most antique expressions in use today instead of being modern slang, according to Professor William F. Bade. The expression dates from a custom in vogue 5,000 years ago, when wood was regarded as the antipathy of evil geniuses. Metals were regarded as tabooed by certain spirits, and if a man handled these metals he immediately touched wood to appease the spirits. Ancient records show that King Solomon's temple was built with wooden tools and implements made of precious metals, for iron was tabooed and would have polluted the temple.—Exchange.

A PEEP INTO SPACE

Can the Finite Mind of Man Measure the Universe?

THE LIMITS OF THE VISIBLE.

Science Says the Bounds of the Stellar System Are Definable and That the Universe is as an Island of Stars in an Infinite Ocean of Ether.

To the visible universe there are attainable limits. It may be that the greatest telescopes have not yet reached the bottom, or the boundaries, of the entire system, but they have almost done so.

This is shown by the thinning out of the farther stars. These stars, as a whole, are the most distant, and if they were unlimited numerically every increase in the penetrating power of telescopes would bring previously unseen ones into view, in proportionately undiminished numbers.

As a fact, however, there is a rapid falling off in the proportionate numbers at great distances. This is shown by Kapteyn's "law of star density." Taking the "parsec" as the unit of measurement (a parsec is equal to nineteen million million miles), the density of the stars at increasing distances comes out as follows: At 0 distance, 1.00; at 80 parsecs, 0.89; at 135 parsecs, 0.80; at 213 parsecs, 0.67; at 340 parsecs, 0.30; at 850 parsecs, 0.15.

This does not mean that the absolute number of stars decreases with increase of distance, but that the ratio of their number to the volume of space occupied decreases in the proportion shown, so that at a distance of 850 parsecs there are only 15 per cent as many stars as there should be if there had been no falling off in relative density.

Various counts and estimates of the actual numbers included within various limiting distances have been made, and these show that the total number of stars in the visible universe is numerable and probably does not exceed a thousand millions at an outside estimate.

The fact that a fairly definite shape or outline has been found for the visible universe is in itself a proof that it is not unlimited in extent. We are virtually certain that it expands around us in such a manner as to assume roughly the form of a flat, irregular disk, the more distant parts or edges of which lie in the plane of the Milky way. It is thus like a floating island of stars in the ocean of space.

Space itself may be infinite, although what we call the universe is not. As to other universes existing beyond the limits of ours and invisible to us, that is purely a speculation, which appears more or less probable according to the manner in which one's mind approaches it.

But, at any rate, there is no positive evidence of the existence of such outer star systems. From time to time one hears suggestions that this or that nebula is an "outside universe," dimly shining to us from its millions of crowded stars across immeasurable tracts of intervening space. But it is far more probable that no nebula or other object visible in the mightiest telescope is unconnected with the universe to which our sun and our earth belong.

As to the continuance of the Creator's work in forming new suns and new planets, of that there can be no question. This work is, in truth, visibly going on before us in the heavens. There is the utmost variety of ages among the stars, just as there is among the human beings in a crowd. If our lives were lengthened so that a year would be but as a second to us we should see the stars around us disappearing and new ones springing into existence, as we see flowers fading and fresh ones blooming in the garden.

To return for a moment to the question of the infinitude of space, it is well known that the human mind cannot conceive a limit to space, for the instant you attempt to fix or imagine such a limit your imagination flies beyond it. You have got to think of an outside as well as of an inside.

And if you fly to another imagined boundary instantly another outside expanse stretches away before you! It is, then, perfectly legitimate to suppose that, while the visible universe is limited, the invisible universe has no bounds. In comparison with that, all that we see, or can ever see, is truly, infinitely less than as a grain of sand to a desert or a drop of water to an ocean.—Garrett P. Serviss in

UNDERSEA CRAFT.

The Strength and the Weakness of the Modern Submarine.

The other advantages claimed for the submarine include comparative invisibility when submerged, coupled with immunity from gunfire while in that condition. It carries a weapon against which no adequate protection has been found. It presents a small and difficult target which itself assailed by torpedo attack. Other elements in its favor are low cost, handiness, seaworthiness in rough weather, comparative immunity from floating mines as well as these laid in very deep water and the possibilities of use as a mine layer.

On the other hand, the submarine is handicapped by many disadvantages and limitations. Its radius of action is small. Its speed is low, about 14 knots on the surface and 10 knots submerged.

The periscope is useless during darkness, and to operate at that time the vessels must themselves come to the surface, thus rendering themselves very vulnerable to the attacks of surface craft. Once the submarine's hull is damaged by gunfire, ramming or otherwise, it is no longer able to submerge, and its usefulness as a war vessel is ended until repairs can be made.

When flying at an elevation of less than 1,000 feet air craft can usually see submarines operating near the surface. —World's Work.

Overworked Runabout.

A writer for a farm magazine says an ordinary runabout can be made to run a circular saw, pump water, haul freight, drive dairy machinery, fill the silo, shred the fodder and crush grain feed. Possibly, but it would have little time in which to run about.

Charge Explained.

Judge—What's your charge against the prisoner? Complainant—Burglary. He stole $5 from me at the station. Judge—But for burglary there must be a breaking. Complainant—Well, your honor, when he took the five he broke me.

Women With Weakness Find New Strength

WHEN THE SUN DIES.

Deadly Havoc the Change Will Enact Upon Our Poor Planet.

"If the sun should go out how long would it be before darkness would appear on the earth?" asks a reader.

Eight minutes, eighteen seconds and five hundred and sixty-six one-thousandths of a second!

At the end of that brief interval of time the blue curtain of day would disappear as if an almighty hand had snatched it off, and the dome of night, spangled with stars, would instantaneously arch the earth. We would be plunged into darkness so quickly that for a moment nothing would be visible. Then the piercing rays of the stars would begin to affect our eyes, and after that, gradually, our immediate surroundings would dimly emerge from the gloom. There would be starlight, but no moonlight, for the moon shines only with reflected sunlight.

At first the disappearance of the light would be the thing most troublesome to us, but as time went on a chill would begin to creep over the sunless earth, and out of the dark and frozen air, all around the globe, a pallid snow would descend, as the atmospheric moisture condensed. When days and weeks had elapsed the awful cold of outer space would chill the atmosphere down to the earth's surface and animal and vegetable life would alike perish in the endless winter of universal night!

SERPENT OF LERNAEA.

Scientific Basis For the Myth of the Many Headed Monster.

A noted surgeon suggests that the story of the many headed serpent of Lernaea, if a myth, is yet a myth with an altogether scientific foundation. The monster was credited with any where from nine to 100 heads, and, according to the legend, if one was cut off another immediately grew in its place. Some averred that each head was replaced by two.

The origin of this serpent, as well as its acts and its final destruction by Hercules, are entirely fanciful, of course, but some recent juggling in biological laboratories seems to show that the ancients may have got their conceptions of its form and being from what they had actually seen. Professor T. H. Morgan, for instance, has cut off the anterior end of an earthworm and excised a piece of the central nerve cord. This left the anterior nerve ends, and a head grew from each.

Dr. Van Dyne recently went much further in the case of a marine planarian, actually developing six heads upon the creature, each with its own eyes and apparently normal in its functions.—Exchange.

Spanish Court Customs.

There is no court in Europe more tenacious of its etiquette—which was inaugurated several hundreds of years ago—than that of Spain. It is said that King Ferdinand VII. once made a minister resign because he had accidentally touched his hand. One of the quaintest ceremonies is the closing of the royal palace gates at Madrid every night. Electric light has been in use in the palace for quite a long while, but nevertheless every evening at 11 o'clock the officiating gentleman in waiting appears, accompanied by several servants, who carry ancient lanterns, to demand a huge key from a higher official to lock the doors of the palace. This is all the more amusing as the huge key does not fit the modern keyholes. The key is then returned to a third official, and every night gentlemen in waiting have to patrol the corridors of the palace, though sufficient guards are about, to watch over the slumbers of their royal master.

Slander.

Slander, sir! You do not know what you are disdaining. I have seen the most respectable persons almost overwhelmed by it. * * * At first a light sound, skimming the earth like a swallow before the storm, very softly (pianissimo) it murmurs and purrs and sows in its course poisoned arrows. It is on somebody's mouth, and softly, softly (piano, piano) it glides slyly into your ear. The evil is done. It is born, it creeps, it walks, and with growing power (rinforzando) it goes from mouth to mouth diabolically. Then, all of a sudden—I can't tell you how—you see Slander straighten up, hiss, swell and grow tall before your very eyes. It springs, stretches its wings, whirls, envelops, seizes, carries off; it flashes lightning; it thunders and becomes a hue and cry, a public crescendo, a universal chorus of hatred and proscription. Who indeed could stop it?—Beaumarchais.

The Internal Nerves

The Nerves Which Drive the Machinery of the Body—the Heart, the Lungs, the Digestive Organs.

You prick your finger and know that it is the nerves which carry the painful sensation to the brain. You move your hand, and realize that the idea of movement started in your mind. But did you ever think that every beat of your heart and every breath of air taken into your lungs is dependent on a constant supply of nerve force?

It is the internal or sympathetic nerves which drive the machinery of the body, and from their derangement or exhausted condition arises weakness of the stomach, feeble action of the heart, or inactivity of liver and bowels.

When nerve force fails every organ of the body becomes more or less deranged. Indigestion, sleeplessness, headaches, irritability and nervousness are some of the first indications. You lose energy and ambition, find your work a drudgery, and grow weak and listless. As time goes on you become more and more helpless, until nervous prostration or collapse bring you to the sick bed, and long months are often necessary for the restoration of the exhausted nervous system.

Even in this extreme condition Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will usually cure if its use is persisted in, but how much wiser it is to heed the warning in the early stages and keep the nerve force at high-water mark.

No restorative has ever proven its worth in so many thousands of cases as has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. What it has done for others it will do for you under similar conditions. By forming new, rich blood it nourishes the starved and depleted nerves back to health and vigor, and thereby overcomes the cause of weakness and diseases of the nerves.

GREEKS HOPE TO GET CONTROL OF CONSTANTINOPLE

Also Dream of an Empire Comprising Other Desirable Cities, Such as Alexandria—Saloniki a Human Hive

SALONIKI, Greece, Dec. 29.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press.)— It is one of the daily lessons of the war in the Balkans that the character of no city or district is so definitely fixed that it cannot be altered almost over night. Few things have become more wearisome to students of Balkan politics than the historical monographs, charts of race migrations, ethnological maps in several colors, (the maps, not the races,) constantly being issued by one Balkan State or another to prove that virtually all the Balkans, as well as a considerable share of the rest of the world, is and has for centuries been inhabited almost exclusively by Greeks, Serbs, Bulgars, or Austrians, as the case may be.

The Greeks are probably the worst offenders, at least in respect of the extent of their claims. According to them, certainly all of the littoral and all of the islands of the Aegean, and probably a very large part of the Eastern Mediterranean basis as well, including by all means Alexandria, should be Greek. To-ward the north more than half of Albania is claimed, and a goodish bit has already been seized; Old Serbia, including even Uskub, Rumelia, out of Bulgaria; and as for Turkey in Europe, the Greeks laugh at the idea that the little that is left of the Western Ottoman Empire should fall to any one but the Greeks, from Kirk-Kilisse and Adrianople to and including Constantinople. For, in the Greek mind, and other dispositions of Constantinople than to place the Mosiem city under Greek rule would be the rankest injustice, under which Greece would never cease to complain—until properly compensated.

In view of the extravagance of these national claims, it is most interesting to watch the change worked in Saloniki in the course of comparatively few weeks since the Allied troops have begun to land there. It is true that Greeks, also, have poured in in even greater numbers than the allies; but the original population stood at about 160,000 inhabitants, of which number 80,000 are Jews of Portugese and Spanish decent, still speaking a sort of bastard Spanish, in which several newspapers are printed, though strangely enough the Hebrew characters are employed to spell out these Iberian words. Next in number came the Greeks themselves, totaling, with officials, garrison, and everything, only 40,000 or less, while the Turks ran them a close second with between 30,000 and 40,000.

The remaining population of normal times was that cosmopolitan mixture so characteristic of every port, but especially of a port like Saloniki or Rotterdam, where the territory served by the port and the port itself are in different countries. Here, however, instead of simply having one other country as hinterland, as Rotterdam has Germany, Saloniki has two: Serbia and Bulgaria. There were always, therefore, many Serbs and not a few Bulgars to be found in Saloniki. For the same reason Austrians were frequent in normal times, though less so since the war has cut Austria-Hungary off from Saloniki as a port of outlet.

To a population so divided, there was first suddenly added about 200,000 Greek, Macedonian, and Thracian refugees—more than double the normal population of the city itself. A new city was built in the shape of brick barracks out at the edge of town, where the refugees are housed in the almost squalor and the most incredible conditions of crowding. Naturally, they prefer to spend most of their time trying to pick up a few pennies around the streets of the city to sitting idle in the stench and filth of the barracks all day.

Scarcely had the population of Saloniki in a way disposed of this sudden influx of strangers when the Greek mobilization was ordered, and soldiers from all over Greece began to arrive at the appointed trysting place—none other than Saloniki. Following the last two Balkan wars Greece has increased her population by territorial acquisitions, over 50 per cent. It is doubtful if even the Greeks quite realize what this increase would mean in the shape of the increased number of troops mobilized. In a few weeks—almost in a few days—the population of Saloniki, which has been first 160,000 then 260,000, suddenly became 700,000. As many as possible of the new-comers were quartered on the inhabitants of the city; the remainder erected a tent city at the edge of the town; but all spent their time in the narrow, ill-paved streets of Saloniki, which began to resemble a county seat during fair week.

And then, out of a clear sky, French and British troops began to join the throng. At first the number was small; now it has passed a hundred thousand. It is true that most of these have gone on up into Serbia, but all the necessary commissary service must be directed from Saloniki; all the work of debarking not only the newly arrived troops, but the supplies, must be handled there, and in duplicate, for the British have their own machinery to do it, and quite distinct from the French.

Naturally, there simply were not enough shops in which to bake the bread necessary for so great an increase of population—much less was there enough wheat from which to bake it. The same was true of every other commodity necessary to life—and still is. Serbs, refugees from their war-ridden country, began to arrive in such great numbers, that the Greek Government suspended the railway service wth Monastir, trying to prevent this last peaceable invasion. Nevertheless, some 60,000 to 70,000 have arrived. The population of Saloniki in a few weeks has jumped from 160,000 to almost 1,000,000. And the most rudimentary means of taking care of such an increase are lacking, even to water supply and drainage.

As for the general aspect of the city, it never was Greek—indeed, it is more so than it ever has been. But to-day it might be a sort of greater Port Said; it might be Marseilles or London or Alexandria. It is anything—a great bazaar, a human beehive. But it is not a Greek city. It is not a city at all. It is merely a spot on the map where hundreds of thousands of human beings have congregated—and where few of them who can help it will remain.

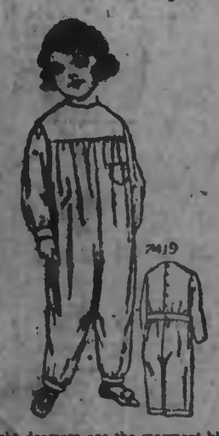
EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S NIGHT DRAWERS.

By Anabel Worthington.



Night drawers are the warmest kind of garment for little people in winter, when they are apt to take cold by kicking off the covering at night.

This garment is made with a deep yoke in front, but without any in the back. The front and the drawers legs are in one piece. This is gathered at the top where it is joined to the yoke, and made with the usual inseam to join the legs together. In the back the closing is placed in the centre of the waist, which extends from the neck to the belt. There is also an opening across the garment at the waist, and the material is cut down a little at each side as well.

Muslin, cotton, outing flannel, albatross, &c., are used for these garments, and they may be entirely plain or trimmed with a little flat insertion on the edges.

The night drawers pattern, No. 7,419, is cut in sizes 1, 2, 3, 5, 7 and 9 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by send ing to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 3 for 25c.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaker or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

A man lives three lives—youth, manhood and age. Youth is the rising sun of life, manhood is the sun at full meridian, age is the setting sun. The sunshine of a man's life is in his perfect manhood.

ROLL OF HONOUR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire.

As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country, or been wounded in action, are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

THE MARTIAL SPIRIT OF GERMAN WOMEN.

The spirit that actuates the women of Germany is shown in a remarkable letter which a resident of Brooklyn has received from his sister in Muhlenberg, who has lost her husband and two sons in the war:

"Since my last letter to you Franz has died of his wounds. Now I am left alone with two small children, but, thank God, I am not discouraged, and when I think of what other women have lost I feel that I have no reason to complain.

"However long this war will last! Heaven only knows. The streets here are crowded with soldiers, more so than in the beginning of the war, and we are more and more convinced that we will win. In fact, we must win, and should it come to the time when every soldier is killed, wounded, or taken prisoner, we will still fight, for then the women will go to the front. The strength of the weaker sex here would surprise you if you could see it. There are thousands of women like myself who have sacrificed everything they hold dear, and now they stand ready to sacrifice their lives. If we only were permitted to do so, we would all of us don the gray uniform and go into the trenches at once, and the world would then see how the women of Germany can fight for their Fatherland. If the enemy ever invades Germany it will only be over the dead bodies of her women."

Our City Needs G. Walter Green For Mayor

RUSSIANS ARE MAKING PROGRESS IN THEIR MARCH TO JOIN THE BRITISH

Have Occupied The Persian City of Kashar And Are Marching on Ispahan---Opposition Toward Conscription is Being Manifested---Feelers For Peace Thrown Out By Germany.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PARIS, Dec. 29.—(French Official).—"The night was calm, except in the sector of Chaulnes, where fighting with hand grenades at close quarters occurred, and in Champagne, where we bombarded the positions of the enemy to the west of Navarin Farm."

ATHENS, Dec. 29.—Fresh German forces have arrived at the Greek border. It is reported the armies of Germany will cross the Greek border and attack the Allies within a fortnight at Salonika.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Russian troops have occupied the Persian city of Kash-an, ninety-two miles north of Ispahan, and are now marching on Ispahan, according to despatches received here to-day. The above despatch indicates that the Russians are progressing in their march to join the British in Mesopatamia.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A broker's wire carries a despatch from Amsterdam that Kaiser Wilhelm is dead. There is absolutely no confirmation from any other source.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—If the Austrian reply fails to comply with this Government's demands, the officials to-day admitted, there probably would be another exchange of notes before an actual break of diplomatic relations occurs.

Secretary Lansing plans to advise President Wilson by long distance telephone immediately upon receipt of the note.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Lieut.-Col. Joseph Greenwood, 60, committed suicide by hanging in the office of the Horse Guards at Whitehall. His body was found to-day.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Wolff's Bureau, the official press agency of the German Government, has cabled via Zurich, Switzerland, despatches which are regarded as peace feelers for all Allied countries to consider.

Among other things suggested, the possible peace terms are: Return to Germany of all colonies conquered by the Allies, the payment to Germany of three and a half billions indemnity, with an additional indemnity to Germany annually from Belgium. Germany in return to evacuate the conquered portions of Belgium and France, and establish a German protectorate in Poland.

London newspapers to-day ridicule these terms.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Tremendous war orders from the Allies continue to pour into New York, the centre of the munition market. Though most of the orders are accompanied by conditions of secrecy, it was reported to-day that a number of concerns have sold their entire output for from 2 to 5 and 6 years ahead.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The opening gun in the struggle to defeat the Government's proposed Conscription Bill was fired by the Evening Star to-day.

The comment of the afternoon press generally followed political lines. The Star, however, presented a lengthy editorial, summing up the arguments the anti-conscriptionists are expected to make in Parliament.

"Conscription," said the Star, "is a 'slippery slop.' Once the nation steps thereon, there is no repentance.

"It is impossible to place a limit on the appetite for a conscript army. It devours every man. There is such a thing as economy of man power as well as economy of money power. We are not extravagantly thrifty in either."

The Westminster Gazette, Liberal, acquiesces in the decision of the Government, but declares it has some misgivings as to the success of the new policy.

The position of the Labour party leaders is still problematical, put Government officials said this afternoon they believe that responsible Labour leaders will accept Premier Asquith's word that conscription is necessary.

It is probable that Labourites will split on the question, with Radicals like Ramsey McDonald and Philip Snowden heading the Labour opposition.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The best estimates to-day were less than 300,000 unmarried men eligible for service, and without dependents, would be added to service. The great majority have volunteered under the Derby plan. Recruiting officials expressed little hope that these men will come forward voluntarily before the Government acts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. —David Lamar, "wolf of Wall street," and Jacob G. Taylor, vice-president of Labours' Peace Council, waiving extradition, surrendered here to-day and pleaded not guilty before Federal Judge Hand to indictments for conspiracy in connection with charges growing out of alleged activities of Peace Council in interfering with munition shipments.

Both were liberated under five thousand dollars bail.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. — Storm-tossed ocean vessels were making for port this afternoon, and others hesitated in putting to sea, when heavy gales were forecasted by the Weather Bureau, second storm centred over pennsylvania.

The Greek steamship Thessalonika, with 800 passengers aboard, again was reported in distress to-day.

Captain Fell, of the British freighter Cheviot Range, was washed from his ship and drowned Dec. 22nd, when the bridge was carried off.

EIGHT DEATHS FROM MEASLES IN 64TH BATTALION

Epidemic Amoung Soldiers in Training at Halifax, Nova Scotia—La Grippe And Colds Very Prevalent in Canada.

LARRIGANS FOR TROOPS

OTTAWA, Dec. 29.—Eight deaths are reported in the 64th Overseas Battalion from measles. The 64th are in training at Halifax. Instructions have been issued to various battalions in training everywhere in Canada to be careful about colds or wet feet. La grippe and colds are very prevalent.

Twenty thousand pairs of larrigans for use by the Canadian soldiers in the trenches in France, have now been shipped from Canada. The new larrigans are strong affair and thoroughly waterproof.

Red Cross Work From Warsaw

WARSAW, Dec. 9.— The Warsaw Women's Institute has prepared and forwarded the following consignment of goods for the use of the men at the front:

36 extra large pads, 144 large pads, 24 small pads, 7 scultitis binders, 100 large compresses, 54 bandages, 2 pairs of socks, hand knit, 1-2 doz. hot water bags, 1-2 doz. soap, 1-2 doz. combs, 1-2 doz. tooth brushes, 1-2 doz. pencils, 1-2 doz. camphorated chalk and rubber bands, 100 mouth wipes, 359 small gauze sponges.

School Children's Work.

The above is what school children made.

North Monaghan's Election Slate

There will be a general contest for the municipal positions in North Monaghan for 1916. The election ballots will show the following names:

For Reeve—W. G. Howden, John McIntosh.

Deputy-Reeve — Herb. Forster, Wm. Robson.

Councillors—Bert Arnott, J. H. Bell, R. A. Dobbin, Thos. Henry, J. C. Morrow, H. B. Rye.

THE WEATHER

Up to the present time, the thermometer has not been below zero this winter. Last year zero was first experienced on Nov. 18th. On Nov. 20th, we had it 5 degrees below. No more real cold weather was had until Dec. 17th, when 4 below was the figure. The following morning we had it 6 below. Four or five days of milder conditions followed, but on the morning of the 23rd, the thermometer went down to 8 below; on the 24th, 9 be'ow; 26th, 12 below; the 28th, 20 degrees below; and on the 27th, 15 below. December 25th was the coldest day of last winter, but Jan. 25th, with 28 below, was not far behind.—W.P.

THREE LOCAL BOYS ARRIVE HOME FROM SERVICE OVERSEAS

Gunner F. L. Sommerville and Pte. T. A. Parrington and C. Rae Reached Peterborough Last Night---Mayor Buller and Alderman Edgar Did The Honour For The City---To-day's Military News.

Three Peterborough soldiers, recent arrivals on the Pretorian, from overseas, reached home on the 830 G. T. R. train, last evening. They were Gunner F. L. Sommerville, Brock Street, Canadian Field Artillery, Pte. T. A. Parrington, Aylmer Street, 2nd Batalion, C.E.F., and Pte. E. Rae Edison Avenue, 39th Battalion, C. E. F. Mayor Buller, who heard of the coming of the three shortly before the train arrived, was at the station with Ald. Edgar, to extend a civic welcome to the three soldiers, and afterwards had them taken home in taxi-cabs.

Private Parrington.

Mr. James B. Parrington, Aylmer Street, now has two sons returned from active service. Some weeks ago Trooper Percy Parrington arrived in Peterborough, invalided from the front, and last night his younger brother, Private Tommy Parrington arrived back in the old town from which he had gone forth with the first volunteers in the 2nd Battalion. He was wounded while in the April engagement, near Ypres, and has spent the intervening months in the Duchess of Connaught Hospital, at Cliveden, from which he went directly to the "Pretorian," on which vessel he sailed on December 10th. Private Parrington brings back grateful memories of his hospital treatment. He has practically recovered from the injury to his arm, and stated that he expects to appear before a medical board in Kingston, probably in January, when the question of his physical condition will be considered.

Pte. Rae was a member of the 39th attalion, C.E.F., and was one of the last quota to leave Peterborough to join that Battalion. He has been invalided home on account of ill-health having been ill in England.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Battalion orders by Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.:

Headquarters.

1—Duties—

Orderly officer for to-day—Lieut. H. Eastwood.

Orderly officer for to-morrow—Lieut. T. W. B. Marling.

2—Parades—

Thursday — 6.30 to 7.00, physical training; 8.30 to 10.00, squad drill, Sects 36-46; 10.00 to 10.30, orderly room; 10.30 to 12.00, squad drill with arms, Sects 47-55; 2.00 to 4.30, lecture guards and guard mounting by Lieut. H. Eastwood.

3—Strength Taken On—

4—Transfers—

Lieut. G. F. Newlands, having been transferred to the 146th Overseas Battalion C.E.F., is struck off the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion C.E.F., from the 15th inst. SD. 26-6-42-2.

Pte. Fred Clarke having been transferred to the 80th Overseas Battalion C.E.F., Belleville is struck off the strength of the 93rd Overseas Battalion C.E.F., from the 28th inst.

5.—Command.

Lance Corporal J. Bath having returned from the School of Cookery resumes his duties from the 28th inst. and is granted first class working pay from this date.

Pte. F. Dunford will be shown on command from the 27th inst. until further orders.

6.—Leave of Absence.

The Commanding Officer has pleased to grant the following leave of absence as under:

Capt. R. S. Muir from retreat December 31st, 1915, until Reveille, Jan. 4th, 1916.

KEITH G. LECH,
Captain.
Acting Adjutant.

The 93rd Battalion are indebted to Messrs. Jordan Bros., florists, for a most handsome Christmas gift in the shape of several dozen beautiful plants, geraniums, hyacinths, ferns, etc. These have been distributed over the mess tables of the 93rd and have imparted a home-like, cheery appearance that is appreciated. If Messrs. Jordan Bros. could see the eagerness with which the plants were pointed out to visitors yesterday they would have no doubt as to the manner in which the gift was received.

The change that the call of King and county has made in the Peterborough Hockey Club since last season is evidenced by the recalling the trip of the Peterborough Intermediates to Toronto a year ago this week. On that occasion they played the T. R. and A. A., when they had the following line-up:

Goal, Dwyer-Janes; defence, Pethick, Hunter; rover, Halpin; centre, Park; right wing, Knapman; left wing, Cavanagh. Of that bunch, Janes, Pethick, Park, Knapman and Cavanah have enlisted during the year, so have Harold Morrow, who was spare man on the trip, Ed. Dillon the trainer, and Mart Kennedy, the mascot of the team, so that altogether eight of the men who were on the Toronto trip are now wearing khaki, and three are overseas.

The epidemic of la grippe which has been running among the soldiers of the 93rd, as well as generally through the city, seems to be pretty well under control now, as far as the 93rd is concerned. At least the Armouries hospital was entirely free of patients this morning, whereas a week ago a second room had to be fitted out as a hospital to accommodate the overflow.

The 93rd Battalion hockey team will practice between 5 and 6 o'clock to-night at Brock Street Rink. Most of the officers who play hockey are still away on leave and won't be back—until Monday, but the players who are in town will be out in force. So far the 93rd have filed the following certificates with the: O.H.A Lieut. C. R. Widdifield, Lieut. F. S. Dupuy, Lieut. R. de Puggalon, Lieut. G. Matthews, Lieut. Quackenbush, Pte. J. J. Cooke, Pte. Harry Blewitt, Pte. Stan. Anderson, Pte. R. Wedlock.

The father of Trooper E. Lowes, 8th C.M.R., Bramshott Camp, has received an interesting letter from his son. In part, the Peterborough boy writes: "I was up to London last Sunday for a day and had a good time. I met a fellow up there that was at the front for ten months. He was from Peterborough and I thought that he was killed, for it said in the Peterborough papers that he had been. His name is Gunner King, and I was surprised to see him. It was the first time he had been away from the firing line in the last ten months. He was telling me all about the Peterborough boys at the front. King was with Joe O'Toole when he was hit. He is going to tell the Peterborough boys that he saw me and tell them to write to me and when we go to the front I am going to try to get with them. Well I hope I see the front for I don't like hanging around like this."

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Dec. 29.—As a result of Wm. Barnes' libel suit against Theodore Roosevelt, the former was directed to pay $1,442 to Col. Roosevelt as costs and disbursements at the trial, at which a jury dismissed the $50,000 libel suit. The court made this decision to-day.

Great Sheet Of Ice Is Ready

Brock Street Rink Offers Finest Skating of The Season

The sharp dip in the thermometer has enabled the Brock street rink to secure the best sheet of ice for to-night there has been this season.

There has been no skating this afternoon in order that it may be in perfect condition. There has been more skating this season than for some time and the new management is pleased that the public who like this form of good healthy exercise are patronizing the rink so liberally. Any suggestions addressed to R. M. Glover or W. H. Waram at the Examiner Office will receive every consideration.

JANUARY SECOND APPOINTED ONTARIO'S DAY OF PRAYER

THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS PURCHASE.

In another part of this issue is printed an article giving reasons why the ratepayers should vote for the by-law. The case is fully and temperately presented; and the many reasons given are by no means all the reasons why the purchase of the grounds would be a substantial benefit to the city—guaranteeing a successful exhibition, a fact in itself of certain permanent and substantial value to the city, but the city will become the owner of thirty splendid acres of park land which will give the city a standing and the citizens an enjoyment that under less favorable circumstances could by no means be as cheaply gained—at a cost of only 19 cents upon every $1,000 of assessment.

Read the article carefully and form your judgment as a public-spirited citizen, anxious to see the city grow in every way—in good name, in substantial advantages.

The officers of the Exhibition have under somewhat discouraging conditions, given a great deal of attention to the Fair. They have considered the question of grounds from every angle, and are unanimous in the opinion that the by-law should be carried, both in the interests of the Exhibition and of the city; whatever helps the Exhibition helps the city. The purchase only gives the Exhibition the use of the grounds, which the city will own. They are admirable grounds for an exhibition—central, easily accessible, of spacious extent; and of specially fine soil. The Exhibition grounds are the only ones known that, at the end of days of rain the grounds are dry in an hour for comfortable use.

Then the city, in addition to all other advantages mentioned, will extend George Street through the grounds, and it will be open to the public fifty-one days in the year.

FROM MY LIBRARY.

'Tis strange to think that, as I calmly write,
A soul "somewhere in France" is taking flight
To tell the Great Commander of the fight.

And as I thumb again this well-worn tome.
"Somewhere in France" they stamp the clodded loam

Yes, while I laze and toy with book and pen,
The bugle sound, the charge fans out and then—
"Somewhere in France," this night, they bury Men!

—C. A. Child.

MR. W. A. ANDERSON
Re-elected Reeve of Otonabee by acclamation. The County Council is thus assured of his efficient services for another year.

A FEW OTHER REASONS WHY THE PARK IS A "GOOD BUY"

For a Payment of 19 Cents a Year on Every $1000 of Assessment We Get a Property That Brings The City Many Times The Payment While The Payment is Going on and When That is Completed a Regular Revenue Will be Received.

The Ratepayer has only to do a little thinking to convince himself that voting for the Purchase of the Exhibition Grounds is a duty—to himself—to the city—to the best interests, the material advantage and profit of the city and its good name for progress and enterprise.

First the purchase is a necessity; that is if we are to continue to have an Exhibition, or wish to have an Exhibition, worthy of the city; and a source of profit and trade and money advantage to the city.

If from lack of grounds and lack of ownership we are compelled to worry on with the present unsatisfactory exhibition, or possibly none at all, it will be admitted that it is unsatisfactory, though the present directors have done wonders under the tremendous handicap of no buildings and conveniences.

Adequate buildings can only be provided if the grounds are bought.

The only way open now is to have the city purchase the grounds.

The grounds at the price asked—$30,000 for thirty acres in the heart of the city — the only available site, are splendid value for the money. The ratepayers are asked to make the purchase as an investment.

What will be the returns from the investment? We shall have the possibility for a first class exhibition—

An exhibition that will not only be a credit to the city's good name, but have a large money value.

If by buying the grounds we can be assured of the best exhibition in Middle Ontario,

We shall attract thousands of visitors, and the city will have every year the benefit of the spending of thousands of dollars in the city, that will be infinitely greater than the small annual payment.

The price is reasonable, and the annual payments reduced to $2,207, which is the reduction of the by-law payment by the withdrawal of the city's annual grant of $600.

This payment will not be burdensome. It will only amount to an addition of 19 cents to every $1,000 of assessment.

And every foot of city property will be made more valuable, by the advantages the purchase will provide.

For a payment of 19 cents per $1,000 of assessment each year the city will become the owner of the most valuable, and the only remaining open space of property in the city. For this small payment—by paying $3.80 cents for each thousand of assessment spread over twenty years—we shall have a splendid property owned by the city with numerous advantages.

We shall be assured of a first-class exhibition—something we must have if the city is to keep its name for enterprise.

It is no matter of guess work that a first-class exhibition, will every year, bring in money value to the city—in outside money spent in the city—thousands of times greater than the annual payment.

Then in addition we should absolutely own an exhibition park, of location and area, unsurpassed in any city of Ontario of our size.

It will practically cost us nothing—for the money profits of greater exhibitions — increased business in the city, will be worth many times every year what we pay for the property.

We shall have a recreation park infinitely superior to anything we now have in the city.

Our parks have cost us nothing, and the Exhibition park will not be an exception.

When we sum the matter up it will have been paid for by outsiders—the money left with us by exhibition visitors, will amount in twenty years to twenty times what the property costs.

Then when the purchase is completed the Exhibition park will pay the city revenue—the Exhibition people will pay back to the city the surplus from annual exhibition—Toronto gets back from $50,000 to $60,000 a year from the National—and there is no doubt that the greatly improved exhibitions, made possible in Peterborough, will result in annual payments of surplus of from $1,500 to $2,0000 a year, equal to the interest at six per cent. upon the $30,000 cost.

Some may say the property is too valuable for park purposes. So much the better for us—so much the better the bargain we are making.

When we consider all the advantages in money and business improvement the ownership of the grounds will give the city, it seems that an annual payment of 19 cents per thousand of assessment is an easy way to buy a great good.

In London the Great, where land is the most valuable on earth, there are hundreds of parks totalling 5,000 acres. There are in the heart of London two parks—Hyde Park and Regent's park, containing 835 acres surrounded by land that could not be bought if it were covered with guineas.

From the first year it will be a money-maker, and with an improved exhibition, bring thousands of dollars to the city to be spent among our business men and benefit the whole city.

If we want to make Peterborough an exhibition centre—if we want to make our city a centre of attraction for business, we can't afford to let slip the chance to buy the Exhibition Grounds.

When we can make the purchase at the low payment of 19 cents on a $1,000 of assessment, we can't afford not to do it.

We must do a little looking ahead. We must show enterprise and public spirit. A very small price to pay for so large a gain.

KHAKI WEDDING IN OMEMEE

Commanding officer of the 109th Battalion Become a Benedict

OMEMEE, December 29th.—Lieut.-Colonel J. J. H. Fee, the popular O. C. of the 109th Battalion, C.E.F., was married on Wednesday, December 21, in Omemee, to Miss Gertrude Grandy, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Grandy, and one of Omemee's most charming young ladies. The happy event was celebrated at the home of the bride. The marriage was very quiet, only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present. Rev. George Brown of Hampton, officiated. The officers of the 109th sent a handsome case of silver and the non-coms. and men presented two chairs. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl and diamond necklace. The happy pair left for a short trip, and on their return will reside in Lindsay until the battalion goes overseas.

Mr. Ross MacPherson of Toronto, was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. MacPherson, over the week end.

Mr. F. G. Sandy was in Lindsay on Thursday on business.

Mrs. Charles Bent was a visitor to Peterborough during the past week.

Miss Lottie Poast of Toronto, is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs Richard Poast.

Mrs. T. C. Ivory was a visitor to Peterborough on Wednesday of the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Fee spent Christmas with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McGaughey, of Ops.

Mr. Robert Johnston was in Toronto on business last week

Mr. and Mrs. H. Brooks spent the week end with their daughter, Mrs. J. McCallum of Bobcaygeon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williamson were visitors to Peterborough during the past week.

Miss Anna McCrea of Toronto, spent Christmas with her mother, Mrs. J. McCrea, King street.

Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton, of Peterborough, was the guest of her friend, Miss Hilda Clarke, during the past week.

A recruiting officer for the London Scottish visited a big London firm the other day, and asked leave to recruit the staff. "You may if you like" said the manager, "but I am afraid you won't get much of a bag here. We have very few Scotchmen on our staff, and I suppose your recruits have to be Scotch?" "Scotch or superior English."—Manchester Guardian."

ONLY BAD CITIZENS NOW TALK OF PEACE

PARIS, December 29.—"Eighteen months ago France wanted peace. Today she wants war most energetically, and to that end will use her resources," said General Gallieni, the Minister of War, in asking the Senate today to approve the action of the Chamber of Deputies in giving him the 1917 class of recruits for January 5th. General Gallieni's remarks were greeted with prolonged applause.

"Whoever says a word of peace is considered a bad citizen," continued the Minister of War. "Mothers are not mourning for lost sons; they want them to be avenged. The 1917 class will leave with the assent of the nation. It demands that those charged with the duty receive and instruct those young men and prepare them for the great contest, which will not end before France, in accord with her allies, says, 'I stop!—I have obtained what I wanted; I resume my work of peace!'"

The Upper House immediately passed the bill, and authorized the public posting of the Minister's address.

Millions in India Waiting To Serve

BOMBAY, Dec. 29.— Ten thousand delegates, representing all communities, were present at the opening of the annual India National Congress, which was notable for the loyal and patriotic utterances of the speakers.

"Millions in India are waiting to serve," was the keynote of the opening speeches. In the Presidential address Sir Satyendra Sinha said the supreme feeling in India was "admiration for the self-imposed burden Britain was bearing in the struggle for liberty and freedom, and pride that India had proved herself not a whit behind the rest of the Empire in the assistance given the mother country."

Continuing, Sir Satyendra expressed the hope that "the spontaneous outburst of loyalty had dispelled forever all distrust and suspicion between the Indians and their rulers." The speaker admitted that the time had not arrived for self-government in India, but he urged the British Government to approve ungrudgingly the goal to which India aspired, and also to permit the recruiting of a strong national Indian army.

J. J. HARTLEY
FOR MAYOR

ADDRESS TO THE ELECTORS:

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of influential citizens, I have decided to come before the electors of Peterborough as a candidate for the Mayoralty. My long experience in municipal affairs, comprising a ten-year term as a member of the Council, also fourteen years on the Board of Education, and Chairman of the Board of Health, peculiarly fit me for the position of presiding head over your Aldermanic body. Those who are supporting my candidature are satisfied that I will, if elected, do my utmost to give the city a straight, honest administration of its affairs, and my motto will always be "strict economy." On the strength of my past record, I ask for your hearty support and the weight of your ballots to return me at the head of the polls next Monday. I promise close attention to municipal expenditures, and to particularly guard against leakages and unnecessary waste of public monies entrusted the Council for administration.

Again soliciting the honour of your votes on election day, and guaranteeing, if elected, to do my best to merit the confidence placed in me, I am,

Yours for economy,

J. J. HARTLEY

WEST WARD ELECTIONS

Your vote is solicited for W. C. AUSTIN AS ALDERMAN FOR 1916. I have lived in the ward for the past fifteen years, and have been connected with nearly every movement for the progress and development of Peterborough. I was nominated without my knowledge by two of my neighbours on Weller street and have decided to stay in the field and do "my bit," if successful.

If elected I shall do all in my power to bring about a more economical management of our city's affairs. Wishing you all a Happy New Year, and again soliciting your vote and influence.

Respectfully yours,

To The Electors Of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

As your representative on the Board of Education for the past twelve years, I have served you to the best of my ability, and now I beg to offer myself for re-election, and respectfully ask your support.

Yours very truly,

JOHN CRANE

West Ward Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having been nominated to contest the vacancy in the Board of Aldermen of the City for the West Ward, and having substantial property interests in the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election for a two-year term. Having had eight years' experience in the Council, I feel that I can be of service to the City. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works for three years, Property Committee two years, and am at present Chairman of the Board of Health.

I am as interested as any one in the City, in endeavouring to get a dollar's value for every dollar of the City money spent. And if elected I will in every way do what I can to further the City's interests.

It will be impossible for me to see all the electors of the West Ward, and I take this means of reaching those whom I do not see, and solicit your support in my behalf. Wishing you all, ladies and gentlemen, a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

George H. Duncan

Card To The Electors Of The West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated to run as Alderman for the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election, and ask your vote and influence in my behalf. If elected I will use my best endeavours to further the best interests of this city.

Wishing you all the Compliments of the Season, I am,

Yours very truly,

WM. GALBRAITH.

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward:—

Having been nominated for alderman in the North Ward, I ask you for your vote and influence. I am a sanitary engineer of long experience, and the great problem Peterborough is up against just now makes me a very valuable man to have as your representative. This past six years I have made special studies of sewage disposal work. I have prepared and read several papers on this subject before the Sanitary Engineers of Ontario, and to show their appreciation of my ability they made me chairman for all of Ontario. In that problem alone it is enough to place me in a position where I can exercise my ability. In regard to public work, I believe that Peterborough should own its own street paving plant and do their own work.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,

Robt. G. Sturgeon

Vote for Sturgeon and Progressive Peterborough.

To the Ratepayers of The City of Peterborough

I RESPECTFULLY solicit your Vote and Influence to Re-Elect me as a Member of the Board of Education.

It is admitted on all hands that our Public Schools and Collegiate Institute compare favourably with the best in the Province.

This excellent result has been achieved by the Members of the Board taking a deep and active interest in the efficiency of all our Schools and securing the hearty and enthusiastic co-operation of every Teacher in every Department.

As always in the past so in the future I shall continue if I am favoured with your Votes to see that the splendid standard of our Schools is maintained and wherever possible improved.

Yours respectfully,

W. H. HILL

TO BOARD OF EDUCATION

NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

TO THE ELECTORS--NORTH WARD

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,—

Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited to re-elect

WM. LANGFORD, Jr.
FOR ALDERMAN

I have been your representative in the Council for nearly three years, and during that time have endeavoured to conduct the City's affairs as economically and carefully as possible, consistent with efficiency and progress. If re-elected I will continue this policy, and the experience already gained will be at your service.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I am,

Sincerely

WM. LANGFORD, Jr.

ELECT HARRY PHELAN

An Experienced Ex-Alderman
For the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the request of a large number of electors of the city, I have accepted nomination as a candidate for Alderman for the West Ward.

I can appeal to the Electors for their confidence and support on the ground of my eight years' previous experience in the Council, and the knowledge gained during that time in the management of the City's affairs.

I have taken an active part on all committees, and was Chairman of the important committee of the Board of Works for two years.

I am not a Non-resident of the Ward; but on the contrary, I have been a regular resident of the West Ward for years, which enables me to have the most intimate knowledge of the special interest of this Ward in particular, as well as of the whole city.

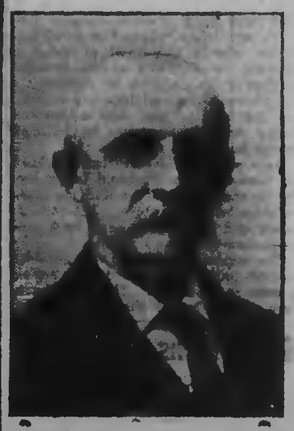
I may also state that I am impressed with the importance of practicing rigid economy in the city's expenditures, and pledge myself that if elected, only the most judicious expenditures will have my sanction.

With best wishes for a prosperous New Year, for Peterborough, I am,

Faithfully yours,

HARRY PHELAN

Some women love with a reservation of personal liberty, which leaves something lacking to the man, which years of emptiness in love fully reveals. With such natures, love gives a partial surrender only when compelled to do so. A man of dominating mind is sure to have trouble with such a woman.



To The Electors Of The Township Of Smith

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I am in the field for the Reeveship of Smith and solicit your kind co-operation in my behalf. It is impossible for me to see all the electors and I am taking this means of soliciting the votes of those whom I am unable to meet. If I am elected to the Reeveship of the very important Township of Smith, I will do my best to merit your confidence.

Wishing you all a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

INSIST CANADA BE TREATED FAIRLY

Otherwise Embargo on Dye-Woods From Jamaica Will Be Continued

WASHINGTON, December 29—The Department of Commerce has been informed that the British embargo on exportation of dye-woods from Jamaica and British Hondorus largely was in retaliation against American manufacturers who are alleged to have increased prices to British and Canadian buyers of logwood extract.

In announcing to-day the release of 4700 tons of dye-wood awaiting shipment in Jamaica, the department quoted the British Foreign Office as stating the action was conditional on resumption of extract exportation in reasonable quantities to Canada. The Foreign Offices charges that in some instances American manufacturers not only increased their prices, but repudiated contracts made with British purchasers.

The United States imports annually about 20,000 tons of dye-woods. Two-thirds of this comes from Jamaica and Hondorus, and the remainder from Haiti.

Austrians Attack on Scutari

ATHENS, Dec. 29.—Austrian and Bulgarian forces have begun an attack on Scutari. Serbian and Montenegrin troops defending the city are preparing to evacuate it within a few days, it was stated, and join the Italians at Aviona.

A charming, auburn-haired nurse tells the story. She bent over the bed of one badly wounded man and asked him if he would like anything to read. The soldier fixed a humorous eye on her and said: "Miss, can you get me a nice novel? I'd like one about a golden-haired girl and a wounded soldier, with a happy ending." After this the pretty nurse looks down contemptuously on civilian compliments.—Manchester Guardian.

ADDRESS OF G. WALTER GREEN

The People's Candidate for Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO'

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Having been honoured with the nomination for Mayor for 1916, I desire to address you as a candidate for your suffrages at the coming election on the 3rd of January.

The record of my work as an alderman for the past three years is before you. On that record I respectfully claim a renewal of the confidence which the men and women of the Civic Electorate have reposed in me and in my efforts to serve the public welfare.

A few of the leading matters which will receive my careful attention, if elected, are as follows:—

(1) To see that the working men of Peterborough are given the work the city needs done, at wages in keeping with the value of their services, and the purchasing power of their earnings.

(2) To see that the City Engineer invites tenders for all important work to be done, and that the City Engineer's Department also tender—with the proviso in every contract that the work required to be done shall be done by city workmen, so long as city workmen are available.

(3) To see that residential streets are narrowed so that money will not be wasted on building and maintaining roadways of needless width to serve all traffic purposes—proper surface drainage and curbs and gutters provided; that streets be properly macadamized or gravelled, and then oiled to give them life, to shed water and give residents the benefit of dustless streets.

(4) To see that a system of surface drainage or storm drains is begun for these reasons:—To give work to the unemployed so that the rain fall does not enter the sewers and have to be pumped by expensive and expensively operated machinery, adding to the inevitable expense of treating storm water as sewage. It is to be remembered that every 1,000 gallons lifted at the pumping station means so much additional expense that will be permanent as long as sewage has to be pumped.

(5) The outfall sewer and the sewage disposal work are forced upon us by law and we can't avoid them; but the expense can be lessened by providing that instead of pumping, we can let storm water run off by gravity at no cost other than providing storm drains. The extent to which this work will be done will depend on circumstances. Less will be done if our factories employ all our labour. More will be done if employment is needed, for otherwise idle workmen.

(6) To see that, after paying fair wages, the city gets value for every dollar so spent, and that neither time nor material shall be thrown away.

(7) To see that the requests of the most humble citizen that approaches the council shall receive as prompt and courteous consideration as would be given to a large and wealthy delegation—that equal rights shall be given to every ratepayer.

(8)—To see that many more streets are properly oiled (or watered), and that when this cannot or is not done that no resident of any street shall be called upon to pay for service or advantages he does not get—virtually placing street oiling or watering on a frontage tax basis.

(9)—To see that an Advisory Board, composed of ex-Mayors and ex-Aldermen and experienced men of business, be created to confer with and advise the council upon all important public and civic questions and enterprises, so that the city government shall not lose the benefit of their experience.

(10)—To see that the Hydro-Electric Commission, be urged to get and give to the city a report upon the cost of operating radial railways as proposed for this district; and an estimate of their business benefit to Peterborough; and that, before one dollar shall be spent by the city in respect to such proposed radial railways, the proposition shall be placed before the people for their judgment upon the scheme.

The city is faced with large and expensive and formidable undertakings, which will need men of experience, sound business ability, and wisdom, to protect and safeguard the interests of the people. And I think it is fair to assume that if my own business have shown some of that energy, and sound judgment essential to success, my application of these qualities in the government of the city in the capacity of Mayor, should result for the good of our civic interests.

Being one of the heaviest ratepayers in the city, with large personal interests at stake, it should be to my own advantage as well as yours, to endeavour conduct the city's affairs in a prudent, economical and business-like manner.

I have been identified with every committee of the council, and been chairman of the most important—Fire, Water and Light, and Board of Works. In every capacity I have endeavoured to give painstaking attention to the city's interests. With this experience and the knowledge gained, by three years' service, of the needs of the city, I have confidence in my ability to fill the position of Mayor in the best manner in which the city's interests can be promoted.

I will not be able to personally canvas every elector in the city in the short time remaining before polling day. I therefore respectfully submit these views to you, and trust that I may have so favourably impressed you as to be deserving of your votes and support.

Wishing you all, Ladies and Gentlemen, my very best wishes for a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

G. WALTER GREEN

German Sympathizers In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A second demand was made to-day on Secretary Lansing by German sympathizers in New York for the internment of Lieut. William Thaw, and two other American members of the French Flying Corps, now in the United States on furlough.

No action will be taken.

Woman Is Promoted Gets $7,500 a Year

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Dr. Katherine B. Davis, the city's only woman commissioner, resigned as the head of the Department of Correction to accept an appointment by Mayor Mitchell to the new parole commission, of which she will be chairman. Her salary will be $7,500 a year, the same amount she has been receiving. Deputy-Commissioner of Correction, Burdette G. Lewis, who entered the service with Mrs. Davis on January 1, 1914, was appointed by the Mayor as her successor.

AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

To-night being the last Wednesday evening of the year, the prayer service at Murray street will take the form of "an hour of thanksgiving." The entire membership with their friends are invited to be present and to express in some way their gratitude for the mercies of 1915. The meeting will occupy only one hour and a large gathering is expected.

Morals with men are largely a matter of temptation, inclination and opportunity. Morals are also a matter of mood.

To the Ratepayers Of North Monaghan

Having been nominated for Councillor for year 1916, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and promise, should I be elected, to do all in my power towards promoting the best interests of the township.

SEND G. WALTER GREEN BACK TO FINISH HIS WORK

The Outfall Sewer and the Sewage Disposal Undertaking

Perhaps no other man in the City Council has the same knowledge of the work in connection with the Outfall Sewer and the Sewage Disposal Undertaking as ex-Alderman Green.

Both of these works are still in an incompleted and unsettled condition. The intricate questions involved and the vast amount of information concerning them, which is of inestimable value to the city, ex-Alderman Green has at his finger ends.

As the Chairman of the Board of Works, Mr. Green has necessarily had to assume the greater responsibility in connection with both of these important undertakings. And it was by him and through him that the difficult problems which have arisen regarding their construction have been thought out and assumed the shape they are now in. Therefore, Mr. Green's intimate acquaintance with all the information regarding both undertakings must constitute knowledge of the most valuable character to the city.

If the Electors fail to send Mr. Green back to finish his work, who can take his place and be as valuable an advisor on behalf of the city's interests regarding these two important matters?

It will still require seven months' work before the Outfall Sewer is completed, and only the preliminary stages in connection with the Sewage Disposal problem have been reached. We want Mr. Green's information and we want Mr. Green's experience until both these works are accomplished.

Let Green Finish His Work

Labour	$23442 00
Pipe	6687.00
Lumber	1230 00
Cement	932 00
Plant, power, gravel, misc.	9218 88
Total	$41459.88

It is to be noted in connection with the above that, by his shrewd judgment and sound views, Mr. Green as Chairman of the Board of Works succeeded in causing every dollar of that amount to be spent in the city, with the exception of the cement. All the lumber, labour, pipe, gravel, etc., comes directly from the city and the money has been disbursed here.

A total length of 3818 lineal feet of the new Outfall Sewer has been constructed during the past year. Of this 1687 feet were 33 inches in diameter and 2131 feet were 30 inches in diameter. The total amount expended on the Outfall Sewer was $41459.88. The average cost per foot, including plant, was $10.86. The estimated cost of this section of the Sewer was $11.43 per foot.

Ex-Alderman G. Walter Green knows every foot of this undertaking, and has the further details in his possession. Remember what he has accomplished, what has to be done yet, and send him back to finish his work.

Rockefeller's Ex-Pastor Assails the 'Soulless' Rich

"Man Can Make Millions and Be Failure Without Ideals," Says Dr. Eaton

By Ruth M. Byrns.

"It does not take a high type of intelligence to make money. A man can make millions and be a miserable failure to life with a one-cylinder brain. The trouble with too many so-called 'successful men' is that they have souls of wood! They gauge their lives by money standard and let it go at that."

The Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton, formerly John D. Rockfeller's Cleveland pastor, made this statement in his morning sermon at the Madison Avenue Baptist church.

Last night in his study he said to me:

"The world's standards are wrong. Ideals count for more than money, and a man's soul for more than the might that comes through fear and the sword.

"This country has standardized life on the almighty dollar. We count our successful men those who make money. Little we care if their ideals are true.

"Money of God."

"And we concern ourselves not at all with their principles of right and wrong. Money is our God. And our house of cards will topple as Europe's did if we cannot see that character counts for more than financial gain.

"I have known almost penniless men whose lives were rich incalculably so.

"They call me an idealist. But what, I ask you, makes for progress in this word? Not money, but integrity, faith, character—the spiritual life of a man.

"America is drifting on the tide of her prosperity. We must wake up and take our stand for higher standards of living before it is too late!

"Our modern life is founded on a lie. We have gone for from the days when our ancestors founded this nation to give a man his chance to be an individual. We are slaves to the greed for gold.

Losing World's Respect.

"We are losing the respect of the nations of the world. Why do we resent this disrespect—and we all do. Simply because in our own souls we know we deserve it. We are losing our own self-respect.

"We stood a hundred million souls, the richest country in the world when Europe went to war. And to our shame be it said now we took the golden opportunity to prove the spirit of true democracy—to make money.

"We all need the faith to see the good in men, the love of beauty, the ability to do the simple kindly things of life, to give and forget the gift. We need wider tolerance, broader vision, less pessimism and more honesty with ourselves.

Last week I talked to a man who told me he had made out of the war a sum well up into six figures.

"I told him that did not increase my respect for him. He has millions and could wipe thousands like myself off the face of the earth. But I do not envy him."

Using Poles For Building Roads

Germans Trying to Restore Economic Activity and to Furnish Food to People

BERLIN, Dec. 29.—"The London Times on November 25 and 26 published an article about the misery caused by the German authorities in the occupied parts of Russian Poland," says an item given out by the Overseas News Agency to-day. "In reality the German authorities did everything in order to restore economic activities and to furnish food to the occupied districts.

"The grain harvested there was used entirely for the population. Since it was impossible to bring raw materials for the re-opening of factories, the German authorities began road building in order to give work to the population. Now 250,000 men are occupied in this way. Besides, the authorities instituted employment offices for those willing to work outside their home districts."

Two Flee Frail Fairfield Jail

Pleasant Faced Burglars Use Same Coal Hole "Hello Dearie" Flanagan Preferred

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., December 29.—The Fairfield County Jail, where terms are served indeterminately, depending entirely upon whether a prisoner wants to stay or escape, has lost two more excellent prisoners. They are Alfred Martin and Frank Carmalino, quiet and pleasant faced burglars, who having remained behind the frail bars of Fairfield for more than a year, yawned and left.

An interesting feature of the escape was that the men used the same coal hole that became famous five years ago, when "Hello Dearie" Flanagan was in the habit of being a prisoner by day and a fireside companion of his children by night. He left through the coal hole every evening for months and was a devoted father until it was time to go back to the jail in the morning.

As a matter of fact there have been few escapes from Fairfield lately owing to the cold weather and the comforts to be found there. The jail officials and the guards have been acting rather cocky as a result.

The escape has caused the greatest possible indignation and drastic action is sure to be taken. They may even close up the top of the coal hole.

FORBIDS FANCY BREADS

VIENNA, Dec. 23, (via London).—A Ministerial decree has been issued forbidding the baking of rolls, biscuits, and other fancy breads, and permitting only the making of loaves of ordinary bread. The order does not apply to households.

A further order requires persons possessing raw oils, benzol and tar oil to report the quantity on hand on the first and fifteenth of every month This order authorizes the expropriation of mineral oils if necessary.

New Year's Day At The Y.W.C.A.

No girl need be lonely in Peterborough New Year's Day. A most hearty welcome is extended to all girls to visit the Association on New Year's Day. There will be open house to every girl in the city, in the afternoon, from 3 to 6, in the evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. If you have never visited the Association rooms, this will be a good time to make the first visit. The fire in the fireplace, and the "homey" look of the big reception hall will bring cheer to the heart of the girl from the old land.

Mayor Beal Will Be Opposed

LINDSAY, Dec. 29. — Mr. D. J. McLean, of the Dominion Wheel Works, has decided to enter the mayoralty contest against Mr. R. M. Beal, and will appeal to the electors on his record as an alderman and a citizen.

Messrs. G. H. M. Baker and R. Kylie will battle for the Reeve's chair, while Messrs. Robert Chambers and A. C. Babcock will oppose each other for First Deputy-Reeve.

Meetings In West Peterboro

Buckhorn, January 11th. The speakers will be Messrs. J. H. Ferguson and A. E. Westbrooke. An interesting programme and entertainment will be provided for the evening

Concert In The S. A. Hall

The S. A. Sunday School hall was packed to the door last night for the Concert and Santa Claus for the children of the Sunday School. The programme was greatly enjoyed, as evidenced by the applause. Special mention should be made of Miss Cunningham, who recited, and also Lillian Laggies. The Fly and Dumb bell drill by the children was very much enjoyed, together with the motion pictures.

Adjutant McElhiney acted as Chairman. Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben the new District Officers, commanding Eastern Ontario and Quebec Provinces, will be welcomed to Peterborough on New Year's Eve, at eight o'clock, in the S. A. Temple.

After a short interval the annual Watch Night service will be conducted by Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben, commencing at 10.30, in the Temple

A welcome tea will be given to the new leaders at 6 o'clock, at which all soldiers, converts and recruits of the Salvation Army will attend, to get acquainted with the new officers.

At 8 o'clock on New Year's night Brigadier Moreben will give his splendid address, 'Trophies of Grace,' which no doubt will be a rich treat

6,500 Orphaned Babes Starving In Belgium

Sixty-five hundred orphaned babies in Belgium are starving because their fathers stood between Germany and us. What are we going to do for them?

Many little tots were found wandering on the road. They did not know what had become of their parents," says a letter from Belgium. The Belgian Relief Committee now has 6,500 of these children under its care. Some one must feed them. Canada is being asked to do her part.

The situation of the unfed women and children in Belgium would appall the world and enlist the sympathy of millions if the event were not overshadowed by the great war. Canada must not lose sight of this feature, however, and must answer the appeal of the Belgian Relief Committee.

WICKEDEST, WORST AND MOST WASTEFUL TREASON OF THE TIME

Talk about treason! Denounce the disloyalty of Bourassa in Montreal, and of a pro-German here and there in Ontario! The treason-talk of such people at its worst is harmless child's play when compared with the treason work carried on in Toronto and elsewhere, day and night, under the very eyes of the law officers of the Crown and within the knowledge, often, indeed by the paid-for license authority, of the Government of Ontario.

The evidences of this treason staggered about Toronto streets on Christmas Eve, made pitiable exhibitions in the street cars, spent the Holy Night some of them in the police station and others in dishonored and broken-hearted homes, and the irreducible remainder of the 117 gathered in by the police on Christmas Eve appeared before the Magistrate on Monday morning. Many of these betrayed and helpless young men were of military-service age, who, had they been recruits, would have shamed the uniform of the King.

There is no use arguing this question any longer. The State itself is the arch-traitor to King and Country. What is it but treason, impudent treason, for some officers to be authorized by the State to recruit regiments of men for service at the battle-front where brain and nerve and muscle and moral character count, and, at the same time, for others to be solemnly authorized by the State to give their strength and time and skill to a business that muddles the brain, and draws the nerve, and cuts the muscle, and utterly destroys the moral character? The thing would be a farce were it not a crime.

When the State takes this war situation even half-seriously it will not need a public campaign to expose the crime of the liquor traffic and the abiding menace of the drink evil.

And when the Government ceases to balance the liquor vote against the King's appeal and the country's defence it will hesitate over these licenses to bar-rooms and drinking clubs and liquor shops not one half-hour. Financiers talk about economy, and the absolute necessity that Canadians bear their full share of the burden of war finance; but the sink hole of the bar-room is kept wide open for the money of the people, and the drink habit destroys the earning power of all its victims. Recruiting meetings are held in all parts of Canada, and much time and money are expended in increasing the enlistment; but in the military camps the Orders for the Day report men as "dismissed." Why dismissed? "Undesirable." And why undesirable? "Booze."

Treason at its worst is the crime in which we all are involved, Premiers, Governments, and People, so long as we sanction, or allow our Governments to sanction, the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors during the stress of war.—The Globe.

ALLIES' WAR COUNCIL PLANS WORK IN LITTLE HOUSE OUTSIDE PARIS

Simplicity of Deliberations Added To By Humble Surroundings of Secret Meeting Place

PARIS, Dec. 29.—In a six-roomed, red-tiled house not many miles from Paris (the exact location is a strict military secret) six great generals are seated around an old oak table and deciding the destinies of a great part of Europe. They are Joffre (French), Haig (British), Gilinski (Russian), Porro (Italian), Wiellemans (Belgian), and Stefanovitch, (Serbian.)

I have received an account of how these memorable gatherings are conducted. While the meetings began with military precision, formality and of course official salutes, they continued with business like simplicity. There were no decorations except maps on the tables, maps on the walls, maps strewn on unoccupied chairs. On the mantel piece is a 50 cent bust of Napoleon.

JOFFRE A GOOD LISTENER.

General Joffre presides. He is listening, slowly strokinghis bushy white moustache, a faraway look in his eyes. He is a good listener, and so are his fellow conferees. But they are all indifferent talkers.

French is the language used, but while Gilinski and Wiellemans use the tongue with fluency and an absence of foreign accent, General Sir Douglas Haig talks with difficulty and the broad English intonation; and Porro and Stefanovitch snap out their words of Italian-French with rushing fluency, which makes them difficult to follow.

Of all the secrets which European statesmen and soldiers are now hoarding none is more rigid than the subjects of conversation and the decisions this supreme war council of the allied belligerents. The house is completely isolated by a cordon of troops. None can approach it. President Poincare himself could not pass through the military ring if he paid a surprise visit. The building is also guarded from aerial attack—how is another inviolate military secret.

High authorities and well posted people here and there get a hint of what the generals are doing, and what they propose to do, but outside of the ministerial councils of the different allied powers no one ever learns how they propose to throw an army at a given point in the long line of Germany, and her allies, strengthen the force stationed there, or withdraw troops from such and such a position where the military results do not justify the effort made.

FOREIGN MINISTERS IN TOUCH

Such advice it is the business of the allies' supreme war council to give to the respective governments. It is not the business of the generals to suggest military movements for purely political purposes. While they are meeting the allies' foreign ministers are also either seated at another table or are in telephonic or telegraphic communication. If they desire politico-military operations to be undertaken, they refer their plans to the generals, who weigh them and give their verdict on ways and means.

The generals usually meet in the morning. Before proceedings open a squad of Zouaves are lined up along the approaches to the house—all lithe, well set young men who have fought at Les Eparges, or Souain, or Masiges. Their baggy red breeches flutter in the stiff winter wind; their battle stained flag flits and crackles overhead.

"Attention! Present arms!" barks the dapper young colonel of the Zouaves, who slip into a stiff motionless attitude, while Joffre returns the salute with military precision. Straightest, tallest, proudest in the rigid red line is the flag lieutenant. Tempered like a racehorse, he is the embodiment of nervous strength. Pinned to his breast are the Cross of the Legion of Honour, the Military Medal, the War Cross and several Moroccan and Tunisian decorations.

FRENCH CHIEF GREETS ALLIES

Slowly with his pleasant smile still on his face, Joffre walks down double line, looking each man in the face. He reaches the flag, halts and gravely salutes it. He is awaiting the arrival of the other generals, his guests, and the band strikes up the rousing war song, "Aux Champs." As general after general arrives the tune merges into the national anthems of the different nations, while Joffre steps forward to shake each military chieftain by the hand.

All the generals have arrived now. "Stand at ease!" is called as the backs of the six generals recede into the little red-tiled house where the future of the world may perhaps be influenced in the course of the ensuing hour.

three soldiers who returned to the city last evening. At present he is staying at the home of his aunt, Miss A. D. Jenkins, 226 Brock Street. Gunner Somerville was injured by a horse in October last, and has been invalided home. He expects to undergo an operation at an early date. Besides this, Gunner Somerville was gassed early in the year. This affected his eyesight and incapacitated him for some days.

Gunner Somerville enlisted with the 7th Battery of St. Catharines and later transferred to the 9th Battery while at Valcartier. He spent eight months at the front and during that time saw considerable fighting. He met a number of Peterborough boys at the front, including William Graham and Sergt. Allen. The latter has since returned to his home in Peterborough.

The town of Brockville gave every officer and man of the 59th Battalion located here a present for Christmas. The men were also given an excellent Christmas dinner.

The mayor and aldermen of Brockville are giving the 59th Battalion a big dinner to-night, and preparations are being made for a big and a good time.

About the middle of January, the first company change will take place with the 59th Battalion, in accordance with the original plan of Lt.-Col. Dawson. "A" Company, now at Gananoque, will go to Brockville, and "B" Company will take its place at Gananoque. "C" Company will go to Cornwall, and "D" Company, now at Cornwall, will go to Brockville.

TORONTO, December 29.—A monster military convention opened at the Exhibition Park to-day, when over 200 Senior Officers, with Quartermasters and Paymasters of overseas battalions from all parts of Ontario, had an all-conference with General W. HEALTH POET FIGHTS GRIP WITH RHYME

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Rhyme as a means of educating the public in the prevention of grip, now epidemic in some parts of the city, was used by the health department yesterday in thousands of cards which it distributed throughout the city.

The couplet of preventive advice reads:

"Cover up each cough and sneeze;
If you don't you'll spread disease."

Dr. Charles F. Boldaun, of the bureau of health education, says there is no specific cure for grip, and prevention is the only means of checking its spread.

The rhymed warning will be placarded in public places and distributed through the schools, and by guards on elevated and subway trains.

Lieut-Col. Simpson Placed Under Arrest at The Instance of Manitoba Authorities

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Lt.-Col. P. M. Simpson, of the Canadian Army Medical Corps, on leave here from the front, has been placed under arrest at the instance of the Province of Manitoba, charged with stealing $100,000.

This is Dr. Simpson, mentioned prominently in connection with the Roblin Government scandals in Winnipeg, in the buildings of the new Parliament Buildings. He secured the appointment and departed when the enquiry was commenced.

SHOOTS BANDITS SAVES $4,000

Oklahoma Bank Cashier, Thrown Into Vault, Pursues and Waylays Fleeing Robbers

GRANT, Okla., Dec. 29.—After having been thrown into the bank vault with his hands tied by two youths who robbed the Bank of Grant of $4,000, Mr. Webb, cashier, slipped out of his bonds, intercepted the bandits and shot and badly wounded both.

The robbers, whose names officers gave as Claud Jones, twenty-three years old, and Arthur McFarland, seventeen, were taken to jail at Hugo to-night. Physicians said Jones probably would die.

A depositor who was in the bank when the robbers entered, was driven with the cashier into the vault, the door of which the youths could not lock. Mr. Webb loosened his hands, and as the bandits left the building he pushed out the vault door and obtained a shotgun. Taking a short cut out to the railroad station Mr. Webb concealed himself behind a pile of ties.

As the bandits approached he ordered them to put up their hands. They failed to obey and the cashier opened fire. The money was recovered.

CHANGES HAVE BEEN MADE

Important Promotions in Passenger Department

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—Several important changes in the passenger department of the C.P.R. are announced. George A. Walton, who is General Agent Passenger Department, at Chicago, is promoted General Passenger Agent at Winnipeg, effective January 1st. A. C. Shaw, his predecessor is transferred to a new position in Montreal. At Chicago Mr. Walton is succeeded by Mr. T. J. Wall, General Agent Passenger Department, Minneapolis. Mr. Walton, who was born in Montreal, July, 1881, gained his first experience in the Grand Trunk, which he joined in 1897. He transferred his activities to the C.P.R. at Winnipeg, where he became chief rate clerk in 1901. Six years later he was appointed district passenger agent at Brandon, leaving in 1910 to become general agent, passenger department, at Spokane. Since 1911 he has been General Agent, Passenger Department, at Chicago. Mr. Walton has many friends in Montreal where his mother still lives.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR WIFE MURDERER

MACLEOD, Alta, Dec. 29.—Philip Hart, a rancher of the town of Burmis, was found guilty of wife murder in the second degree, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. Hart's wife, Alice, was killed by a shotgun in the hands of her husband on Oct. 13 last at the ranch, after a quarrel. Hart, in the witnessbox, swore that the gun was accidentally discharged when he slipped and fell as he was walking away from the victim.

The principal witness against Hart was Sidney Sargeant, who had been a visitor at the ranch, and whose continued presence and intimacy with his wife Hart had objected to and on account of which the couple had frequently quarreled. Mr. Sargeant swore that after one of these quarrels Hart had fired point-blank at his wife from a distance of seven feet and killed her.

The prisoner was tried at a special sitting of the supreme court presided over by Mr. Justice Simmons. The judge charged heavily against the prisoner.

Sleighs Sent To Aid 160 Fire Victims

Chodikee Lake Hotel and Raymond Riordan School Destroyed—Loss $150,000

HIGHLAND, N. Y., Dec. 29.—One hundred persons in the Chodikee Lake Hotel and sixty students of the Raymond Riordan School were barely able to escape when the hotel and school building were destroyed by fire. The flames spread through the frame structure with such rapidity that the occupants were unable to save any of their personal belongings.

Sleighs were sent from the village and brought many of the shivering victims back here, where the doors of the Methodist Church were thrown open to them. Bedding and matresses were brought in and they passed the night in the church.

The loss is placed at $150,000.

AGREEMENT POSSIBLE VIENNA IS CONVINCED

VIENNA, Dec. 29.—In all quarters the conviction now is entertained that the difference between Austria-Hungary and the United States which arose from the Ancona incident are susceptible to amicable settlement.

The Austro-Hungarian reply to the latest Ancona note may be expected in a few days. This note is being studied here. Meanwhile the press is withholding comment. The remarks incident to the announcement that the note had been received were temperate and even friendly in tenor, and all circles are convinced the outlook may be described as favourable.

No inkling has been gained regarding the nature of the forthcoming Austro-Hungarian communication to the United States, but in this connection interest attaches to an article by Professor Henry Lammasch, one of the leading Austrian authorities on international law

Professor Lammasch, who is a member of the tribunal at The Hague, suggests that, in view of the fact that there is a misunderstanding between the two nations, an international commission of naval eperts from neutral countries be appointed to examine the Ancona case, as was done in the famous Dogger Bank incident.. It is felt in certain quarters here that this procedure would offer the best chance of establishing the facts, and thus placing the blame on the proper party.

WAS OFFERED SEVEN WIVES

Amusing Experience of British Officer in the Cameroons.

An interesting experience of H.M.S. Cumberland's successful operations in the Cameroons, entitled, "Doing Her Bit," by "Guns, Q.F.C." is published in Blackwell's Magazine." An extract from the article follows:

The friendliness of otherwise of the Cameroon natives was a matter always worth considering and frequently special efforts were made to ensure their assistance. A special brand of tempting tinned tripe formed a part of the stores usually carried which appealed to the native palate.

An amusing incident occurred on one occasion when an officer in charge of an armed boat was proceeding up a creek to act as guardship off a small town at that time occupied by our troops; his orders were to ensure the friendliness of the tribe which inhabited the entrance to the creek to prevent any news of his operations getting through to the Germans further up.

He invited the chief of the tribe on board, and regaled him with the delicacy referred to; its effect was the establishment of such goodwill that he insisted on presenting his host with seven wives an offer, which, for diplomatic reasons, was accepted.

As time was an object, and the prospective guardship was still seven miles from his station, it was decided that the good ladies should be sent by road; their failure to appear on board is attributed to the vigilance of the military.

THE DATES WILL BE CHANGED

The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society announce that the dates of the performances will be changed from January 5th and 6th to Wednesday and Thursday, January 12th and 13th. To-night, Wednesday at 7.30 p.m., in St. John's Schoolroom, the grand dress rehearsal will be held. Members are enjoined to be strictly on time, so as to commence early as the whole play will be rehearsed. Do not wear the light opera dresses on the street. Change the light dresses in the rooms and run no risk of illness.—Richard J. Devey, Director.

TURKS ARE VEGETARIANS

Simplest of Fare Composes Menu at Constantinople

The fighting Turk is largely a vegetarian according to a sketch recently prepared by the National Geographic Society, which tells of the staples of the Turkish table and describes some of the favourite dishes of folk upon the Bosphorus. The sketch is as follows:

"Turkish fare is distinguished by its simplicity. The Turkish kitchen might be put at one end of the scale and the French kitchen at the other. The complexities of Parisian cookery demand a long and careful education for a clear comprehension of their values and for a proper appreciation, while the dishes of Constantinople at least those which appear upon the tables of Turks in the ordinary fortunes of life, are rudimentary.

"Vegetables, fruits and grafus are the staples of the Turkish kitchen. Breakfast on the Bosphorus consists of a small cup of Turkish coffee and a roll. At noon there is a bowl of sour milk (yaourt) and bread. Thick Turkish coffee is taken again in the afternoon to keep up the appetite for the principal meal, which comes at night. This meal includes, probably "pilaff" (meat and rice), several kinds of vegetables, pastry and thick coffee. The workman's meal is still more simple—a chunk of bread and an onion or a bunch of grapes."

DECREASE NOTED IN CHOLERA IN GALICIA

Weekly Number of Cases During August Reached 4,000.

The extent to which cholera followed the war into Austria-Hungary is shown by an official statement to the effect that the disease was epidemic only in Galicia, where the weekly number of cases in the month of August was from 1,300 to 4,000.

Since the middle of September of this year a rapid decrease was noted, and since the first week in October the number of cases occurring weekly has not exceeded 200.

Outside of Galicia there has been nothing resembling an epidemic. In the period from August 20 to October 2 there were, according to the official statement, only 140 cases in all Austria, with the exception of Galicia, Bowkowina and the coast districts. In the last named two places there were 198 cases in the period stated. There have been 48 cases in all Austria since October 2.

The maximum number of cases in Hungary never exceeded 4,000, a number which was reached in two weeks of June among Russian prisoners of war. Except for this the maximum was 600 cases in the beginning of August. Since September the number has remained under 100 cases per week.

DR. COOK FAILS TO GET INTO GERMANY

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 29.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, explorer, and his secretary, Dr. F. P. Thompson, called at the American Legation here. They expressed much disappointment because the legation would not furnish passports into Germany.

Dr. Cook and his secretary may appeal to the Washington government against the decision not to supply them with the desired passports, but as neither Dr. Cook nor Dr. Thompson has urgent business in Germany, it is said, the American Minister is holding to his decision.

TAX RISE BEGINS IN BADEN.

BERLIN, Dec. 29 (via London) — The movement for an increase of taxation by the German States has begun with Baden, where the Diet has just passed a bill increasing the income taxe 20 per cent. on incomes above 2,400 marks.

It was pointed out in the Reichstag on Monday that Prussia and Saxony also intend to increase their income tax rates.

IF YOU WANT A MAN FOR MAYOR WHO WILL HELP PETERBOROUGH TO GROW TO BIGGER AND BETTER THINGS, VOTE FOR G. WALTER GREEN, THE PEOPLES' CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

REASONS WHY

Peterborough Ratepayers should vote for and carry the By-Law to authorize the raising of $30,000 to purchase the Exhibition Grounds

Every elector who has the interests and welfare and progress of the city at heart should read and act upon the following presentation of the Exhibition By-Law matter:

The good name, the credit for enterprise, and the material, commercial, and business interests of the city are involved.

If Peterborough City and County are to have a creditable and successful exhibition, the present grounds must be acquired; and the only means is by the city making the purchase.

The present Exhibition grounds are held under lease, and with its tenure uncertain, it was not wise to erect new buildings to replace the dilapidated and inadequate structures that discouraged exhibitors and made a successful exhibition a difficult, if not impossible, matter; even under these discouraging and impossible conditions the lease and option for purchase expire on January 1st, 1917.

If the grounds are not purchased, the Society will be without a home, and the Exhibition will lapse, or at best languish.

Thus Peterborough's name for enterprise and the very substantial and moral advantages we derive from a successful exhibition will disappear.

The well-known grounds to be bought under the By-Law consist of thirty acres, centrally located and splendidly adapted for the purposes of an exhibition, and, in the intervals, for a public park and recreation grounds.

The price—$30,000—set by the option is a very reasonable one for so valuable a property.

The terms of payment make the annual payments easy and subject to regular reduction.

Nominally the city will have to pay, for interest and sinking fund, $2,807.46.

This will be immediately reduced by $600 a year, the amount of the grant the city makes and will otherwise continue to annually make to the Exhibition.

In the event of the purchase,, this $600 grant will at once cease, thus reducing the annual payment to $2,207.46.

Then the annual payments will in time be further reduced by the Society paying over to the city, after permanent buildings are erected and improvements made, the surplus receipts from the Exhibition.

These have averaged $700 a year for some time, some years going as high as $1,400.

With suitable buildings and conveniences and much more attractive and successful exhibitions, the greatly increased surplus applied to reduction of annual payment will go far towards meeting it entirely.

At any rate, the city will be relieved from the payment of the annual $600 grant; this added to a surplus payment of from $700 to $1,000 a year, will reduce the annual payment to between $1,500 and $1,200.

The City of Toronto receives of the surplus of the Canadian National Exhibition, from $50,000 to $60,000 a year, which represents at 6 per cent. the interest on nearly a million dollars.

The Society, securing the grounds as a permanent home, will put up suitable buildings and improvements that will warrant extending the time of exhibition to four or five days or a week, increase attendance and receipts, and keep the city filled with visitors, with the commercial benefit of their presence.

The present grounds, as a permanent exhibition home, are ideal, central, and served by street railway and convenient to river steamers.

They are the only suitable grounds available in or near the city. The Exhibition Directors have tried and can find no place as suitable, nor one with so many advantages, at so reasonable price, in the vicinity outside the city.

This property so valuable, so centrally situated, if it were available for private purchase, would not be unsold 24 hours.

The advantages are many, a few of which are:

The good name and credit of the city will be increased. What citizen would now take pride in taking a guest to the Exhibition, with its apologies for buildings and its makeshift conveniences?

With ownership of the grounds and adequate and creditable buildings, we could have the best exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa.

Peterborough is the natural centre of a rich, prosperous, and populous district, and we have only to take advantage of this to gain additional advantages.

With ownership of the grounds, we can have a vastly larger and vastly better exhibition, and attract more visitors.

The more visitors we can bring to the city, the greater the profit—the more money will be left in the city.

The average attendance at the yearly exhibition is between 15,000 and 20,000. Many of these are outsiders, who on an average leave in necessary expenditures and purchases, double or treble as many thousand dollars to the benefit of our business interests and the city at large.

With these numbers doubled or trebled by an improved exhibition, the benefits would be so much greater.

This would bring the county and district and the city together to the advantage of both, especially of the city.

These are only the beginning—the incidental advantages Peterborough would gain by the purchase of the grounds.

The chief advantage would be the acquirement of a splendid park and recreation grounds, of which the city would have the ownership and have sole use of, fifty-one weeks of the year, and virtually be the landlords of the Exhibition for one week—we shall own the grounds; the Exhibition will be our tenants one week a year.

Incidentally, we could use the buildings during the year for city purposes, for large conventions. By giving them nominally free to conventions, Grand Lodges, etc., we could make Peterborough a great centre for conventions, especially in summer, when our near-by river and waterways resorts present greater attractiveness.

It is stated that it is the intention of the Government to establish a Central Winter Fair like that held at Guelph every winter, to be located between Toronto and Ottawa. No better place, no place as centrally located, can be found in Central Ontario; and if we buy the grounds we can provide for the erection of buildings that will serve that and similar purposes, and make Peterborough another centre of attraction.' Some years ago a strong effort was made to get such a fair for Peterborough, but it fell through for lack of suitable buildings.

The park, with a neat iron and concrete enclosing fence, with fine buildings the Society will erect, with a few trees planted, and ornamental features added, would be a splendid and uncostly addition to our present park system.

For recreation purposes, it would be the only free, and by far the largest and best, park of that kind in the city, and would accommodate at one time all the leading games that appeal to the young people.

It is objected that the land is too valuable for exhibition purposes—it should be divided for building lots.

The grounds are under option to the Exhibition Directors, and cannot be gotten at the present price for speculative purposes.

They can only be got for exhibition purposes, nominally, but in reality for park purposes for nearly, the sole benefit of the city.

With the Society practically paying a large share of the price, we can certainly afford the purchase.

With all our parks in the northern part of the city, we have never paid a dollar for park purchase, except for a little ribbon alongside King Edward Park.

Taking the whole grounds purchase situation together, who can say that the many solid advantages it presents are not almost entirely in favour of the city?

The property is a bargain at the price, and it will be ours for park purposes the year round, except for the week or so we allow the Exhibition Directors the use of it.

The city is growing, and by purchase of the present grounds, we shall be prepared for the expansion of fifty years, and have a property for park uses, and for exhibition purposes (that will help pay for it), and a property that once paid for, will be a source of annual revenue. The exhibition surplus will be paid to the city—from $700 to $1,500 every year.

The property will grow in money-making value and convenience value, and at the same time provide us a park and exhibition of which we can be proud.

We shall be providing for ourselves an exhibition ten times larger and more crowd-drawing than is possible to make it now—or ever, if we neglect this golden opportunity.

We have a chance, not only to make Peterborough the Exhibition centre and hub of Middle Ontario,

But we can make it the business centre, the social centre, the educational centre of the wide expanse of splendid country on every side of us.

We want to set up cordial relations between the people of the district, to get their business, to get their good will; to get them into the habit of coming to Peterborough.

To do this, we must offer them attractions such as our merchants and business men provide.

But we must emphasize and make these known through the medium of an annual exhibition that will attract the whole district.

That will make Peterborough talked of, thought of, as having the best exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa.

If we can get the people of the surrounding districts to get the Peterborough habit—the habit of coming to Peterborough—our merchants and business men, and the whole city, will reap the substantial advantage.

Ratepayers, think it over. It is for you to decide—whether you want an exhibition at all, and if you want one, that it shall be one that is a credit to the city, that we can be proud of, that will attract visitors and money in thousands.

You can only have this by buying the Exhibition grounds—at a low price, or price that will be largely paid by outsiders.

If we buy the grounds, we shall have the exhibition and all its advantages, and into the bargain, have a splendid thirty-acre park all our own:

And once paid for, the Exhibition will pay us an annual dividend in the shape of return of surplus.

Reason the matter out, and you will see that it is good business to buy, and will be folly to let the chance slip.

Duffus As Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes and sympathy and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for six years, during which time I have served on all standing committees, on many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as chairman of most of the committees, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the working of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present election, in summing up the situation I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that with six years' experience the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for six years to fail to offer my services at this time.

The City's Finances.

In these days when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city's affairs.

The City is to be congratulated upon the manner in which its finances have been handled during 1915. We have maintained a very rapid rate of progress and yet have reserved for the demands of the near future in connection with our sewers, sewage disposal plan, schools and other public works that are either inevitable, or to which we are pledged. It is with some pride that I can say that your Board of Aldermen are not only free from serious reproach or scandal, but that among municipalities it may safely be said that we stand as representatives of the highest type of municipal financial integrity. The Tax rate of the city has been held down to a point which is an evidence of the most economical government, consistent with prudence and wisdom. As to the financial position at the close of this year, it is always difficult to tell definitely until the Auditor has completed his work for the year, how the current accounts will close. We have had a number of unexpected expenditures, especially with regard to military matters in making grants to assist the Overseas battalions, and these I believe every one will approve of. Even with these unexpected outlays we hope to close the year with a balance on the right side.

There is about $30,000.00 of taxes unpaid, and a balance of $14,467.77 which has been paid on hydro-electric account and to be refunded from capital account when the matter is straightened up. With these and other items of revenue we expect that the revenue and expenditure will at least balance.

Our Fire Department.

The excellence of our Fire Department is recognized not only by our own citizens, but also throughout the Province. The relations of the Chief of the fire brigade with his men and with the Council may be regarded as of the most harmonious. The lowering of the insurance rate, and the protection which the city enjoys has been favourably commented on by Fire Underwriters, and must be a source of gratification to the public.

Utilities Commission.

The members of the Utilities Commission and the Council are to be congratulated on the attention they have given to the installation of the new auxiliary pumping engines which so successfully provides for fire protection to the city in the future in the event of difficulties arising with our regular water pumping system.

New Bridge Over the Otonabee.

From a careful study of the local situation I am strongly of the opinion that a new bridge over the Otonabee river in one of those essential improvements which must come as soon as the financial conditions of the country have resumed their normal state. The present inadequate accommodation is retarding the progress of a large portion of very desirable residential and business sections.

Sewage and Surface Drainage.

Much attention will have to be directed to our sewage disposal with the object of disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of by helping to pollute the waters of the Otonabee.

The successful completion of the outfall sewer, and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected, these will have my closest and most careful attention.

Completion of surface draining system for the whole city is another very important matter that should engage the attention of next year's Council, and I promise it will not be longer delayed than its urgency demands.

General Policy for 1916.

I am strongly opposed to any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions. Prudence and economy would seem to indicate that on streets where much wear is constantly going on, and which require extensive repairs, a roadbed of tar macadam or concrete, with concrete curb and gutter, would amply serve the purpose. I have had occasion, as your representative to attend the Annual Roads Conventions held in the City of Toronto; and being specially interested in road building I have taken a live interest in this matter. Having regard to our local conditions and the nature of the valuable material available on the spot for this purpose, the City would be in a position to do its own work, employ its own labour, and disburse its paving expenditures among our own people.

I am in favour of the developing of the country by radial lines of railway. This matter has engaged the attention of the Mayor and Council during the year, and the indications seems to be for an early beginning of this work, and I propose to do everything in my power to advance this in our city interest.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city. I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of these interests, such as would be consistent with good citizenship.

The City is to be congratulated upon the general character of the public servants. Their fidelity and intelligence have resulted in a prompt, efficient and satisfactory despatch of municipal business. I think the heads of departments should formally meet with the Mayor occasionally during the year that the discussions at these meetings might prove of great value in the work of the City's Government.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and private citizens, to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to letigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

I have frequently urged the necessity of water mains, fire protection, water and sewage accommodation, for the northern portion of East City, including Auburn.

I have taken a deep interest in the effective lighting of the city and have always maintained that more light and fewer policemen would serve the city more economically and to better advantage.

The securing of new industries, consistent with the best interests of our city, has always had, and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your own hands. During the past 15 years, faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards, and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be an assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated.

I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election will increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past, and the hope that the year 1916 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

WARNING AGAINST KISSING

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 29.—A public warning was issued by Dr Alvin W. Klein, head of the Department of Public Health, here, against unnecessary kissing as a precaution any step to check the spread of grip and pneumonia. One hundred cases of pneumonia have been reported in Greenwich during the week.

Other preventive measures suggested include warnings to keep away from air currents, not to mix in crowds such as gather in stores and trolley cars and to check colds in their first stages.

Prince Discusses Future If Britain Became a Republic.

The Prince of Wales is not at all alarmed by the views of many that Great Britain will become a republic after the war.

On one of his recent flying visits to London from the front he was discussing the question of what would happen if such a change came about.

He is quoted as saying he would not at all be surprised if a republic should follow from the inevitable social and political upheaval which every one recognizes must follow the war.

Asked what he would do if the monarchy went by the board, the Prince replied that for his own part he was perfectly prepared to become a motor mechanic and go into the automobile business.

He suggested that his brother, Prince Henry, should become a carpenter, the King a master mariner and Princess Mary a horse breaker.

King Edward, discussing a similar possibility, once declared that he would ask Sir Thomas Lipton to take him into partnership.

Articles Found In a Wound

Exploding Shell Filled it With Queer Collection.

Here is a fact, writes a British officer in Flanders, which I had direct from a surgeon who was down at the last Loos attack. A man was brought into the field ambulance with a wound in the right groin. The projectile had torn away the flesh exposing, but not touching, the femoral artery. Then it buried itself in the left thigh. He dug it out and in the order named excavated:

(2) Bone shaft of same.

(4) The projectile. It was the screw ring of the head of a German shell. (I saw and handled it) and the thread was as perfect as the day it left Krupp's.

The man is doing well.

FRENCH SOLDIER'S AMUSING LOGIC

With Alternatives in All Situations He Exposes Futility of Worrying.

The following amusing philosophical essay on the futility of worrying was contained in a letter sent from the front by a French Sub-Lieutenant, who started in the war as a private:

"There are always in our actual life two alternatives; experience has proved that in each case one should not worry, and here is why:

"Being at the depot, for instance, there are two alternatives: You are sent to the front, or you go to the base; if you go to the base, you won't worry, it's clear; if you leave for the front, there are two alternatives: you are in the zone under bombardment or in a zone which is not; in the last case you won't worry, of course; if you are in the bombardment zone, there are also two alternatives: the bombs burst, or they don't; if they don't, you only need to laugh; if they burst, there are two alternatives: you are hurt, or you are not; w you have only a little excitement, no need to worry; but if you are hurt, there are two alternatives: you are badly or lightly wounded; in the last case, you have your wounds dressed, and you don't worry at all; in the other case, there are two alternatives: you die or you don't; in the first case, it's clear, you don't worry any more; in the second, there are two alternatives: they amputate, or they don't; if you are amputated upon, you are discharged and you wouldn't worry any more; in the two cases they bring you to a hospital where you are nursed by nice little ladies, and then, less than ever, you won't worry; but in the second case there are two alternatives: on your recovery they send you to a depot or to a convalescent home; if you go to a convalescent home, it's easy life, and you won't worry, but if you are sent back to a depot, there are still two alternatives: you are sent to the front, or to the base—see the beginning."

WAR TAXES EXCEED THE EXPECTATIONS

Now Assured More than 150 Millions Revenue Aimed at Will be Realized by the End Fiscal Year

NEW TAXATION MAY BECOME UNNECESSARY

It is now clear that the war budget of February last will yield not only the $400,000,000 aimed at by Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, but many millions additional. The special taxation upon banks trust and loan companies, upon railway and parlour car tickets and telegraph companies, is quite up to expectations. The stamp tax upon cheques and drafts and the increased postal tax have given substantial returns.

The tariff increases of five and seven and a half per cent. have not only added greatly to the revenues of the Dominion, but have given an impetus to all Canadian industries. If the revenue continues to mount until the end of the fiscal year, it would be unnecessary and that Canada's income seem that new taxation will not be will enable her to pay a substantial part of her war expenditure.

Our Bounding Revenue.

On account of the bounding revenue and decreased expenditure it has been possible for the Finance Department to pay Canada's war expenditure in Canada since July last and to make advances from time to time to the Shell Committee for Imperial treasury account.

Between increased revenue and diminished expenditure the financial position of the Dominion on ordinary and capital account is at least 55 million dollars more favourable than it was this time last year when the revenues were being cut in half by dislocation of business resulting from the outbreak of war.

SUBMARINES PASS INTO MARMORA SEA

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that recent storms carried away the booms constructed by the Turks across the narrows in the Dardanelles, and that, profiting by the opportunity, many of the Allies' submarines passed into the Sea of Marmora.

Many heavy guns destined for the expedition against Egypt continue to arrive at Constantinople. The German staff at Constantinople is credited with the intention of mounting these guns behind sand dunes at a great distance in order to bombard and destroy the works at the Suez Canal.

FATALLY HURT ON WEDDING ERRAND

NEW YORK, December 29.—Samuel Berkowits, tailer, of No. 187 Allen street, was crushed by an automobile while crossing Lenox avenue north of West 143nd street last evening. Hubert Latimer of No. 893 East 166th street, the Bronx, the chauffeur, helped policeman Kilduff place Mr. Berkowits in the automobile and then drove to Harlem Hospital. The latter's skull, jaws, left arm, ribs and left hip were fractured. His death was expected before morning.

Mr. Berkowits was identified through a package of invitations to the wedding of his son, Benjamin, and which were found in his pocket. He was on an errand in relation to the wedding. Mrs. Louis Lewis of No. 940 Simpson street, wife of the owner, and her daughter, Miss Etta Lewis, were in the automobile at the time. Witnesses told the police that Mr. Berkowits stepped from behind a street car in front of the automobile.

JOHNNY POE LIES IN UNMARKED GRAVE

"So Many Died" That Dot at Hollock Letter Explains.

BUFFALO, Dec. 29.—The first news of how and where Johnny Poe, the famous Princeton athlete and "soldier of fortune," died has been received by his mother, Mrs. John P. Poe, of Baltimore, in a letter written to Neville Higham, New York, an Englishman and a friend of Nelson Poe, a brother of Johnny Poe, who resides in New York.

The information came direct from an officer of the Black Watch named Stewart, who was with Poe when he died. He states that Johnny Poe fell on September 25 during the rush of the Black Watch in front of Hollock and was shot dead.

"'He fell on September 25 during the rush in front of Hollock and was shot dead,'" Mr. Higham's letter explains. "Stewart said he was the most popular fellow in the company, having refused offered promotion. They thought a lot of him for having been in the horse artillery."

Information has also been received by Mr. Poe's family that everything possible is being done to locate the body.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

LINDSAY TEAM WILL BE HERE TO-MORROW STAYING IN RACE

Scugogville Team Has Decided To Remain in The Intermediate Group So The First Game of The Season Will Be Played Here To-morrow Night

Fans will be glad to learn that after all Lindsay Intermediates have decided to stay in the O.H.A. race, and they will be here to-morrow night for the opening game of the season The Lindsay Club notified the Electrics yesterday morning that they had decided to drop out, but after talking the matter over, determined to fight it out for the group honours, and, accordingly sent word yesterday afternoon that they were in to stay, and they will be down to-morrow night with a strong team prepared to take the scalps of Jerry Coughlin's crew. The sudden change in the weather has made good ice certain and the fans may look forward to a red-hot game between the two old rivals There was keen disappointment in town yesterday when it was learned that Lindsay had decided not to stay in, and there will be corresponding rejoicing when it is known that the Scugogville outfit will be down in full force to-morrow night. That a big crowd will be in attendance goes with out saying.

MATTY'S VERSATILITY IS QUITE NOTABLE

There is no man in baseball, nor has there been for 10 years, who is making the money that Christy Mathewson has made on practically no investment. For a long time Matty was the highest salaried man in the game. Last year he got $5,200 for 52 baseball stories and an occasional magazine contribution. He has an insurance business, which dovetails with the diamond game. He has good investments by reason of the entree he gained through his baseball connections. He's said to be worth $150,000, although always a conservative manipulator. But:

He's now the best golf player in baseball.

Only Bob Wallace can make things interesting for him in billiards.

Nobody in baseball can make things interesting for Matty in chess or checkers. He has toured the Y.M.C.A.'s on exhibition tours.

He plays a better hand of bridge than anybody in his profession, so good that his income from this alone is not to be spooted at.

He can play poker so well that he'll break up a game by merely "Sittin' in."

JUNIORS PRACTICE TO-NIGHT AT 7

The Electric Juniors will visit Campbellford on Saturday, New Year's Day, for an exhibition game with Tommy Moffatt's Campbellford youngsters. In view of this fact it is important that every Junior player should be out to practice at Brock St. Rink to-night at 7 o'clock. The line-up for Campbellford will likely be selected after this practice.

CURLING

The following is the draw for the annual games on New Year's between the President and Vice-President of the club.

ORDERS FINES OF MILLIONS.

Heavy Punishment for Illegal Distilling at Bonn.

BONN, Rhenish Prussia, Dec. 28 — Fines aggregating more than 25,000,000 marks (approximately $6,500,000 at normal exchange) have been imposed here on three distilleries for excise frauds. The chief offender was fined 15,333,000 marks ($3,833,250).

All three also were sentenced to serve terms in prison.

PICTURE POSTCARDS AS A SECRET CODE

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The sly use of picture postal cards to convey secret information to the enemy, lies back of the order issued by the Post Office authorities this week putting the ban in future upon any such cards going to neutral countries. The order, which puts an end, for the rest of the war, to a tremendous flood of picture postals every week, has been put into effect at the instance of the War Office.

Inquiry in official channels indicates that for months the authorities had been suspicious that a crafty system of putting the enemy in touch with war secrets had been initiated by furtive agents resorting to the innocent-looking picture card.

The Government put detectives at work at the first flush of suspicion, and a careful watch was kept. After one of the Zeppelin raids it was discovered that several picture postals which looked harmless enough of themselves, were mailed to certain addresses on the Continent. The postals showed scenes of London. They were mailed in a sequence that aroused suspicion that they were being used as a code to indicate where the Zeppelins inflicted their damage.

After another raid another set of cards was despatched to the same place on the Continent, although in a different sequence. Practically the same cards were used, but they were changed around. The authorities came then to the conclusion that without doubt a systematic code existed in which the photographed sights of London were being seized upon as the means of carrying it out. They easily blocked this avenue of dissemination of enemy news by stopping the mailing of cards to the particular place under suspicion.

But it was felt that other codes might be arranged, and that in a roundabout way information might still be imparted to the enemy by the picture postals, not only as to Zeppelin raids, but other war matters. So the order stopping any of them going to neutral countries was hit upon. In future the only cards allowed to go must be placed within envelopes, and they must be plain ones, with handwriting upon them, but no pictures of London scenes.

The enforcement of the new order has put an almost absolute stop to the sale of picture postals, which ran up into the millions in London every week. Shopkeepers have huge stocks on their hands that they cannot hope to dispose of before the war is over.

It is hinted that later on the authorities will extend the picture postcard ban to those coming into the country.

Grand Jury Indicts Sing Sing's Warden

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Dec. 29.—Thomas Osborne, warden of Sing Sing Prison, was indicted on six counts by the county grand jury which has been investigating conditions at the prison.

The first count charged that Osborne absented himself from the prison. The second embraced allegations that the warden failed to perform the duties imposed upon him; that he permitted fights among the prisoners; that he failed to prevent felonies in the prison, and that he failed to report immorality among the prisoners.

The third count charged the warden with permitting convicts to go into the death house to visit Charles Becker. The fourth count charged Osborne with failure to maintain proper discipline and the fights between the convicts. The sixth count contains allegations against the moral character of the warden in his relations with the prisoners.

WARSAW, Dec. 28.—Even more depressing than parts of Belgium and East Prussia, the worst parts, is Poland—a land of graves and trenches, of ruin and destruction on a scale that has been wrought nowhere else by the war. The conflict has been waged back and forth across the ancient kingdom so long that agriculture has had but little chance, and, except in those sections where the German forces have been in control for some time, the fields are barren and untilled, scarred by miles upon miles of earthworks.

From the East Prussian boundary to approximately the old Rawko position there is visible the maximum amount of order and peaceful quiet. At the Rawka, however, the interminable graves with their helmet adorned crosses, the deep slashes in the earth that once were trenches but now are the temporary 'homes' of countless refugees, the maze of partly destroyed barbed wire entanglements and the succession of burned and ruined villages begin.

For miles, between Alexandrovo on the boundary and Warsaw, and between Warsaw and Lodz, the old trenches line the railroad, while graves, individual and common, line the trenches. Eastward of Warsaw, however, the trenches virtually stop, for the Russians moved fast once they abandoned the capital of Poland. The trenches stop, but the devasted villages do not. Rather they increase in number, and there is scarcely a railroad station—and no bridges—left standing.

The Poles from time immemorial have been accustomed to building their thatched cottages—huts would be a better word—close together. Accordingly, it was necessary only to set fire to one structure in order to burn them all. In consequence, countless villages have been reduced to forlorn rows of chimneys, which, being of brick and stoutly built, resisted the flames.

Unlike the cities of Poland, the country seems to have been stripped of young men. One sees little else than peasant women, barefoot, ill clad, who struggle under bundles of wood through the mud, and who generally avert their eyes as strangers pass.

The Germans, partly for their own benefit, partly to give employment to the Poles, have done much to put the notoriously bad roads in shape. They have also altered the railroad from the Russian to the German gauge—a stupendous work, for all the main lines are now double track, and at important points huge yards have had to be built to conform to military needs.

The destruction in many parts of Poland is so general that village after village has no single house standing. Both soldiers and the civil population have had to rely on their inventiveness to obtain shelter, and all along the railroad lines freight cars, Russian and German, are being used as houses. In the case of the Russian cars the wheels have been removed, the cars have been set flat on the ground and the interiors fitted up with some degree of comfort.

PREDICTS A DRIVE ON ADRIANOPLE

Gen. Hutchison U.S.A. Believes This is Intention of Allies at Saloniki

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hutchison, formerly an officer in the Tennessee National Guard who served in the Spanish-American war and was a General of artillery in the Greek army during the Balkan wars, has returned from Greece, after two months' study of the present war situation there, which he says convinces him that the Allies contemplate an early drive from Saloniki to Adrianople. It was intimated to him, he says, that the Allies were counting on the success of this movement through the co-operation of the Russians in holding back the forces of the central powers while the French, English and Italians cut off the Turks

General Hutchison, who got back on the Greek steamer Ioannina, which by the way, was stopped by a submarine in the Mediterranean, but was permitted to proceed after showing the Greek flag, was at the Waldorf yesterday. He said:

"The allied forces at Saloniki are much larger than has been indicated by the press reports. I was in Greece from Oct. 1 to Dec. 1, and spent two days studying the situation at Saloniki—Nov. 9 and 10. The English and French had immense forces there, fully 200,000 at that time, and the numbers have been materially increased daily. The Mediterranean swarms with transports and other ships of the Allies.

"At Athens I met Lord Kitchener, who arrived on a British cruiser and remained just four hours, seventy minutes of which time he spent in a conference with King Constantine. After that he had a brief interview with the Greek Prime Minister. About the time of Kitchener's arrival some foodstuffs were seriously affected by the blockade of the Allies. Wheat was particularly scarce, and the hotels were serving sour bread to their guests. Kitchener relieved this situation very quickly.

"According to some of the reports from Greece, the people there were hostile to the Allies. I found the situation to be directly opposite, particularly toward the French. In fact, the people seemed to be pro-French. Evidence of the strong national feeling against the Bulgarians was to be seen on all sides."

"From Saloniki to Algiers we constantly passed transports and submarines, torpedo boats, and other warships of the Allies. Many of the war vessels were patrolling in search of Austrian and German submarines, twenty of which were reported to be in those waters. We heard at Algiers that two transports of a fleet we had passed had been sunk by the enemy submarines. I have not been able to find any admission of this in the published reports.

"I had a good opportunity to study the defensive works of the Allies at Saloniki. The conditions indicate that they cannot be driven from their po-

WAR HURTS LONDON CLUBS

Many Members Withdraw and Receipts Shrink Heavily.

LONDON, Dec. 27. — War has caused great hardship to all London's clubs except those connected with the army and navy. Resignations pour into the clubs from members whose incomes have been curtailed, and many who formerly dined at clubs now dine at home by reason of war economy. The no-treat and early closing orders have seriously shortened the bar receipts. Moreover, the cost of food and service is steadily advancing.

One well known club in Piccadilly dropped its entrance fees this week, so as to get in new members, and another large club will face the end of the year with a decline in its income amounting to several thousand dollars.

COAL FAMINE THREATENS MANY STATES IN EAST

Attributed to Lack of Transportation and Dearth of Labor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The coal man holds out a gloomy prospect of a coal famine in New York and New England, unless conditions are much improved shortly. Even with good weather for several months to come, the situation will be serious the coal man says.

All of the coal men agreed that the principal difficulty is one of transportation, although if that were solved they would still have to face the difficulty of getting labour at the mines. The average production for many months at the mines has not been more than 60 per cent. of the normal. The coal merchants say that the labor shortage is due to the call for men in the munition industry and that many of the laborers have returned to Europe to fight.

The transportation problem is not confined to the railroads by any means. The prices on barges and lighters have in a short time quadrupled and so great is the pressure for bottoms that a condition bordering on piracy exists in the harbor. One factor in the scarcity of barges for coal is that many ordinarily used for that purpose have been taken over for other purposes.

46 Parliamentary Vacancies Due to Deaths Since War Began.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—The recent death of Marie Edouard Vaillant, Unified Socialist Deputy from the Deparment of the Seine, and that of Edmond Marie Chapuis, Radical Republican Deputy from the Department of Jura, bring up to forty-nine the number of vacancies in the French Parliament due to deaths since the war began. These seats no doubt will not be filled until after the cessation of hostilities.

MASON FOR 77 YEARS IS DEAD AT HUNDRED

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 27—Daniel Hollinger, aged 100, thought to be the oldest Freemason in the country, died at Winthrop.

Three weeks ago the Grand Lodge here conferred upon him the degree of Past Grand Senior Deacon. He was a native of Bavaria, and was made a Mason at Brookfield, Indiana, 77 years ago.

INVALIDED SOLDIER DROWNED AT ST. JOHN

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 29.—Despite the fact that an escort of nine men, in charge of a medical officer, were detailed to guard a detachment of six Canadian soldiers returned from the front because of their mental condition brought about by great strain, and to see that the mentally incapacitated soldiers were returned to their different divisions, one of the soldiers, Private J. R. W. Scott, who joined the colours at Vancouver, lost his life here by jumping off the New Bridge at the Falls.

Scott, who was considered the most normal of the party of six, was placed in the rear. As the party got on the bride his hat blew off. He made a plunge to recover it, failed, and then chased it. A few steps brought him to the railing and over he went, though one of the soldiers of the guard managed to seize a portion of his garment and with others who came up held him for a time. The strain was too great, however, and after dangling for a time in the air, he fell into the water beneath, and no trace of the body could be found.

EPIDEMIC OF GRIP SWEEPING THE WEST

Worst in Twenty-five Years in Chicago —Business Houses Are Crippled.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—A virulent epidemic of grip prevails in this city and throughout the Middle West. It is the worst outbreak in twenty-five years. In Chicago public school attendance has decreased and business generally has been crippled.

The department stores, overwhelmed with holiday trade, have been handicapped by the illness of employes. Thousands of extra employes have been engaged to replace regular employes disabled by illness. One big concern with more than 12,000 employees, it is said, was forced to hire 1,000 extra employes to replace absentees. Approximately 85,000 school children, according to Board of Health physiians, are ill with the grip.

THREE NOTABLES SAIL.

Col. House, Brand Whitlock and Captain Boy-Ed.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Three men who figure prominently in the diplomatic relations of the United States have cabins on the Holland-American Line setamship Rotterdam, which left here yesterday for Rotterdam by way of Falmouth, Eng. They are

Col. E. M. House, friends and confidential adviser of President Wilson, who goes to Europe at the request of the President.

Captain Karl Boy-Ed, formerly Naval Attache of the German Embassy at Washington, who was recalled by the German State Government because of "improper activities in naval matters."

Marengo's Good Showing For Patriotic Purposes

Mr. J. L. Hatton, a former Peterborough County resident, sends the Examiner an interesting clipping from a western paper and writes as follows:

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Enclosed find clipping re Patriotic Fund Morengo. Please publish same in your valuable paper We get the "Weekly" and enjoy it every time it arrives.

Although we had no crop last season, 1914, and had to be supplied feed and seed, and, in many cases, food, by the Government, yet we raised threehundred and twenty-five dollars ($325.00) for the Patriotic Fund. We have, therefore, sent $1050.00 from our little town in cash, besides the Patriotic amount given by farmers, and the private parcels sent to the boys in the trenches by the Ladies' id and other agencies.

With the compliments of the seaso I am,

Yours ver ytruly,

J. L. Hatton.

The clipping is as follows:

When it comes down to producing a large yield of cash for the Patriotic Fund from a small field of workers the honours for Saskatchewan should just about go to Marengo. The Marengo committee of the Saskatchewan branch of the Patriotic Fund arranged a box social and dance for last Thursday evening, and the result, after payment of expenses, was a cash contribution to the provincial fund of $725. The receipts for the evening were $750 and the expenses amounted to $25.

Marengo is a metropolis of about 150 people, but on this occasion it drew upon surrounding points for friends and bidders, so that during the evening there was considerable sprinkling of visitors. The promoters of the affair freely express appreciation of the co-operation of these visiting friends and of the ladies' aid of Marengo.

The boxes for the sale were donated and the selling was conducted by J. L. Hatton, who made a very efficient auctioneer.

The affair wound up with a dance which was greatly enjoyed. W. G. Williams and Ben George, Marengo men who were present, are in Saskatoon for Christmas and they assured a reporter for The Star that the sale and dance was in every respect an unqualified success.

Officers of the Marengo Patriotic Fund committee are M. McLeod, president; F. Fowley, vice-president; F. E. Smith, secretary-treasurer, assisted by a large committee

No. 5---Diseases of the Eyes

THERE are conditions of the eyes in some cases, that cannot be properly corrected by the mere use of eye-glasses, although glasses may help while treatment is being undergone. There may be found to exist a growing cataract, or other surface disease of the eyes or lids, which must be treated by a qualified oculist, and when such cases come to Mr. Fowler, he does not hesitate to direct the party to the oculist where they can be cared for properly. Mr. Fowler does not experiment with glasses at the expense of the patient when he knows that the eyes require a physician's care, and anyone with eye troubles may come to him with the utmost confidence that they will not be imposed on with expensive attempts to fix up eyes that should be under the oculist's care. In these cases he will fit only such glasses as are prescribed by the physician.

POLAND'S PLIGHT WORST.

4,500,000 Refugees Living in Holes and in Trees.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—After inspecting all the countries in Europe that have suffered through the war on behalf of the Committee of Mercy, W. H. Hamilton of 10 Wall street, who returned on the Rotterdam, said that Poland was in the worst plight by far.

"There is not a building standing intact," he said "along the Russian line of retreat. They even tore down the side of the cathedral in Warsaw to get out the bells to make ammunition out of. When I was in Warsaw three weeek ago, I saw 1,500 of men, women, and children, standing in a bread line, with the temperature below zero, to get the daily ration of a bowl of carrot soup and a quarter of a pound of bread. Many of the men were shoeless and their feet were frozen so that they could barely move on them. The women had torn up their clothing to wrap round the feet of their children.

"The Germans have barely sufficient supplies to feed their army in Poland, and therefore these poor people must starve to death unless America feeds them. There are 175,000 refugees in Warsaw and 4,500,000 altogether in Poland who are living chiefly in holes dug in the ground and in the trees in the forests. If something is not done to aid them at once there will be no need to send provisions to them, because they will be dead."

Where vegetables are frozen hard, especially potatoes, leave them in cold water for a considerable time perhaps an hour if frozen very hard Do not attempt to thaw anything of the kind in hot water, nor by placing it near the fire. By doing either the flavor of the vegetable will be spoiled.

No Trace Found Of Mr. Thorne

His Wife Still Vainly Seeks Tidings of Wealthy Real Estate Operator

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—No news had been received by Mrs. Richard Van Wyck Thorne, of No. 130 East Sixty-fourth street concerning the whereabouts of her husband, a wealthy real estate operator, who left home on Thursday, December 16, and has not been seen since. Agency detectives and friends are making a thorough search for the missing man.

Mr. Thorne, who is forty years old left home on the morning of his disappearance bound for his office at No. 180 Broadway. When he did not return home for dinner that evening his wife communicated with his business associates and learned that Mr. Thorne had not been at his office at any time during the day.

Mrs. Thorne did not become worried, however, for her husband frequently had been called out of town suddenly on business. She decided to defer taking any further steps to find him until the next day. No news came, and then a wide search was begun, without result.

Mr. Thorne attended Columbia University and later took a course at the Columbia Law School. Soon after leaving college he entered the real estate business. He was married two years ago.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

A Gloomy Outlook.

Small Johnny was wriggling and twisting in a vain endeavour to put his arms through the sleeves of an undergarment, and then get it over his head. After several futile attempts he called out to his mother—"Say, when I get to be an angel and have wings I don't see how I'll ever get my shirt on!"

Two Austrian Destroyers Sunk In Naval Action With Allied Squadron

ARMIES JOIN FORCES

PARIS, Dec. 30.—The Austrian destroyer "Litta" was blown up by a mine, and the destroyer "Triglav" sunk in a naval action with the Allied squadron in the Adriatic off Durazzo, the Ministry of Marine announced today.

"An Austrian squadron left Cattario to bombard Durazzo and encountered an Allied squadron which gave battle," said the official communique. "The Austrian destroyer Litta was blown up by a mine, and the destroyer Triglav was sunk. The other enemy ships fled.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Important developments in both the "Ancona" and "Lusitania" negotiations are momentarily expected. Information from Berlin is that the German Government is planning to present views of the Lusitania case shortly. Austria's "Ancona" note may arrive to-day or to-morrow. Delay in receiving word of the despatch of Austria's note on the "Ancona" puzzled officials.

Both the State Department and Austrian Embassy have been advised that the note was completed and scheduled for presentation Tuesday to Ambassador Penfield.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Cabinet crisis over conscription is over. No resignations are expected. Ireland is likely to be excluded from the issue. It is said the main body of the Labour party will support the Government.

ROME, Dec. 30.—Prince William of Wied, former ruler of Albania, has reorganized Albania troops in the region west of Prisrend and has begun an attack on the Serbs east of Scutari.

The Prince of Weid counts on clearing Albania of Serbian and Italian troops and reoccupying the throne with the consent of the Central Empires.

BERLIN ADMITS FRENCH GAINS ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Severe Fighting Continues—Russian Troops are Making Good Progress in The East—Swedish Forts Opened Fire on Two German Torpedo Boats—Allen Vessels Preparing to Make a Dash For The Sea in Event of a Break Between Austria and The United States.

ITALIAN TROOPS ADVANCE

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—French forces entered several German trenches on Hartmannsweilerkopf, but fighting continues.

PETROGRAD, Dec. 30.—Gen Ivanoff's troops have made good progress in attacks on Czernowitz.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Fifty-five bags of contraband rubber consigned to German agents in Sweden were removed from the Ford peace ship at Kirkwall, it was officially announced.

CHRISTIANIA, Dec. 30.—Swedish forts opened fire on two German torpedo boats which were pursuing Swedish steamers in neutral waters.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—All German and Austrian vessels in port here are provisioning and preparing for withdrawal in case of a break between Austria and the United States. Arrangements have been made for clearance papers already.

PARIS, Dec. 30.—Italian troops from Albania have reached Epirus. Italians were also seen in Southern Albanian points.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—War Office reported that English monitors again were bombarding the Belgian coast at Westende.

WAR TIME COOKERY SCHOOL ON WHEELS—One of the features of the "wave of economy" now spreading over England, is the system of domestic science travelling schools sent out all over the country by the Government to teach more economical cooking and feeding. The photograph shows the interior of one of these schools, with the boys as well as the girls being taught to fry sausages and bacon.

Resentment In Austria Against German Spirit Of Self-Assertion Grows

Military and Political Circles in Vienna Fear Kaiser is Using Hapsburg Armies to Draw His Own Chestnuts From Fire and That, Whoever Wins War Austria-Hungary will Be The Loser.

BERNE, London, Dec. 30.—News from Vienna of the resentment steadily increasing in Austrian military and political circles against the overbearing German ally justifies the belief that the Kaiser's recent trip to Vienna—undertaken suddenly and in great haste—was intended to bring about the adjustment of certain difference of opinion, which threatened to disturb the harmonious relations between the two Central Empires. The irritation felt in Vienna is very natural and can easily be understood.

In the earlier stages of the war, when the Eastern front was left mainly to the Austrians, the flood of Russian invasion rose till it reached the Carpathians and threatened to engulf the whole Hapsburg monarchy. Then the Germans took charge and the Russians were driven out of Austria far into their own country. The Austrian invasion of Serbia ended in December last in a disastrous defeat; the Serbian campaign organized and led by Germany was successfully completed within two months. In both cases Germany's success was a humiliation for Austria, and it is not surprising that the prevailing feeling in Vienna, especially among Austrian officers, is one of resentment rather than gratitude for services rendered. Moreover, the Germans with their lack of understanding of other people's feeling have intensified the irritation by adopting toward the Austrians an exasperating attitude of arrogance mingled with condescension.

But the Austrians have more tangible reasons for dissatisfaction with their ruthless ally. The announcement in the daily report of the German General Staff of November 27 that "the main operations against the Serbians have thus concluded" was a most painful surprise to the Emperor Francis Joseph and his advisers, who were under the impression that the joint Balkan campaign was to be carried to a more definite termination. In responsible Vienna circles it is considered to be a matter of vital importance to Austria for the armies of the Central Empires to overrun Montenegro, to crush the remnants of the Serbian army and to occupy the whole of the Eastern Adriatic coast down to the Greek frontier before Italy has time to strengthen her foothold at Avlona.

Ending Balkan Campaign

But the balance of power in the Adriatic, closely as it effects Austria, is a matter of secondary importance to Germany, and the Great General Staff refused to incur heavy losses in a difficult mountain campaign at a moment when all the available troops are needed for other purposes. Consequently, the German commander in chief of the joint forces fighting against Serbia, Field Marshal von Mackensen, simply broke off the main operations, in accordance with the requirements of German policy without consulting the supreme Austrian military authorities in Vienna. This was November 27, by which time the annoyance felt at the Emperor Francis Joseph's court had been plainly communicated to Berlin.

In regard to the Isonzo campaign there also is a divergency of opinion between Vienna and Berlin. The Italians are pressing very hard in the direction of Trieste, and any further progress would be a severe blow to Austrian prestige; consequently there is a strong feeling in Vienna that any troops liberated from action against the Serbians should, at least, be concentrated in a supreme effort to repel the Latin invaders from Austrian soil. But Germany is more interested in fighting her own adversaries than in rescuing the Austrians from defeat at the hands of the Italians, with whom it is not even officially at war. Ont the other hand, Austria has no interest whatever in the proposed Egyptian adventure which Germany, supported by the Turks, is bent on attempting in the immediate future.

Nor are these the only points of policy on which Berlin and Vienna cannot agree. Germany, always generous with the belongings of others, is eager to make a final bid for Roumanian support by inducing the Emperor Francis Joseph to cede Transylvania to Roumania. This proposal is repugnant alike to the aged monarch and to the Hungarians. Germany, again bartering property not her own, has suggested that Hungary's assent to the cession of Transylvania might be purchased by separating Galicia and Bukovina from Austria and adding them to the territories of the Hungarian crown; but this proposal is not acceptable to either Austria or Hungary.

To what extent and in what way the Kaiser has succeeded in smoothing over all these difficulties remains to be seen but, whatever he may have achieved, he has certainly been unable to dispel the uneasiness prevalent in responsible Austrian circles regarding the future of the Hapsburg monarchy. The fear that, whatever may be the outcome of the war Austria is bound to lose in becoming more and more general in Vienna.

The conviction is spreading that if the Central Empires succeeded in winning the war the Germans would become the absolute masters of Austria, which would sink to the level of a Prussian province while the Emperor Francis Joseph would experience in his old age the humiliation of being a vassel of the upstart Hohenzollerns. Germany would reap the profits of victory; German products would flood the Bulgarian and Turkish markets to the exclusion of Austrian exports; Bulgarian and Turkish contracts and concessions would be monopolized by the grasping Teutons.

And Vienna understands, that if the Allies win the doom of Austria is sealed. In either case Austria will have to pay the price of Germany's policy. The Kaiser may have tided over difficulties for the moment, but sooner or later the smoldering resentment in Vienna will blaze up and there will be a clamorous demand for a separate peace before Germany drags Austria to ruin.

RUSSIANS LAID WASTE TO BREST-LITOVSK

BREST-LITOVSK, Dec. 30—On August 26 the Russians evacuated Brest-Litovsk, after causing damage estimated conservatively at $100,000,000 with dynamite that probably cost many hundreds of rubles.

While three-quarters of the houses of the city still burned the Germans moved in across pontoon bridges flung over the Bug River, and one week later Graf W— arrived with the German Emperor's commission as military governor.

He and his subordinates have since that time been working approximately eighteen hours a day to bring order out of the chaos that they found. Order they have achieved, but it will take years to rebuild and reconstruct the city—probably the strongest and most important fortress which the Russians possessed.

As was almost universally the case in Poland, the civil population had been taken along Russiaward by the retreating army. But almost before the Germans could commence the work of reconstruction forlorn detachments of the refugee population began to straggle back into the city. The refugees for the most part were Jews who had been hiding in swamps. Many of them were ill, and, before order had been restored thousands of them died of malignant disease.

Graf W— proceeded with an iron hand. The robber bands that lurked in the alleys of the city were gradually cleaned out. The returning inhabitants, if healthy, were put into camps in the surrounding country and sternly denied access to the city.

Refugees Sent Westward.

Many thousands of men, women and children were sent westward, accompanied by small detachments of soldiers, and invariably with a German field kitchen on which to cook their meals. To remain in Brest-Litovsk spelled starvation, for every bit of food had been carried away or burned.

For four weeks Graf W— and his officers and soldiers lived on pickled pork, and they ate their evening meals by the light of candles stuck in wine bottles. Eventually an electric light plant was built, but it showed and still shows an inclination to go out of commission frequently.

Two days before the evacuation of Brest-Litovsk Grand Duke Nicholas is reported to have declared the fortress never would be taken. The Germans themselves, it is said, did not believe they could hope to take it under two months. Aside from its remarkable strength it was tremendously important because the centre of several railroad lines.

Originally the fortification consisted of a ring of forts, built about 1870. With the invention of modern artillery these became of slight value, and so a new outer ring was begun in 1900, and in 1912 a series of ten new and absolutely up-to-date and modern forts, with a periphery of eighty-six kilometers, was completed. The city was strengthened additionally by a set of infantry positions between the forts which the German artillery experts declare are ideal and models of their kind.

Only One Fort Intact.

When the Russians decided to leave Brest-Litovsk they systematically destroyed all but one of their forts. The one still intact is one of the old inner ring and valueless. With the forts destroyed the Russians apparently went from house to house squirting petroleum and gasolene over everything and then setting it afire.

The higher Russian officers had lived in one so-called citadel, a mile or so removed from the centre of the city. This they did not destroy, nor some 400 cannon and hundreds of thousands of shells. The cannon, for the most part, however, are of an old model. The new and up-to-date pieces seem all to have been carted away. While Graf W—, a major general, took charge of the purely military operations of Brest-Litovsk, Captain Gisevius, in peace times professor of economics in the University of Giessen, was installed in the city as head of the so-called "Etappen district," a section that includes most of Brest-Litovsk, but also the surrounding country. He first banished all civilians from Brest and started little colonies whose members were soon engaged in threshing out the grain and harvesting the potatoes that were all but rotting in the ground. A partial food supply for the homeless and foodless fugitives has been supplied in this way.

Under Captain Gisevius' direction the houses of Brest have been in a measure straightened up, the streets again have been made as nearly passable as their impossible pavements and mud holes allow. Among the interesting finds of Brest-Litovsk are several maps, apparently of a military nature, which the Germans have discovered were intentionally falsified and left behind apparently in the hope that the pursuing Germans would try to be guided by them.

ELECTION OF DEPUTY REEVE OF SMITH

To the Electors,
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having again been nominated for re-election for Deputy-Reeve of the Township of Smith, I again ask for your support in favour of my election on Monday, January 3rd.

My record in the Council during the past four years is before you and I can safely leave that in your hands. I may add that my influence will remain a resident of the Township, and continue to reside there, and retain my personal interest there, as usual. If elected I pledge myself to continue to devote my close attention to the best interests of the Township.

I am in favour of issuing debentures for 6 or 10 years for the grant made by the Peterborough Council to the British Red Cross Society, in order to avoid taxing the ratepayers at the present time, and to pay the amount out of the general fund.

With best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Respectfully yours,

J. A. JOBE

SERIOUS FARM ACCIDENT.

Wm. Evans Loses an Arm While Feeding a Threshing Machine.

GUELPH, Dec. 29.—Mr. Wm. Evans, son of Prof. Evans of the Faculty of the Agricultural College, met with a shocking accident at his farm, a short distance from the city, which will unfortunately maim him for life. He was engaged in threshing, and was feeding a sheaf into the machine when the cylinder caught his right hand and practically tore it from the arm at the wrist. It was left attached to the arm only by some of the tendons and particles of flesh. Mr. Evans was at once rushed to the General Hospital, where amputation was made at the wrist. As he is in the best of health and only thirty years of age his recovery is looked for.

Many Violent Storms Predicted For January Will Be Severe Month

Weather Predictions For January—Astronomical Outlook Calls For A Prolonged Spell of Threatening Weather.

A Venus equinox is at its centre on 24th December, 1915, extending through the greater portion of January. The new moon and moon's perigree fall together on the 4th; the earth is in perigree on the 2nd, a Mercury equinox is central on the 9th, extending from the 4th to the 15th, and the moon, in passing to north declination, is on the celestial equator also on the 9th. The opposition of Saturn with earth and sun is on the 4th.

The astronomical outlook calls for a prolonged spell of threatening, unsettled weather, from the opening day to the middle of the second week in January. Storm centres, with rise of temperature, falling barometer, and rain and snow, will culminate in a crisis, from about Friday, the 6th, to Sunday, the 9th. These storms will originate in western sections early in this period, moving eastward, and increasing into threatening and widening and severe blizzards of sleet and snow northward, and heavy winter storms of rain and wind southward. On and touching these days, storm centres will make their transit from west to east across the continent, with high barometer, gales from the west and north, and changes to very cold, pushing behind the storms and dominating the weather generally for several days following. To all who will watch, ample warnings will be apparent in all sections of the country, of the storms and weather and extremes that are approaching. Do not forget that extreme western sections, as a rule, will have their storms and weather changes two to four days earlier than central and eastern parts Keep posted in the forecasts, ahead of storm periods, note the indications of your barometer—of clouds and temperature and winds, as the periods approach, and you will not be surprised by storms and severe weather changes, one time in a hundred. Three or four days of very cold and clear weather generally will follow, from about the 9th to the 12th.

A reactionary Storm Period will be central on and touching Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the 12th, 13th and 14th. This will be at a Vulcan solstice, with the combined Venus and Mercury disturbances still in full force. Under these conditions a partial relaxation of cold will pass eastward from western parts with falling barometer and storms of renewed rain, sleet, and snow. There is always a decided tendency, in the winter season, to heavy and destructive sleet storms during the Mercury periods. It is wise, also, to anticipate high boreal gales, and dangerous blizzards during the combined influences of Mercury and Venus at this season of the year. Do not be unprepared for such visitations, during all the storm periods, until after the first week of January. By the exercise of a little prudence and commonsense, all the distress and suffering of mind and beast may be avoided during the blizzardous storms, and the deadly cold that follows them.

A regular storm period is central on the 19th, extending from the 16th to the 21st. Astronomic causes and things to expect.

The regular Vulcan period is intensified by the Venus influences. The moon is in the apogee and at extreme north declination on the 16th, and in opposition with sun and earth on the 19th. The storm diagram shows that Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 17th to the 20th, are the central days upon which storms of this period are expected to reach their crisis. Warmer weather and falling barometer and southerly winds will precede the actual storms a day or two; but cloudiness, with rain first, followed by snow, will take up their march from the west, and during or next to the days named above will sweep through central to eastern sections, pushed closely from the west and north by rapidly rising barometer, high winds, and very cold, clearing weather.

Do not presume on the fact that you have not suffered, or that your live stock has not perished in heavy storms and destructive cold for years past. The probabilities are that nature's cycle is turning back to the conditions of bygone years, when some of the great storms and blizzards of the "days of your daddies" will return. Such questions as fuel and food and shelter should not be relegated to the last arts, especially in wide sections of the great North-West. One of these coming winters, careless and improvident people will pay the penalty of their neglect, in suffering themselves, and the loss of perishable goods and helpless live stock. Let me forewarn you—look ahead! Have a care for your comfort—for your property—for your lives!

A reactionary storm period is central on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, the 23rd, 24th and 25th. After three or four days of fair, cold weather, following storms of the preceding period, as we approach this reactionary period, winds will shift to southerly, the temperature will change to warmer, the barometer will fall, cloudiness will gather in western sections, and storms of wind and rain will start on their eastward march. The moon, moving to south declination will cross the celestial equator, on the 24th. Students of our forecasts will remember that increase of temperature, and marked tendency to electrical storms are noticeable, as a rule, on and touching the days when the moon is passing over the celestial equator. Such results are not uncommon at these times, even in the mid-winter months, especially toward the south. Hence, rain with probable lightning and thunder will be reported from many sections, on or about the 24th. By this date, winds in western sections will have veered to westerly, the barometer will rise, trains will begin to show, progressively, from west to east, the sharp return of cold that will end the period, with fair, cold weather spreading to the eastern skies by the 28th to the 30th. Do not forget the fact that the change to colder weather, which comes behind the storms, with rising barometer and westerly winds, is, like the storms, progressive, so that the change to colder, which is reported first from the west, is from one to three days in spreading to central and eastern extremes of our country. Sometimes the storms expend themselves, in a great measure, before they get out of the western extremes, and in like manner, cold waves that originate behind the storms, sometimes disappear, or are greatly modified before they reach central and eastern parts of the continent. Herein is where the "weather sharps" at Washington often "lose the trail and bark up a tree." The times when great cold waves and blizzards spread fan into the east and south, are when phenomenally high barometers springs up rapidly in the north-west, with a very low barometer covering the central and southern parts of the country. Under such conditions there can be no apology for those who are charged with the official duty of warning the people, if they fail to do so. Every one realizes the importance and the duty of every practical, sensible man owning his own barometer, if he can afford one, and watching these things for himself—for himself, and for his less fortunate neighbours and fellow-citizens.

A regular storm period is at its centre on the 30th, extending from Friday, the 28th, to Thursday, 3rd February. Disturbing causes and things to expect.

The moon is at greatest declination south on the 30th, the central day of the period, is in perigee on 1st February, and at new moon on 3rd February. An unquestionable and very important fact is, that atmospheric tides follow the moon in her declinations north and south of the equator. Hence, when the moon is moving southward, the atmospheric impulse will flow from northerly directions, while southerly tides will follow northward as the moon declines in that direction. In the nature of the case, therefore, colder winds and weather will, as a rule, follow the moon in the south, while warmer currents from the south will modify the cold when the moon is in the north. There are exceptions to this rule, under stress of astronomic changes and combinations; but the rule will hold good, the same as in the Oceanic tides. The closing storm period for January will, therefore, during its opening days bring colds, northerly winds, attended by cloudiness and snow, as the month goes out, but as we pass into February, winds will shift to southerly, the barometer will make a decided fall, and storms of a more tropical character will ensue, especially in sections toward the south.

Upon the whole, we calculate that January will be a severe winter month. Many of the storms will be violent and blizzardous, and the intervals between storms will bring reactionary waves of sudden and excessive cold. Do not wait until such conditions and consequences are upon you, before you make calculations and preparations to meet them. If your supply of fuel, and standard provisions for man and beast are to be procured over long lines of railroad or river, "take time by the forelock" and lay them in before the highways are blocked, and famine and suffering are upon you. The Venus periods of disturbance are characterized by sudden and dangerous extremes of temperature. The regular and reactionary storm periods, that fall within the Venus periods, often begin with mild, spring-like days, even in mid-winter, but sudden rain squalls up and before shelter can be reached, turn to sleet and blinding, drifting snow, and before temperature falls to the point of danger within a few hours. Hence we said in our first charts, almost forty years ago that "the electric fire of Venus turns, quickly to ice," meaning that thunder, lightning, and tropical rains, under stress of the Venus influence, often break into veritable blizzards, driven by high, boreal gales, bewildering exposed persons and live stock before they can possibly make their way to home and shelter. These are the things to watch at the oncoming of these January storm periods. A good barometer, properly studied and carefully heeded will give you warning during the treacherous, deceptive spring-like days that precede the Venus blizzards.

A jest that brings a smile from a virtuous woman may bring a frown from a prude. Should danger come, the virtuous woman dies, while the prude stands her ground.

A home-made remedy that does the work. Easily prepared. Cheap and quickly made.

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough syrup that money can buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives relief immediately. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tickling cough, stops the throat irritation, and heals the inflamed membranes which cause a cough. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. A Cyclone Of Ambition.

If any one had told Thompson Thomas six months before the general election of 19— that he would be a candidate for office he would have laughed him to scorn. Thomas was the most unassuming man in the world. Small, bald, near-sighted, with a soft voice and extreme gentleness of manner, he was especially unfitted for participation in an exciting campaign.

One day a widow, impecunious and ambitious, hearing of Mr. Thompson and his income, made up her mind to marry him. There are various ways of appropriating a man. The widow chose that of carrying him by storm. When the storm was over Mr. Thomas was a married man.

The wedding occurred five months and two weeks before the election. At the end of a week's honeymoon Mr. Thomas took up his paper one morning and read:

"There is a movement on foot to place Thomp Thomas, a cane shop politician of the Seventh ward, in nomination for mayor. We hope it will not succeed. We need a practical business man for the position, not a drone.

Mr. Thomas was astounded. Calling his wife, he showed her the item. "Well," she said, "I know I've married a drone, but I don't intend that my husband shall remain a drone. I have some ambition. I and you are one. We will work together. I am arranging for your candidacy myself."

"But, my dear"—

"I have the promise of the boss that you shall have the nomination. All that is required is your check for $5,000 for election expenses"—

"Five thousand dollars!"

"Which will be well spent. You have never taken any stand in the town whatever, but the mayoralty will"—

Mr. Thomas groaned. Then he showed a bit of fight—the only fight he had ever shown in his life—but Mrs. Thomas go out-Heroded Herod in a war of words that her husband was cowed. He did not consent to the movement his wife had inaugurated any more than a man consents to be drowned; he was simply submerged.

The $5,000 was handed in to the boss, who after depositing the lion's share to the credit of the "organization" began paying out the rest to the heelers. Thompson Thomas received the nomination. Judson Tadleben was put up by the opposition boss, and the people became greatly interested in what they considered their franchise as American citizens. The morning after the nomination Mr. Thomas was surprised to read in a journal—the mouthpiece of the party he represented—an interview with himself. He was not aware of having been interviewed and spoke of his astonishment to his wife. She informed him that it was a "faked" interview for political purposes. Among other things that had been put into his mouth, was this:

"Mr. Thomas, what are your views concerning the trusts?"

"And how do you stand on the labor question?"

"I look upon the laborer as a man and a brother. If elected, I shall do all in my power to advance his interests at the expense of his employers."

Mr. Thomas was indignant. "What potheuse politician put that in my mouth?" he said to his wife. "I would be an idiot to 'advance the laborer's interest at the expense of his employer.' Where would the laborer be if his employer were degraded?"

"No potheuse politician wrote it, my dear. I was informed that your views would be required, and I put that in myself. You must stand well with the laborer or you will be defeated."

Then came demands for more funds. Mr. Thomas refused, but one day's battle with his wife was sufficient, and he gave another check and another and another till most of his capital was invested in his candidacy for an office he didn't want. But the crowning agony was the abuse heaped upon him by the opposition. When he read the following he fainted dead away:

"There is a man just now prominent before the public who, it is rumored, if he had his just deserts would be behind bars rather than soliciting the votes of his countrymen. Could the opposition sink lower than nominate one who has sought by every means in his power to throw dust about his past? Only a jury of those countrymen could throw a searchlight upon that record he seeks to hide.

As soon as Thomas could pull himself together he went to the newspaper office and demanded to see the man who wrote the article. "You mustn't mind a little thing like that, Mr. Thomas," said the scribbler, smiling. "They say all's fair in love and war. They forgot to put 'in politics.'" "But I'll have the law of you," "Oh, we haven't mentioned you. Good day, Mr. Thomas. Hope you'll meet with success."

The morning of the 4th of November came at last. A president was elected with an eclat that diverted attention from the minor offices. Mr. Thomas, looking in his morning paper for his record, saw in one corner:

"Thompson Thomas was defeated for mayor of —. Certain presidential votes were needed, and some 15,000 that would have elected Thomas were traded for the presidential candidate."

Mr. Thomas' married life was of short duration. His wife, who had swooped down upon him at the proper time to nominate him for office, the morning after his defeat left him to enter other fields of ambition. She had come like a Kansas cyclone, raged fiercely, then passed on, leaving a wreck behind her. Mr. Thomas gathered up the fragments and found there was just enough left to pay the expenses of a divorce. This he obtained, then went to work as a proofreader in a publishing house.

PATRIOTIC MEETING HELD IN HASTINGS

Rev. Douglas Dickson Has Joined the Overseas Forces — Hastings Items of Interest

HASTINGS, Dec. 29.—The patriotic meeting in the Town Hall on Thursday evening was well attended. Addresses in keeping with the occasion were given by Mr. Peterson, Mr Floyd and Rev. Douglas Dickson. The hall was nicely decorated for the occasion.

Patriotic Address.

The pulpit in the Methodist Church was taken on Sunday evening by Rev. Douglas Dickson, formerly Pastor of the Coe Hill appointment, but now in training at Belleville, as a soldier. His address was very practical, along patriotic lines, and was listened to with rapt attention. The speaker is a promising young man and has loyally answered the call to serve his King and country. He, in company with Mrs. Dickson and child, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Buck.

Christmas Tree.

The Hastings Methodist Sunday School gave their annual Christmas concert on Saturday night, but owing to the unsettled weather conditions, was not as well attended as usual.

The programme consisted of songs, recitations, pantomime, etc., and closed with a cantatta entitled "Santa's Reception," in which a number, both of adults and children, took part, Santa Claus and Mrs. Santa being well represented by Mr. Wm. Atkinson and Mrs. Malcolm Baker. The entertainment closed by singing God Save The King. The proceeds were in aid of the Sunday School.

A large crowd attended the nomination in the town hall on Monday evening. We understand that the different offices will be warmly contested.

The schools closed on Wednesday for the Christmas holidays and the small boys and girls are happy for a few days.

Miss Flossie Dalnerd spent Monday in Norwood.

Successful Sale.

Those who attended the public auction sale at the farm of Mr. Richardson, near Birdsall's Station, report a large crowd and a good sale in every way.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Peculiar Situation in Eggs—Grain Prices Climbing—Embargo on Hay —Wood Coming in Freely. Comparison in Prices.

MARKET FEATURES.

Shorts and bran advanced $1.00 a ton.

Flour moved up 15c a hundred.

Sirloin steak up to 25 cents.

Lamb acts in sympathy.

Hogs are chalked up 25c a hundred

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, dairy, lb.	30c
Butter, creamery	35c
Eggs, new laid, doz.	40c
Cheese, lb.	23c.
Cream, qt.	40c
Turkeys, lb.	25c
Geese	18c
Ducks	18c
Chickens	13 to 15c

A rather peculiar situation in eggs has developed at Montreal, where American hen-fruit is coming in in large quantities, in bond, to be re-candled and re-exported to England. This is made possible owing to the fact that the American variety can be obtained from 4 to 4½c a dozen cheaper than the Canadian product. If this continues, it may have a tendency to weaken the local prices.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush	$1.60
Oats	55c
Barley	60c.
Peas	$2.00
Buckwheat	70c.
Rye	75c.
Shorts, ton,	$26.00
Bran, ton.	$24.00
Flour, cwt.	$3.65
Baled hay, ton	$20 to $22
Loose hay	$19.00 to $20.00

The wheat situation is very unstable at the present time. The Government's action in commandeering the wheat, instead of preventing a tightening in the markets, actually enhanced values. Both in Winnipeg and Chicago the prices are soaring. Cereal quotations have been chalked up 4 to 7c per bushel.

Winnipeg No. 1, Northern, is selling at $1.18 per bushel. Manitoba No. 1 Northern, $1.15 per bushel.

Oats at Toronto bring from 40 to 43 cents. Barley, 50 to 60c., rye, 80 to 85 cents; Buckwheat, 70 to 72c.; peas $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel.

Recently the Government placed an embargo on hay, prohibiting its export to any country other than Allies. This will not matter much to Canadians as a whole for the quantity sent to the United States was very small. The price, therefore, has remained practically unchanged.

Seed Grain.

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

The seed market on the outside is a little easier, particularly in the states where clover dropped 60c per bushel. Toronto prices are as follows: Alsike, $9.50 to $10, and red clover, $11 to $12 per bushel. American quotation on timothy is $3.00 per bushel.

Fruits and Vegetables.

Apples, per bag	$1.00
Apples, per bbl.	$3.00 to $4.50
Potatoes, per bag	$1.50
Onions, bag	$1.25

Sheep skins, each	$1.25 to $1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c. to 15c.
Beef skins	14c. to 16c.
Tallow, rough	2c.
Tallow, rafined	4c. to 6c.

The wool market, on the outside, is as follows: Washed fleece wool, 40c to 44c per lb.; unwashed fleece, 30c to 34c.

Calfskins, country cured, 18c to 19c per lb.; country sheepskins, 90c to $1.

CRISCO
For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

There is a "tastiness" about foods made with Crisco that is seldom, if ever, obtained in lard-cooked products.

And this better taste does not come as an increased expense. Crisco costs about the same as the better grades of lard.

In the interest of good food as well as of good management, you will find Crisco worth using.

Obituary.

On Christmas night, at her home on Ridge street, the death occurred of Eliza Morrow, wife of Mr. James Harper, in her seventy-fifth year.

Deceased had not been in very good health for several months, but was unusually bright and well on Christmas Day, when several of her children and their families assembled at her home to spend the day. In less than two hours after their departure to their own homes, a kind, affectionate wife and loving mother, had entered into her rest.

She leaves to mourn her loss, a husband, four sons, Johnny of Peterborough, Fred of Toronto, Harry of Norwood, and Joe of Alberta, and three daughters, Mrs. Harrison of Norwood, Mrs. Squire of Havelock, and Mrs. Cress, who is living in Alberta.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon to the Norwood cemetery.

The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of many friends in this community.

Rec. and Mrs. Eyre, of Freelton, are guests at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Laing.

Mrs. Bardsall intends sailing for England on January 8th, to see her son, Captain Everett Birdsall, who has been wounded.

Told Samoan Natives London Was In Ruins

German Traders in Apia Sentenced and Their Extensive Properties Seized

WELLINGTON, N.Z., Dec. 15.—A campaign of prodigious lying and stirring up mistrust and strife among the natives which has lately been started by the Germans in former German Samoa, has added to the responsibilities of the New Zealand military Government of that territory; but, to make up for this, the activities of the Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft, the big German South Sea firm which, in defiance of the British occupation of German Samoa and the British Protectorate over Tonga, has been carrying on an extensive business in copra and other tropical products in those islands, largely through San Francisco, have been effectually squelched.

The natives, who on the whole are better disposed toward British control than German, have been told by the Germans that the Kaiser's troops have occupied England, and that London has been razed to the ground; and incidentally, probably from the same source, reports have been spread which have even disturbed the American naval authorities at Pago Pago, that Australia is suffering from a terrible outbreak of typhus, and that in Melbourne hospitals alone there were lately 4,000 cases of that disease and 900 deaths in a single week. Of course, this typhus yarn is of the wildest and falsest kind, for if it were true the New Zealand Government would have declared a quarantine against the Commonwealth.

The business of the Deutsche Handels und Plantagen Gesellschaft, commonly known as the "long-handled firm," is now being conducted by a receiver appointed by the Dominion Government, and several Germans who had kept up a trade on its behalf until recently, are now prisoners in New Zealand.

The Germans were landed at Auckland by the steamer Talune on November 7th, having been brought under military guard from Apia. Among them was the general manager of the concern, Karl Hanssen, and the manager of one of the principal cocoanut plantations, Adolph Eberhardt. On 30th September the head office and four plantations of the D. H. & P. G. were simultaneously raided by the military, and all its papers and letters were seized. No resistance was offered.

On 7th October Hanssen and Eberhardt were arrested, and on 15th October they were arraigned before a military court. Hanssen was charged with evading the censorship and disobeying military regulations. Among other things, he was alleged to have given letters to the launches trading between the Samoan Islands, which intercepted sailing vessels plying between San Francisco and Apia for copra, and with arranging to have these letters carried to San Francisco and mailed there to Germany. Proof of this offence was adduced by the capture of some of these letters between San Francisco and Germany and their being sent back to Samoa. Hanssen was convicted and sentenced to six months' imprisonment in New Zealand, and subsequent internment until the end of the war.

Eberhardt was charged with having failed to turn over to the military authorities documents belonging to the late German Administration of Samoa. The documents were contained in a despatch box belonging to a late prominent official—this, it is assumed, is ex-Governor Schultz, who is now a prisoner of war. At all events, the papers are regarded by the New Zealand Military Administration as the most important which have come into their possession since German Samoa was captured in August, 1914. Eberhardt was found guilty, fined $150, and ordered to be interned. Six German clerks were fined $750 in all for evasion of the censorship.

Owing to the peculiar flavour of a sweet clover individual animals sometimes do not take to it readily at first but all kinds of live stock soon learn to like it, and eat it greedily and thrive on it, often preferring it to any other forage. This hesitancy applies only while it is green, and more particularly when it grows rather large, for when it is young and tender stock do not hesitate to eat it at the start nor do they refuse it when cured into hay.

NEW DRINK RULES KEEP LONDON SOBER

Enforcement Rigid in the Clubs and Hotels as Well as in the Saloons.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Drastic as the new drink regulations which went into effect this week are, London accepts them with the utmost placidity. While a threatening protest has gone up from communities in which the restrictions fall heavily upon laboring men confined in shops long hours of the day, London in general has taken the new order in a matter-of-fact way.

Labor organizations have got up meetings of violent protest and passed ringing resolutions calling upon the General Control Board to give concessions, maintaining that the regulations inflicted a hardship upon the workmen. But outside of this no one hears much criticism of the new order of things.

That the Central Control Board, of which Lord D'Abernon is the head, will make the slightest change from the ruling that now allows public houses to sell intoxicants from 12

It was to help concentrate the utmost energy of Great Britain upon the prosecution of the war that the drink regulations were formulated. Naturally the order of its very nature must inflict inconvenience upon the laboring classes, but in this respect it is pointed out that the restrictions fall with equal force upon every other class, for the order not only prohibits the sale of intoxicants in the public houses excepting during five and one-half hours a day, but in clubs and hotels as well. Not a shade of discrimination exists anywhere in the rigid enforcement of the rule.

Before the regulations went into effect the authorities had a problem on their hands of how to hold in check an element that, with higher wages since the war began, has congregated in the public houses after work time, or for that matter, at all hours of the day and imbibed too copiously. It was an increasing laxity that had, for its first attempt at regulation, the passing of the non-treating ukase.

While the non-treating went quite a way toward cutting down excessive drinking among workers, it did not do all that was expected of it. The reason for this apparently was the general advance all around of wages due to the great numbers of men who had enlisted, with the consequent demand for labor in every phase of industry. Everybody seemed to have money to spend lavishly.

One immediate effect of the new regulations has been to give the magistrates far less to do in handling cases of intoxication. While the grist of cases in court nearly every morning was large, before the new rule became operative, there was, once it became in force, a sharp falling off. At Clerkenwell, in the heart of a laboring community, the day after the new order went into effect the magistrate had only eight prisoners before him accused of overindulgence, as against ten and twelve times that number ordinarily. In that community are labor organizations that are taking the lead in the voice of protest against the Control Board's action. In other working districts the same result has followed—a circumstance that has prompted the magistrates to express themselves, almost to a unit, as in complete sympathy with the new scheme.

At the hotels little grumbling is heard except from strangers coming to London, who fail to see the necessity for any curtailment of drink privileges. At the clubs the order is taken philosophically, too. While under the old system drinks were obtainable at all hours, day or night, at rooms of registered guests, that is no longer permitted. The hotel men are not allowed to sell intoxicants, whether in rooms or at the bars, save during the five and one-half hours specified by the Control Board.

A little latitude has been allowed by the board in drinking at meals, this applying to hotels, restaurants, clubs, and public houses. Drinks ordered with a meal and served before 2:30 or 9:30 may be consumed at the leisure of the diner up to 3 or 10 o'clock as the case may be. But at 3 and 10 o'clocks the tables must be free of all intoxicants.

"It seems to be going quite well," said an official of the Central Control Board. "The philosophical Londoner may not exactly like to have what he calls his privileges cut down, but he realized evidently, that it's all meant to push the war through, and so he falls in line.

"The Central Control Board took some hints from the United States in forming its new regulations. We copied, for instance, your idea of non-treating, which I understand, is in vogue in some of your States. The idea of allowing treating with meals came from your country, too.

While many public houses have tried the experiment of serving tea, coffee, beef tea, and other hot, non-intoxicating drinks, so as to keep open during the prohibited hours, they have failed to find any spontaneous response. The call for that character of refreshments, they agree, is almost negligible, except at tea time, when the patronage confines itself largely to the tea shops."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The little girl who goes to school generally needs an apron to protect the front of her frock from rubbing against the edges of her desk as well as to prevent spots in general.

Such an apron as the one shown in this illustration is an ornamental that most little women will be glad to wear it. It can be cut without piecing from 36 inch material. The front and the back are each in one piece, half the side being cut in one with them. This makes a front and back which meet at the shoulder, where the strap extensions are fastened together by a single button. The sides of the waist are uncovered and the sides of the skirt are protected, the edges being joined at the usual side seam. Little patch pockets are the only ornament.

Such an apron as this can be made of white crossbar or linen, the edges being scalloped by hand or bound with a fancy cotton braid. It may also be made in plain colored gingham, chambray or linen as well as in all the regulation colored checks and stripes.

An edging of Hamburg embroidery may take the place of the scallops and will mean much less labor, although adding slightly to the cost of the garment.

The apron pattern, No. 7,899, is cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 1⅞ yards of 27 or 36 inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending ... to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will soon act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it is no longer irritated, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

It takes a philosopher to meet present evil without anticipating future ones.

Russian Offensive Is Spreading In The East

Concentration of Large Bodies of Russian Troops in South East Galicia Being Watched With Concern in Berlin---Russian Attacks Against Austrian Positions Are Increasing in Violence.

A GERMAN ATTACK IN WEST REPULSED

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—Concentration of large bodies of Russian troops in Southeastern Galicia, and on the Bukowina frontier, was reported in despatches received here to-day. The situation is being watched closely by military authorities. It is believed possible the Czar may be planning to smash against the Galician lines held by Gen. Von Linsingen, as well as an invasion of Bukowina.

Russian artillery and infantry attacks against Austrian positions before Czernowitz are increasing in violence, and there are evidences that the Slavs are being reinforced. For five days the Austrians have maintained their positions under heavy onslaughts, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

The offensive movement is now spreading along the Dniester and northward, Russian and Austrian forces are coming in contact. Russian troops are constantly arriving at Tarnopol.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Arthur Henderson, Labour representative in the Cabinet, conferred with Trades Union leaders this afternoon, explaining the reasons behind the Government's adoption of a policy of modified conscription. He will report the sentiment of the Trades Union heads to the Cabinet to-morrow.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—What ails the Kaiser has been a subject of speculation by correspondents stationed at all neutral countries bordering Germany. Geneva despatches insist that cancer of the throat was the Kaiser's trouble. Amsterdam wired he was suffering from "non-malignant furuncle," and is indoors, though not in bed.

PARIS (French Official) Dec. 30.—German attempts to capture French works at Dompierre last night were completely repulsed.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—It was denied to-day that Lloyds tripled their Suez Canal insurance rates because of any possible menace to shipping through the reported Turco-German advance on the Suez Canal. The activity of Austro-German submarines in the Mediterranean was responsible, and practically all British ships will now proceed via the Cape of Good Hope.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Three months since the sharp and successful Allied offensive of late September have seen remarkably rapid accumulation of reserve men and munitions on the western front in preparation for the next general advance.

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, in a short interview to-day, declared that New Year would find the finances of the Dominion in the most satisfactory condition.

"The returns from the war budget of last February," he said, "have exceeded by best expectations. Between the reduction in expenditure, owing to the policy of proceeding only with works under contract at the outbreak of war, and the largely increased revenue from new taxes and customs and excise duties, the financial position is most favourable.

"Canada has faced the financial situation by comprehensive measures of taxation, and has followed only leigitmate financial methods. Her credit stands very high in the financial world, both at home and abroad.

"The people of Canada can preserve that credit and keep the nation strong for war by increasing production and exercising reasonable economy.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—The tentative peace programme published by Zurich newspapers and circulated by the Wolff News Agency, though not an official statement from the German Government, "was undoubtedly inspired," the Berlin Tageblatt declared to-day.

The Tageblatt expressed the view that the positive terms of peace suggested by the Neue Zuricher Zeitung probably were obtained from well informed persons in Germany.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Conference of British Trades Union leaders adjourned late this afternoon without deciding definitely whether Labour should support or oppose the Government's Conscription Bill.

It was announced that another conference would be held within a few days, and that Labour members of Parliament, and the executive committee of the Trades Union Congress would be represented at the second conference.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 30.—The Dutch steamer Ellewoutsdijk, 2,000 tons, was sunk in the North Sea to-day presumably by a mine. Her crew was rescued. She displaced 2,229 tons, and was registered from this port.

RATES FOR THE HYDRO WILL BE LOWER NEXT YEAR

Ontario Hydro Commission Recommends a Reduction in Sixty Municipalities in Province of Ontario.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Dec. 30. —The Ontario Hydro Commission, of which Sir Adam Beck is chairman, announced to-day it had recommended to sixty municipalities in Central and Western Ontario that rates to consumers in those municipalities be reduced, following an extremely successful year generally in Ontario for municipally owned Hydro plants. In many municipalities there is a comfortable surplus. The list of municipalities affected is not available but they will be notified immediately.

Splendid Ice At Brock St. Rink

A Record Attendance of Skaters For The Season—Band Again To-night

The ice at the Brock street rink was excellent last night and it is even better for this afternoon and evening. Almost an inch in thickness was added with last night's frost.

To-morrow (New Year's eve) will be a big night at the rink. There will be a hockey match between Brampton and the Electrics at 8 o'clock. About 9.30 skaters will take the ice and they will skate out the old and in the New Year. The admission is the same as for a game of hockey, 25c., 35c. and 50c., which includes hockey and skating. The Kitchener Club will sell sandwiches and coffee at the rink. All the proceeds going to their fund.

A Question?

In some of Mr. Green's advertisements Last Evening he says "Send G. Walter Green Back to Finish his Work." If he was so anxious to finish his work why did he not stay in the Council when he had a year yet to run instead of resigning to run for Mayoralty. He could have as Chairman of the Board of Works done more to finish his work than by taking a chance to run for Mayor. I guess Mr. Greene for Mayor was his first thought in the matter. Id

SIXTEEN RECRUITS AT APSLEY ENROLLED FOR THE 93rd BATTALION

Candidates Who Offered Themselves Were of Especially Fine Type, There Being One Rejection Out of Seventeen Candidates---New Year's Leave For The Balance of The 93rd---Letters From Peterboro Boys Overseas ---To-day's Military News.

Sixteen men were added to the strength of the 93rd Battalion yesterday, when Major R. P. Watt and Capt. J. E. R. Munro and Major Cameron, A.M.C., visited Apsley. It speaks well for the calibre of the men offering themselves in the northern part of Peterborough County that out of seventeen recruits who presented themselves yesterday only one was rejected. The prospects are excellent for many more men of the same type from that section of the county in the near future. The officers of the 93rd are delighted with the response from the Apsley district.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Headquarters, Peterborough,
Dec. 30, 1915.

Duties—

Orderly Officer for to-day, Lieut. T. W. B. Marling.

Orderly Officer for to-morrow — Lieut. R. Stevenson.

Orderly Officer for Saturday—Lieut. G. Matthews.

Parades—

10.30 to 12.00—Extended Order drill

2.00 to 4.30—Bathing Parade and inspection of clothing by Platoon Commanders.

Strength—taken on.

John Morrow, "B" Company, Dec. 28th, 1915.

Orderly Room.—In future and until further notice Company Orderly Room will be held at 10.00 a.m. and Battalion Orderly Room at 10.30 a.m.

KEITH G. LECH,
Captain.

The 93rd Battalion hockey team will practice between 7 and 8 o'clock to-night at Brock Street Rink. A full turnout is expected.

Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health, and Dr. Amys, Peterborough's Officer of Health, inspected the 93rd quarters at the Armouries this morning. They will recommend a few minor changes that will improve the sanitary features of the building, but on the whole expressed themselves as well satisfied with the winter home of Peterborough's soldiers.

An Examiner employee has received a newsy letter from Gunner Hugh Graham of the 27th Battery, 7th Brigade, C.F.A., C.E.F., and formerly of the Examiner press room. Gunner Graham says: "We are having some of the English winter over here now and I don't like it in the least. It rains here pretty nearly every day and we also have some cold raw winds some days, so that I feel like as if I was going to freeze through. We never see many bright sunny days like in Canada. It is always dark and cloudy and sometimes awful foggy. My overcoat has bees wet through for over three weeks and I never get a chance to dry it. Our camp is so wet and muddy that ankle boots are no good to us and we all wear rubber knee boots. Our camp is about eight miles from Folkestone, which is our favourite town, where we all go to when we have an evening or Saturday or Sunday afternoon off. It is a nice little town but an awfully 'dear little town.' They know how to charge Canadian prices. I think we Canucks get soaked in everything we buy. For instance ham and eggs, with bread and butter, tea or coffee costs 2/6—60c. I guess I will change the subject and tell you about some of the Peterborough boys over here.

Reddy Milligan, Harry Gamble, the ex-Peterborough policeman, Jack Arnot, the blacksmith and Tommy Record are here in our brigade with the 27th Battery, and all are O.K. Also at Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, there is another new Peterborough bunch, including Eddie and Art Graham, Butcher, Dunsford and a lot of others. I haven't been down there yet since they came over, but Tommy Record met them all and was telling me about them. I also met Harry King and Oscar Hallihan. Oscar Hallihan is with the 6th Brigade, Howitzer Battery. I also met several other Peterborough fellows whom I forgot and can't place."

The Examiner has received a neat greeting card from the firing line in the shape of a Christmas card from No. 3 Company of the 21st Battalion, in which there are some ninety Peterborough men. The card reads as follows: 'The officers, N.C.O.'s and men of No. 3 Company, 21st Canadian Battalion, wish you the compliments of the season. In the trenches, Christmas, 1915."

"I am at present located at Eastchurch. There is not a village within miles. I have just been released from a thirty-six hour duty, so feel pretty well tired out. I don't mean that I was flying all that time, but was in charge of the squadron. I am attached to Number 4 Squadron. There are about ten of us. It is the same squadron as Sub-Lieut. Boyd was in, but got interned in Holland. We are only about one hour from

A FINE NEW INDUSTRY LOCATES IN PETERBORO

PTE. ERNIE CROFT, 309 Burnham street, with the 8th C.M.R.

Peterboro Metal Products Company Is Quietly Making a Home For Itself in The Factory of Canadian Cordage Company.

HAVE SPLENDID PLANT

Without any noisy heralding, or any appeal to the city for assistance in any way, the new Peterborough Metal Products Company has been quietly making a home for itself in the fine factory building, familiar to all of us, as the Cordage Works. Yesterday, when an Examiner representative dropped in to see what was being done, he was given a very friendly reception by General Manager Mr. George E. Sutton, and Works Manager Mr. John E. Jones, and was most agreeably surprised at the thorough and capable manner in which the splendid building is being adapted to its new uses and conditions.

Before making an inspection of the factory preparations, the reporter was shown a complete sketch of the lay-out of the machinery and working conveniences, drafted by Works Manager Jones, who is an expert on labour economy, with an extensive experience in many of the largest machine working plants in the U. S. The design is to have every move of the metal being handled, one of progress towards completion, without the loss of a single non-productive move.

A most interesting half hour was spent in the office, studying the plan, which is being turned into reality in the factory itself, and Manager Sutton then invited the scribe to visit the works and see the progress that was being made in the general preparations. The first thing noticed was that the motive power, consisting of two one hundred horse power motors, is already there, both connected with the line shafts by their massive belts, ready for business. The entire inside has been repainted, and the tool room is already completely fitted, and as Mr. Sutton proudly remarked, is equal to any tool room in Canada. It is roomy, light, and clean as a new pin, and fitted with every convenience to not only do the fine work required in tool making but for the comfort of the workmen employed there. The centre floor, which is hardwood, had to be all taken up and the joists replaced by new ones, as dry rot had rendered the old ones unsafe to carry machinery. It is now all relaid and ready to have the machines placed as soon as they arrive. Mr. Sutton explained that the thirty massive lathes are all being made in Canada, but so rushed are the Toronto factories that they cannot get delivery till the middle of January, and it will be at least February first before they can all be ready for operation. All that can be done in the way of line shaft and pulley installation in advance of the arrival of the machines, is being rushed as fast as permanency will permit.

When first formed the object of the Peterborough Metal Products Company was to manufacture laundry machinery, for which there is always a steady demand, but since securing the building the company has received a government contract that will keep the outfit running at its capacity, and employing about ninety or one hundred hands for a full year at least.

At the close of the war it is designed to utilize the same machines in the manufacture of machinery for which there is sure to be a tremendous demand, as Canada begins to come into its own as a result of its discovery that it can built its own finest machinery, better and cheaper than it can import, as has been the invariable custom in the past.

Peterborough Metal Products Company is composed of live wire, practical men, who are here to build up a manufacturing business that will do its part towards capturing for Canada, the trade it is so well able to take care of, and Peterborough is to be congratulated on being selected as the home of what promises to be an important industry. The factory has been leased for three years, with an option of purchase at the end of that time, and both Mr. Sutton and Mr. Jones express themselves as highly pleased with its adaptability to their purpose. They also freely admitted a liking for Peterborough, and intend shortly to bring their families here from Toronto.

Speaking of future plans, Mr. Sutton said it was already in contemplation to add a forging plant, with which to forge the billets that they will use, and which must now be shipped to them ready for the finishing process on their thirty lathes. He also stated that our local manufacturers were not being overlooked, as two of their new machines are being supplied by the Peter Hamilton Company.

The management do not expect any difficulty in securing men, and in a very short time the prosperous sound of the hum of machinery, and the streams of happy workmen will again be heard and seen at the former Cordage Works, under its new name and business as the Peterborough Metal Products Company.

WATER RATES MAY BE REDUCED NEXT YEAR

LAST YEAR'S WORK

That the citizens of Peterborough are likely to experience a reduction in the water rates during the coming year was forecast by Mr. W. H. Moore of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, following his re-election by acclamation on Monday last.

Mr. Moore gave a somewhat extended account of "his stewardship," just as his colleagues have done on similar occasions. He said that the Commissioners were considering the advisability of reducing the present water rates.

New Year's Day At The Y.W.C.A.

No girl need be lonely in Peterborough New Year's Day. A most hearty welcome is extended to all girls to visit the Association on New Year's Day. There will be open house to every girl in the city, in the afternoon, from 3 to 6, in the evening from 8 to 10 o'clock. If you have never visited the Association rooms, this will be a good time to make the first visit. The fire in the fireplace, and the "homey" look of the big reception hall will bring cheer to the heart of the girl from the old land.

ENNISMORE FARMER BROKE THROUGH CHEMONG LAKE

Milton Clarke, an Ennismore farmer, was driving across Chemong Lake this morning, with a load of hay when the ice broke, letting one of his horses through. He had reached about the middle of the lake when the ice cracked beneath him. He called for help and some of the Bridgenorth men immediately went to his assitance. The one horse was rescued and with its mate and the hay was brought safely to land. It is thought that the ice is not thick enough yet for very heavy traffic and it is understood that the bars were put up at either end of the winter route, and drivers are cautioned to take the bridge until further notice.

Bonaccord St. Debentures

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—At a public meeting in Victoria Hall on Wednesday night I said that the debentures for $3250.00 issued to pay for the Bonaccord street bridge had not been sold. In this I was unintentionally in error, for the City Treasurer had sold them, acting on authority given. I did not know this when I made the statement I did, and certainly did not intend to mislead. I did not purchase them and I am yet without the knowledge of who did purchase them.

Yours truly,
G. Walter Green.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, DEC. 30, 1915

A Vote That Will Gain What No Other Will

There is one vote the ratepayer can cast with full confidence, of perfectly sure he is doing the right and wise thing. On January 3rd, in addition to the aldermanic and other candidates, he will have the opportunity and privilege of voting for the by-law to raise $30,000 to purchase the present exhibition grounds. The elector can make no mistake in voting for this by-law; that is, if it is held to be desirable that we should have an exhibition in Peterborough.

The lease of the present grounds expires next year. The option to purchase also expires next year, and unless it is taken up and the grounds purchased, the Exhibition will have no home.

The option gives the society a chance to purchase the grounds at a 1,000 dollars an acre for the thirty acres. The Socety cannot finance the purchase, and it would not be wise to do so if it could. It wants the grounds for only a week or, perhaps, two weeks in the year, and an expenditure of $30,000 for this purpose would be unwise.

An arrangement has been proposed by which the purchase of the grounds can be dealt with in the interests of the society, and very much in the interest of the city. The city is to raise $30,000 by by-law, and use the option to purchase the property — the city to own the property, and allow the Society the use of it for the time required for exhibition purposes.

This splendid piece of centrally situated property is well worth the purchase price, on the grounds of absolute land vale only.

And it will be a good investment for the city in other ways.

Under the present tenure the society cannot go ahead and erect buildings suitable for a first-class exhibition. If the city became owner of the property and guarantees the use of it to the society, the latter can erect suitable buildings and improvements, and provide the possibility of a first-class exhibition that will not only be a credit to the good name and enterprise of the city, but be worth thousands of dollars a year to Peterborough in the way of promoting business. The presence of thousands of visitors in the city for two, three or five or six days, must mean the leaving of a large amount of money in circulation to the advantage of every citizen.

As things are now, with the ramshackle ,old buildings, we can only expect to have an inferior exhibition, and the city, to receive comparatively few visitors and little advantage.

Even with the present exhibition the City Council considers it worth making an annual grant of $600 per year.

If the city owned the grounds and the society having put up permanent buildings and improved the grounds and provided elegant inclosures, it would help up to have a first-class exhibition, for we are the centre of a splendid district. Peterborough, with proper grounds and buildings, could have the best and largest exhibition between Toronto and Ottawa. We could have one that would last five or six days, instead of two or three days. We could fill the city with visitors for days to the greatest business profit of our merchants and business men, and above all, for the good name of Peterborough for enterprise and public spirit. Peterborough would then, be praised instead of pitied for her annual exhibition.

Any one who takes the trouble to think can easily work out a striking statement of the money value to the city of thousands of visitors in the city for two or three days or a week.

If we think a practically one-day show worth $600 a year—the interest at 6 per cent. on $10,000—why not put a little more to that and buy the grounds outright, and secure an exhibition that would be worth to us many times $600 a year?

We would own a splendid thirty-acre park that would be ours in fee simple — ours to use fifty-one or so weeks in the year, and allow the Society its use for one or two weeks. The money this improved exhibition would bring to the city would be excellent interest on the investment, while we should have the use of the grounds for a recreation park.

It would be a fine property for the purpose. The society would erect suitable buildings and surround the park with an elegant iron or steel grill and concrete fence with an elaborate main gate. A few trees planted and other improvements made would give a fine recreation park.

We have no free recreation park any where in the south part of the city, and we need more open space. We cannot continue to be a healthy city if we build up all our open spaces. There is a clamour for playgrounds for our children—here is a chance to provide for a service badly needed.

We should then have a magnificent thirty-acre park in the heart of the city that, once paid for, would be a source of revenue; for the Society would pay back to the city from $1,000 to $1,500 a year, of its surplus profits—of a first-class exhibition.

The electors are invited to think the matter over, and by voting for the by-law, give Peterborough the finest unoccupied property in the city in one block, and also give us promise of an exhibition that will be a credit and profit to the city.

Holland, and eighteen minutes from France. We send out a patrol every morning before daynight to different points. Of course I don't have to do any of that, for I am night flying. Just three of us here night flyng. Have to have our machines ready at sunset, loaded with bombs and grenades. Will have very little dangerous work until spring. The weather is too rough just now for Zepps. I sure am getting some great experience, and like the work better each day. I am the only Canadian in the squadron, and the only Canadian night flyer that I know of.

We expect to move in closer to London by spring. We can see the French coast from here on a clear day.

Somewhere in Belgium.

It seems ages since I have written to you, so here goes. We are in billets again after spending the last fourteen days in and out of the trenches, and I tell you it sure does feel good to get washed up and get a clean issue of clothing. Of course we have a little drill, and sometimes a route march to do while we are here, but the boys do not mind that a bit, anything for a change. So far our battalion has been lucky. We have not had any casualties and the Peterborough boys have been very fortunate. Ballard is the only one who has been hit yet and I think he only had a flesh wound. He is in Bromley hospital, England. That is where Dr. McPherson is I think. But you never know what minute Fritz is going to land over a few shells, but he don't seem to get the range of our trenches, so as long as they don't bounce on top of our crock we're (Jake.) We have had quite a lot of rain this last few weeks and the ground is in awful condition, up to your knees in mud and water wherever you go, but most of the boys have got hip rubber boots, so things are not so bad. We often see Peterborough boys with other units over here. Saw Vic Northcotte the other day. He expects to get a pass to (Blighties) for Christmas. We expect to spend our Christmas in the trenches, but we might just as well be there plugging at Fritz as anywhere else. All the boys wish to be remembered to you.

Capt. James Rollins, quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion, has received from Kingston his commission as lieutenant. Capt. Rollins stood high in the list of those who passed. Like most men engaged in other walks of life, Capt. Rollins experienced some difficulty in reaching the top, but when he did reach the top it was with credit to himself.

Pay cheques were issued to the men of the 93rd Battalion today on account of half of the battalion going on New Year's leave. As to-morrow is the end of the month the cheques had to bear to-morrow's date, but through the kindness of Mr. Travers of the Bank of Montreal, the men were able to get their cheques cashed this afternoon.

There are many calls in life, but none so sacred as this: that God who sent all, knows all, will bless and sanctify this, that love is the call of life.

Working Men!

Who has been Your Closest Friend in Connection with the Public Works of the City? Read the Facts:--

The Board of Works Department, over which Ex-Alderman G. Walter Green was the Chairman, had the disbursing of the following expenditures on the various works under its charge during 1915:---

Outfall Sewer.....	$41459.88
Board of Works	26710.00
Snow Cleaning.....	2500.00
St. Oiling & Watering	5000.00
Side Walks	11466.00
Sewers.....	14974.62
Pavements	114429.03
Bonaccord St. Bridge .	2193.39
Total.....	$218732.92

Of the above amount, $129,791 was paid for Labor to the Working Men of the City, and $88941.92 was paid for material.

Who, of the three candidates for Mayor, were most interested in the working men of the City in connection with these expenditures?

Was it Hartley, Duffus or Green?

The City Needs G. Walter Green for Mayor.

Algerian Soldier in German Camp Indites Psalm of Woe to Captors

Mussulman, Who Loves France and Chafes Over His Captivity in Germany, Confides to Writer For The Paris Figaro His Hopes and His Aspirations.

"It was in a German prison camp that I made the acquaintance of Mohammed," says Mr. Andre Warnod in the Paris Figaro. "Like so many other fiery Africans he had crossed the Mediterranean to fight for France, and after a number of adventures, which were most extraordinary when related by himself, he had fallen into the hands of the Germans at the capture of Lille. His contempt for the enemies of his country was intensified by his daily contact with the burly Landstrum men who were his keepers. During the first weeks of his imprisonment these rude persons used to stand and stare at Mohammed for several minutes at a time, as if he were some strange animal. Mohammed felt so mortified at having to associate with such uncultured individuals that he was ashamed to write home to his folks. He would rather have them believe him dead than know of his being a prisoner among these despicable 'Giaours.'

"After a while he resigned himself to his fate, good Mussulman that he was, and spent most of his time crouching on a rug in the corner of the little camp hospital. Sometimes he would emerge from his sullen gloom, under the influence of a pack of good cigarettes, and then he took a delight in telling Arab stories to the group of prisoners which readily gathered around Mohammed on such occasions. Wonderful were these tales, most of them being elaborations of the original Arabian Night stories, into which Mohammed the romancer injected some of his own real or imaginary but always thrilling personal experiences. He gave them a genuine Algerian touch which was perfectly charming.

"One day Mohammed approached me with solemn mien and handed me a large sheet of paper filled with some bizarre looking script, which he declared was a ballad in the Arab tongue, and which he, at my request, translated into French prose without much reluctance. This is the tune to which Mohammed's captive muse chanted her plaint. It might be called a Mussulman 'Song of Hate' but Mohammed had simply called it 'The Captivity of a Mussulman.'

"'Germany! May ill luck encompass thee, as the clouds swarm around the moon. Thou makest me suffer in thy barracks full of lice and fleas. Every day at sunrise thou disturbest my slumbers by the barbarian shouts of 'Raus! Raus!' Oh, thou art bad to us, to me and my comrades! I am in thy hands and cannot express myself better than by quoting these words from our Koran:—May God curse thee and throw thee among the jackals. May all people who see thee pass cry:—To the jackals with thee, to the jackals.

"'Germany! I have never suffered before, but now I suffer. Yet I pray God and Allah to shorten my sufferings.

"'Germany! Every night in my dreams I see thy soldiers depart for the conquest of my soul and my life. I wake up with a start and shake off the agonizing nightmare. And soon peace returns to my soul, for I know that as sure as God does not put water above oil He will not give His love to those who aspire to evil.

"'Germany! Now when thou feelmind that only love for France prompted me to leave Algeria, that Paradise on earth. But woe is me; here I am a captive in Germany, where one lives on sauerkraut, pork and bread mixed with beet roots!

"'Germany! In our Holy Book it is written:—Do as much good as thou can'st and thou may'st become blessed. Yet thou, Germany, hast declared war on France, and thou art boasting of being the messenger of God, thou accursed race! How could such a false notion ever come to possess thy soul?

"'Germany! Now when thou feelest thyself perishing, thou tremblest and tryest to make sweeter the captivity of these poor soldiers, shut up in cages like wild beasts. Roaring lions they were on the battle field, but alas! at present they are as powerless as falcons caught in the snare.

"'Germany! Thou hast attempted to trouble my heart by telling me that Turkey has preached a holy war against France, Russia and England, and thou hast offered me freedom to go and fight against these nations. My heart, however, has not faltered and I have answered thee simply, that I am French!

"'Germany! I am an Arab, but I am also French, and I am true to my country. The day when this war ends I shall depart in thy railway trains shouting: Long live France! Long live Algeria! Long live the tricolor and the French Republic.'"

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION OF BY-LAW

NOTICE is hereby given that a By-law, Number 1915, was passed by the Council of the City of Peterborough, on the 17th day of November, 1915, and that a further By-law, Number 1928, was passed by the said Council, on the 22nd day of December, 1915, to amend By-law, Number 1901, of the City of Peterborough, being a By-law to authorize the issue of debentures for the sum of $70,000.00, to replace money expended by the Peterborough Utilities Commission and the Peterborough Water Commissioners, passed on the 5th day of July, 1915, by providing that the rate of interest which the said debentures shall bear shall be five and one-half per cent. per annum, instead of five per cent. per annum. The said By-law, Number 1915, was registered in the Registry Office of the County of Peterborough on the 18th day of November, 1915 and the said By-law, Number 1926 was registered in the said Registry Office on the 23rd day of December 1915. Any motions to quash or set aside the said By-laws, or either of them, or any part thereof, must be made within three months after the first publication of this notice, and cannot be made thereafter.

Dated the 23rd day of December 1915.

Weighing Words.

An Advertising Expert says, "The man who weighs his words, says what he means and no more, is the one who gets a reputation for solidity in his community. Advertisers should remember this. Exaggeration is futile—it does not convince. Aside from the morality of the matter, it does not pay to insult the intelligence or stretch the credulity of your public. Get a reputation for truthful advertising, and people will go a long way out of their road to do business with you."

J. J. HARTLEY

FOR

MAYOR

ADDRESS TO THE ELECTORS:

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of influential citizens, I have decided to come before the electors of Peterborough as a candidate for the Mayoralty. My long experience in municipal affairs, comprising a ten-year term as a member of the Council, also fourteen years on the Board of Education, and Chairman of the Board of Health, peculiarly fit me for the position of presiding head over your Aldermanic body. Those who are supporting my candidature are satisfied that I will, if elected, do my utmost to give the city a straight, honest administration of its affairs, and my motto will always be "strict economy." On the strength of my past record, I ask for your hearty support and the weight of your ballots to return me at the head of the polls next Monday. I promise close attention to municipal expenditures, and to particularly guard against leakages and unnecessary waste of public monies entrusted the Council for administration.

Again soliciting the honour of your votes on election day, and guaranteeing, if elected, to do my best to merit the confidence placed in me, I am,

Yours for economy,

WEST WARD ELECTIONS

Your vote is solicited for W. C. AUSTIN AS ALDERMAN FOR 1916. I have lived in the ward for the past fifteen years, and have been connected with nearly every movement for the progress and development of Peterborough. I was nominated without my knowledge by two of my neighbours on Weller street and have decided to stay in the field and do "my bit," if successful.

If elected I shall do all in my power to bring about a more economical management of our city's affairs. Wishing you all a Happy New Year, and again soliciting your vote and influence.

Respectfully yours,

W. C. AUSTIN

DUFFUS'

Committee Rooms are over the DUFFUS GARAGE UPSTAIRS 195 SIMCOE ST.

Supporters are asked to meet in the Committee Room any hour during the day or night.

To the Ratepayers of The City of Peterborough

I RESPECTFULLY solicit your Vote and Influence to Re-Elect me as a Member of the Board of Education.

It is admitted on all hands that our Public Schools and Collegiate Institute compare favourably with the best in the Province.

This excellent result has been achieved by the Members of the Board taking a deep and active interest in the efficiency of all our Schools and securing the hearty and enthusiastic co-operation of every Teacher in every Department.

As always in the past so in the future I shall continue if I am favoured with your Votes to see that the splendid standard of our Schools is maintained and wherever possible improved.

Yours respectfully,

W. H. HILL

COUNCILLOR FOR SMITH TOWNSHIP

Being unable to see all the Ratepayers of the Municipality, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence at the coming elections.

G. B. NICHOLS,
R.F.D. No. 5,

To The Electors Of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

As your representative on the Board of Education for the past twelve years, I have served you to the best of my ability, and now I beg to offer myself for re-election, and respectfully ask your support.

Yours very truly,

JOHN CRANE

West Ward Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having been nominated to contest the vacancy in the Board of Aldermen of the City for the West Ward, and having substantial property interests in the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election for a two-year term. Having had eight years' experience in the Council, I feel that I can be of service to the City. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works for three years, Property Committee two years, and am at present Chairman of the Board of Health.

I am as interested as any one in the City, in endeavouring to get a dollar's value for every dollar of the City money spent. And if elected I will in every way do what I can to further the City's interests.

It will be impossible for me to see all the electors of the West Ward, and I take this means of reaching those whom I do not see, and solicit your support in my behalf. Wishing you all, ladies and gentlemen, a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

George H. Duncan

Card To The Electors Of The West Ward

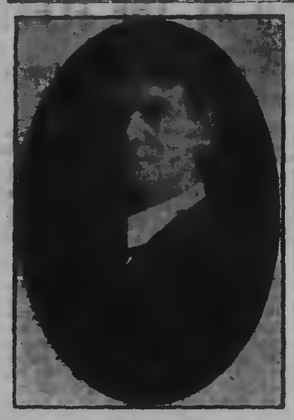
Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated to run as Alderman for the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election, and ask your vote and influence in my behalf. If elected I will use my best endeavours to further the best interests of this city.

Wishing you all the Compliments of the Season, I am,

Yours very truly,

WM. GALBRAITH.



To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward:—

Having been nominated for alderman in the North Ward, I ask you for your vote and influence. I am a sanitary engineer of long experience, and the great problem Peterborough is up against just now makes me a very valuable man to have as your representative. This past six years I have made special studies of sewage disposal work. I have prepared and read several papers on this subject before the Sanitary Engineers of Ontario, and to show their appreciation of my ability they made me chairman for all of Ontario. In that problem alone it is enough to place me in a position where I can exercise my ability. In regard to public work, I believe that Peterborough should own its own street paving plant and do their own work.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,

Robt. G. Sturgeon

TO BOARD OF EDUCATION

NEW BLOOD MEANS NEW ENERGY

TO THE ELECTORS--NORTH WARD

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,—

Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited to re-elect

WM. LANGFORD, Jr.

FOR ALDERMAN

I have been your representative in the Council for nearly three years, and during that time have endeavoured to conduct the City's affairs as economically and carefully as possible, consistent with efficiency and progress. If re-elected I will continue this policy, and the experience already gained will be at your service.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I am,

Sincerely

WM. LANGFORD, Jr.

ELECT HARRY PHELAN

An Experienced Ex-Alderman

For the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the request of a large number of electors of the city, I have accepted nomination as a candidate for Alderman for the West Ward.

I can appeal to the Electors for their confidence and support on the ground of my eight years' previous experience in the Council, and the knowledge gained during that time in the management of the City's affairs.

I have taken an active part on all committees, and was Chairman of the important committee of the Board of Works for two years.

I am not a Non-resident of the Ward; but on the contrary, I have been a regular resident of the West Ward for years, which enables me to have the most intimate knowledge of the special interest of this Ward in particular, as well as of the whole city.

I may also state that I am impressed with the importance of practicing rigid economy in the city's expenditures, and pledge myself that if elected, only the most judicious expenditures will have my sanction.

With best wishes for a prosperous New Year, for Peterborough, I am,

Faithfully yours,

HARRY PHELAN

For Board Of Education

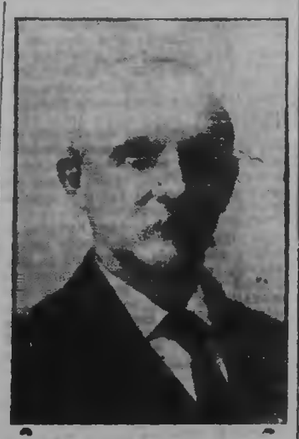
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have been again nominated for the School Board and kindly solicit your support. I have endeavoured to faithfully serve the city on the Board for the past year, and if elected will continue to give my very best efforts in this branch of public service.

Again soliciting your vote and wishing you all a Very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

J. W. MILLER



To The Electors Of Peterborough

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to re-elect me as a member of the Board of Education.

GEORGE BURNHAM

VOTE FOR

W. G. Howden

AS REEVE OF North Monaghan

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have the honour to have been nominated for the office of Reeve of North Monaghan. I have always had the interests of the township and county before me. I have served you in the past. I will serve you even better in the future. My record is before you. I want a clean and progressive administration of the township affairs. I ask for the support of all Ratepayers.

Yours respectfully,

W. G. HOWDEN

SAYS VICTOR MUST GIVE UP HOPE OF WAR INDEMNITY

Payment of Big Sum Impossible, Declares Mr. Joseph King, Economic Expert—Demand Might Aid Defeated Foes—Germany Could Pay Only If Allies Bought More of Her Goods Than Before The War

LONDON, Dec. 30.—"The exaction of a large indemnity as a part of the terms of peace in the present war is, I believe, out of the question," declares Mr. Joseph King, member of Parliament from Somerset, who has figured in the House of Commons for the last five years as an expert on economic questions. The question as put to him was whether at the close of the war will it be possible, and if possible will it be good policy, for the victors to impose a heavy money indemnity on the vanquished?

In his reply Mr. King naturally assumes that the Entente Powers will be the victors, but he insists they have little to gain from an effort to extract indemnity from Germany and her allies.

"Of course," he says "we hear many Englishmen remark:—'Certainly, we shall make Germany pay every penny we can get out of her, and we shall go on fighting until we can get terms, including a big sum in money.' That sounds very simple but is it possible? The imposition of an indemnity is a very complicated and difficult question to decide.

"Take, for example, the huge indemnity paid after 1871 by France to Germany. As a consequence of this the prosperity and trade of France were recuperative and progressive, while Germany was depressed and suffering. Bismarck himself acknowledged this, and economists in both France and Germany attributed it to the way in which Germany received her French indemnity payments.

Not an Aid to Victor.

"In subsequent wars, notably the Russo-Japanese war, claims for indemnities in money, even when made by the victors, have not been pressed because of the immense difficulties which they present.

"Any indemnity commensurate with the range and losses of this war must be taken at a huge figure. Five billion dollars, a sum less than the British Parliament has already voted for the war, may be taken as the lowest figure likely to be named. Now, to pay $5,000,000,000 from one side to another is impossible in gold. Even if gold payments could be made the immediate result would only be to immensely inflate prices in the country receiving the gold. Prices being raised enormously, with no increase in the volume of trade, manufacturers or commodities, would mean intense privation to the poor and a complete upset of commerce.

"The French Government surprised the world when in September, 1873, just twenty-seven months after the first indemnity payment, she paid to Germany the last instalment, making a total of a billion dollars. France was able to do this by buying credit bills in London, Amsterdam and elsewhere. One-third of a billion dollars' worth of bills were bought in London, for English trade had been brisk while Germany and France were fighting, and London bankers had been lending while French and German armies had been spending. The neutrality and activity of England made the indemnity easy. In the circumstances of the present war no such neutral trading and banking countries exist.

"If Germany has to pay a huge indemnity she cannot do it by shipments of gold, nor by transferring debts due her, nor by creating fresh debts. She can pay only by her commerce or productive industry. If her manufacturing and shipping and trading houses could be started at once in full swing immediately the war ends, she might soon be paying off indemnity. But her men will be gone, her credit vanished, her system overturned. The possibility of paying under these conditions seems remote.

May Demand Trade Concessions

"If Germany's wonderful productivity and trading enterprises are to be revived after the war in order to pay indemnities to her enemies, it means that her enemies will have to trade with her for more than they did before the war. If the impoverished workers of Germany are to make wealth to pay, then there must be customers for their work. These can only be found among the Allies. Will they want to encourage trade with her while their own mills and workmen are depressed and perhaps idle? Will those of the Allies who have been protectionist before, notably Russia, become free trade in order that German workers may produce profits to pay indemnity?

"Writers who have studied the subject are agreed that a nation which proves victorious in war may with profit and advantage impose a money indemnity on the vanquished only under very exceptional circumstances and three conditions are requisite:—The nation paying the indemnity must be very wealthy, it must be immeasurably weaker in military strength than the victor and the war must be of short duration.

"There is one possible way, however, in which the equivalent of an indemnity might figure in the Allies' peace terms. In this latest and greatest war new and astonishing methods of warfare and action have been widely introduced and old traditions and conventions of war have been thrown to the winds. May it not be so after the war that new proposals for peace will be put forward? For instance, why not require Germany to supply so many tons of steel, cement, timber, stone and bricks for rebuilding devastated Belgium? Why not agree to trading conventions that would allow the Allies the benefit of mutual trade and commerce? Why not get certain advantages over land rates between the West of Europe and Russia across Germany? And other similar concessions will readily occur. The object of these would not be, like that of an indemnity, to disarm and weaken the vanquished, but it would obviously be advantageous to the victors. The possibilities of civilization are not exhausted even if a crushing indemnity is in the nature of events out of the question."

ELECTION OF DEPUTY REEVE OF SMITH

To the Electors,

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having again been nominated for re-election for Deputy-Reeve of the Township of Smith, I again ask for your support in favour of my election on Monday, January 3rd.

My record in the Council during the past four years is before you and I can safely leave that in your hands. I may add that my intentions are to remain a resident of the Township, and continue to reside there, and retain my personal interest there as usual. If elected I pledge myself to continue to devote my close attention to the best interests of the Township.

I am in favour of issuing debentures for 5 or 10 years for the grant made by the Peterborough Council to the British Red Cross Society, in order to avoid taxing the ratepayers at the present time, and to pay the amount out of the general fund.

With best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Respectfully yours,

J. A. JOBE

To The Electors Of The Township Of Smith

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I am in the field for the Reeveship of Smith and solicit your kind co-operation in my behalf. It is impossible for me to see all the electors and I am taking this means of soliciting the votes of these whom I am unable to meet. If I am elected to the Reeveship of the very important Township of Smith, I will do my best to merit your confidence.

Wishing you all a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

R. N SCOTT.

Board of Education

As I am the only member of the Board on the east side of the river, we think it only fair that we should have at least one representative.

8,000 MURDERED DURING 1914

Memphis Most Dangerous City and Reading, Penn., the Safest

Eight thousand persons were murdered in the United States last year; 80 per cent. of the victims were men; Memphis, Tenn., was the most dangerous of American cities from the homicide viewpoint, with a murder rate of 72.2 for 100,000 of population; Reading, Penn. with a corresponding rate of 1 for 100,000, was the safest; New York had a murder rate of 6.1 for 100,000; Chicago's rate was 9.1.

These and many other interesting facts are recounted in an article on "The Homicide Record of American Cities for 1914," which appears in today's issue of The Spectator, an insurance journal. Frederick L. Hoffman, the author, made the compilation, and draws lessons for life insurance managers.

A table of the statistics of thirty American cities shows that in Manhattan and the Bronx 186 persons were murdered last year, a rate of 6.1 for 100,000, a rate which has remained exactly stationary for twelve years. Brooklyn, with 94 murders last year, has a rate of 5.1 for 100,000. Next to Memphis, with the highest rate, comes Charleston, S. C., with 33.3 for 100,000. The first eight cities are in the South, where a majority of the murders are due to negro fights. Chicago had 317 murders last year, New York City 280. Over in Philadelphia the rate is 4.6 for 100,000, and in Boston 3-4.

Tables show that in the decade 1904-1913 the average rate for all the cities was 7.9 for 100,000 against a rate of 8.6 in 1914, or, in other words, the rate last year was 9.9 per cent. or 7 for 100,000, in excess of the average rate for the years of the preceding decade. Of the thirty cities under consideration, the rate increased in twenty-one, decreased in seven, and remained stationary in two.

The suicide rate increased in 1914 3.6 per cent., while the murder rate increased 8.9 per cent.

Another table on the methods of murder shows that 60.6 per cent. of homicide were done with firearms, 15.1 per cent. with cutting or piercing instruments, and 24.3 per cent. through other means. Most homicide victims die between the ages of 25 and 34.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Oiling The Streets Vanquished The Dust

Ex-Alderman G. Walter Green's Valuable Efforts In Securing The Best Dust-Laying Results Yet Obtained

Early last spring, the Council decided to try oil for laying the dust on the gravelled streets of the city.

It was Ex-Alderman Green who was instrumental in obtaining information from different cities regarding their experience with the dust nuisance, and the best and cheapest methods for keeping down the dust, without injury to the road beds.

Mr. Green was also instrumental in securing from different oil refining companies, the practical advice regarding the use of the grade of crude oil best suited for our streets.

He also negotiated for the purchase of the oil at a price which was considered very advantageous for the city. His services to the city in this connection was duly appreciated by the members of the Board of Aldermen and by influential citizens who were interested in the new experiment of dust laying.

The oil was secured from the British American Oil Company for this purpose. Unfortunately it was late in the season when the first application was made, and all of the streets did not get a second application. There were no complaints from the owners of motor cars in regard to their tires, and the opinion of most of the residents seemed to be greatly in favour of the oil, both from the standpoint of dust laying and that of preserving the road surface.

There is no doubt but what a heavy asphaltic oil has a great value as a binder for a road surface, and it is largely to Ex-Alderman Green's efforts that the city is indebted for so satisfactory a solution of this question for Peterborough streets.

Not only was the dust nuisance satisfactorily overcome, but it is admitted that the action of the new oil has had a splendid effect in hardening the road bed and preserving its life.

Frontage Tax Basis For Street Watering

Mr. Green, in his Election Address, pledges himself to see that "many more streets are properly oiled, and that when this cannot or is not done that no resident of any street shall be called upon to pay for service or advantages he does not get—virtually placing street oiling or watering on a frontage tax basis." This should strike the Ratepayer as a fair way of dealing with the cost of this expenditure, and those who have been complaining should remember Mr. Green's attitude on this matter and support his election for Mayor for 1916.

German Review Extols Heroism of French Soldiers and Sailors

The Weisse Blaetter Denounces Falsehoods of German Professor Who Had Calumniated the French and Gives Instances of Magnificent Spirit and Bravery

French heroism is being championed in the Weisse Blatter, a German literary periodical, which does not mince words in repudiating some recent calumnies against the conduct of the French troops.

"One of our university professors," says the German magazine, "is reported as having told the students attending his lectures that the French soldier is an eager fighter providing he is well protected against personal danger—for instance, when he has a chance to fire from a window or through a loophole in a wall. To this foul accusation the professor added the still more malicious statement, that many men in the French army, officers as well as private soldiers, always carried a suit of citizen's clothes with them, so as to be able to desert on the first favorite occasion without incurring too great a risk of recapture.

"These nefarious falsehoods are presumably intended to imbue simple minded people with a notion that our war against France is an easy matter. But our soldiers returning from the front know otherwise and have an altogether different story to tell. Not only is it absolutely untrue that the French troops are avoiding battle and prefer retreat, but it is, on the contrary, an established fact, proven beyond doubt in countless instances, that our French adversaries expose themselves to dangers and sacrifice their lives with a ready unselfishness not even expected of them under the oath they have sworn to their country. One need only point to a naval incident early in the war, when a French torpedo boat was sunk by one of our war ships. In his official report of the affair the German commander related that the French captain had both of his feet blown off shortly after the action had begun. The torpedo boat was also soon put out of fighting condition, and some of the French sailors made ready to leap into the sea before their vessel foundered. Divining their intention, the wounded commander, who was clinging to a railing, called out to his men:—Lash me fast here, so I won't go overboard. A French sailor never quits his ship.' The men did as ordered, and none of them thought any more of jumping into the water. They grouped themselves instead around their brave chief and went down into the deep with him when, in a few minutes, the waves closed over the doomed vessel."

PARTING SHOT AT CAPTAIN BOY-ED CALLS HIM LIAR

Providence Journal Tells Him Only His Position Kept Him From Jail

Says Every Word Published About His Plots Was True.

PROVIDENCE, Dec. 30.—The Providence Journal to-day sent a long wireless despatch to Captain Karl Boy-Ed on the S.S. Rotterdam.

"Your farewell statement to the American people, in so far as it relates to the Providence Journal," the message said, "is a wilful and deliberate falsehood. Has the Providence Journal created a hysterical suspicion concerning the destruction of American factories, the murder of American workingmen, or the daily plots against the peace and safety of this Government and its citizens, almost all of which acts have been fathered and financed from your own office? Every word of what the Journal has published with regard to your personal connection with these plots has been true and nobody knows it better than yourself."

His False Affidavits.

The message reverts to its charges that Captain Boy-Ed wrote the warning to American citizens not to take passage on the Lusitania, to attempts it asserts be made to embroil the United States with Great Britain with false affidavits regarding shipments of supplies to naval vessels, and to the so-called "Huerta plot." The newspaper declares also that an attempt was made to "bribe into silence" by "the offer of a large sum of money for the formation of a press bureau." The message ends with this declaration:

"You know well the reason why the United States Government refused to permit you to remain any longer in this country. These reasons were not based on 'hysterical rumors' printed by the Providence Journal.

"Your attempt this morning to make the American people believe such a ridiculous falsehood is your farewell insult to a Government and a press that have treated you with unexampled patience in the face of evidence which, had it not been for the protection given you by your official standing, would have long ago placed you behind prison bars."

FRANCE CURBS DRINKING.

President Poincare Heads Enlarged Temperance Society.

PARIS, Dec. 28.—France's principal temperance society, The Alarm, has just been reorganized on a more comprehensive basis with President Poincare as Honorary President, and under a patronage committee, including M. Ribot, Minister of Finance; M. Thomas, Minister of Munitions; M. Bourgeois, Minister of State; General Niox, Governor of the Soldiers' Home; Paul Doumer, former President of the Chamber of Deputies and Paul Delombre.

Jean Finot is President of the society, and Ferdinand Buisson, President of the League of the Rights of Man; Henry Coulon and Dr. Pierre Bouillet are Vice-Presidents. The Executive Committee contains the names of all Frenchmen eminent in science, literature, commerce and industry.

The extension of the scope of the society is viewed with particular interest, and is considered significant in view of the recent legislation and the decrees limiting the sale of alcohol.

ALD. WEIR EXPLAINS THE PETERBOROUGH METAL PRODUCTS CO. BY-LAW

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—At the time of the municipal elections on January 3rd the electors are asked to vote on a proposed by-law to give a partial exemption to the Peterborough Metal Products Co., which will occupy the buildings formerly used by the Cordage Company.

The fact that this company proposed establishing a factory was brought to our attention by a letter to the Mayor, which was written on behalf of a Toronto capitalist, Mr. H. Gagnier, asking whether there was a factory building here that could be leased. Mr. Gagnier had also written to a number of other places and had advertised in the Toronto papers. He of course received numerous replies, including one from Peterborough. In addition to writing to him, the Manufacturers committee had Mr. Gagnier visited in Toronto, where a description of buildings that were vacant here were given him, and the advantages of the city as an industrial centre presented. Mr. Gagnier visited Peterborough and saw the cordage works building, and also visited other places to see buildings to which his attention had been called.

The buildings suited the purpose in view and Mr. Gagnier arranged with the owners for a lease for three years with an option to purchase them.

Mr. Gagnier's statement to the committee is that before the war began he proposed establishing a factory for the manufacture of special machinery. When the war broke out he dropped the idea for a time, but has since taken it up again. His purpose is to manufacture munitions for the present, he having received a large order for shells, and when the war is over, if conditions are favourable, he will take up the manufacture of special machinery. He asked that the city give him encouragement to the extent of exempting the factory for the three years from taxes, except school taxes, local improvement rates and Provincial war taxes.

The property is at present assessed for $30,000,000. The proposed exemption on the real estate at the 1915 rate would amount to $463.50 a year. But if the factory is a going concern, school taxes will be paid on a business assessment of $18,000.00, which are not now received, because there can be no business assessment on vacant property, and these school taxes at the rate for 1915 will amount to $162.90 a year, so that the exemption, as compared with the taxes now paid, would amount to $300.60 a year.

The Council believes it will be good business to give the exemption asked, to secure the guaranteed employment for three years of at least 50 hands and a probable employment during that time of about 100 hands, and with the prospect of securing a permanent industry. The Council has, therefore, submitted the proposed by-law to the electors for their approval.

Yours truly,

A. WEIR,
Chairman Manufacturers Committee.

HUNS ARE MODEST.

Germans Prohibit Sending Scientific Publications Abroad.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The Chronicle's Amsterdam correspondent says that German authorities have prohibited the sending out of the country of seven scientific journals, chiefly medical publications. The correspondent continues:

"Germans hope and believe that, once the outside world is deprived of scientific medical knowledge disseminated by them, disease will rage unhindered over the rest of the globe, and so do the work their war machine is failing to accomplish."

PART THAT IS BEING PLAYED BY THE FLEET

British Sea-Dogs "Performing for Allies and Humanity Most Important Drama Now Being Played for the Freedom of the World"

LONDON, Dec. 30. — "The British Grand Fleet, which as a Grand Fleet has never yet had the opportunity of being in action, has, nevertheless, from hour to hour, day by day, through all the months of the war, been the foundation upon which everything else has rested," was the summary by A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, of the lessons to be derived from a moving picture record of the activities of the fleet, over the first production of which he presided this afternoon.

Mr. Balfour declared that the film shown was packed with lessons of the deepest import to Britons and to the world." The success of all the land operations of the allies, from Archangel on the north of the Persian Gulf, ultimately depended, he believed, on the British fleet, because were it removed the allied nations "now banded together against the tyranny of the Central Powers," would be cut off from the outer world and from each other. He doubted whether the magnitude of the task thrown upon the British navy, and so far triumphantly accomplished, was yet realized.

"Though silent," said the First Lord, "it is performing at this moment, not alone for the allies but for the whole world, the greatest, the most important part in the drama now being played out for the freedom of the world. The world has yet to know how much it owes to the British fleet, and how the assured victory which is coming to us in the future is coming at least as much the gift of the British navy as of the splendid valour of the allied troops, whether British or foreign.

KING FLED IN STORM

Peter of Serbia Passed Night in Peasant's Cottage.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—The Tageblatt's Sofia correspondent dramatically describes the flight of King Peter of Serbia, through Albania, as told by an Albanian physician in a letter to a friend at Uskub.

The physician reached a miserable little Albanian village during a furious snowstorm and could find as sleeping quarters nothing better than a small place in a peasant's barn. At the very height of the storm four cavalrymen appeared and demanded admission to the cottage.

Two of the riders almost tenderly lifted a third man from his horse and bore him into the house, while the fourth brought up the rearguard with boxes of provisions. The third man, seemingly a wounded Serbian officer, was laid on the couch. He wearily closed his eyes and turned his head as lights were brought. Then for the first time the physician who had come to the house from the stable to watch the operations of the strangers, recognised in the apparently ill man King Peter of Serbia.

As his companions prepared the semblance of a bed for him the King between groans, thanked them, but declined food. One of his companions, probably a physician, forced the King to take a little liquid nourishment, after which the whole party sat for a time in gloomy silence, then made a pretence at sleeping. They resumed the journey before daylight.

WHEAT CULTIVATION A STATE MONOPOLY

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Count Tisza the Hungarian Premier, contemplates making the cultivation of wheat a State monopoly, according to the Post's Budapest correspondent, who declares that it is a desperate scheme showing that national bankruptcy and ruin are not far distant. The correspondent says that it sems incredible that the Government should propose such a measure and the mere fact of its being proposed proves the gravity of the present situation.

Referring to the idea in Parliament, M. Exterenyi, a former Minister, said to Count Tisza: "If the Government proposed a monopoly on wheat it would be the most dastardly act ever committed by the Government, and they would find millions of people involved in open revolution before the plan could be adopted."

Sarnia's Retaliation On Port Huronites

Exacts $1 Poll-Tax From Those Who Work on This Side of The River

SARNIA, Dec. 30.— A big surprise awaited about two hundred Port Huronites who worked in this city when they landed on the ferry here. A city officer met them and informed them that they would have to pay one dollar poll tax. Those who had money paid, while others have until to-morrow to settle up. This is Sarnia's answer to the American income tax, which collects 1 per cent. of the wages of Sarnians working in Port Huron, as recently enforced. It is hoped here that the Canadian government will also take some action in the same manner as the United States.

BOUQUET TENDERED TO A NUMBER OF RETURNED SOLDIERS

Interesting Function Was Held in The Y. M. C. A. Last Evening—Music Supplied by Members of The 93rd Battalion Band—Inspiring Addresses

Last evening a complimentary banquet was given in the Y.M.C.A. to a number of returned soldiers by the 57th Regiment Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. The banquet hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion and an orchestra supplied by the band of the 93rd Battalion contributed an excellent selection of music Among those present were Lieut.-Col. J. Mills, late of the 2nd Battalion, First Canadian Overseas Contingent and now Inspection Officer in the 2nd Division; Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston Officer Commanding the 93rd Battalion; Hon.-Major J. C. Davidson, Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion; Capt J. H. Burnham, Paymaster of the 93rd Battalion, and Capt. James Rollins, Quartermaster of the 93rd Battalion.

The toast to the King was responded to in the usual manner, after which Hon.-Major Davidson, who presided, read a letter from Lieut. Col. D. Walker, expressing the latter's regret at his inability to be present. Major Davidson followed with an inspiring address, in which he complimented the returned soldiers who were the guests of the evening upon the able and courageous manner in which they had served their King and country. The speaker assured the men that they would not be allowed to want for anything and reminded them of a promise emanating from Mr. E. G. Patterson, Superintendent of the Canadian General Electric Company, in which the latter stated that he would give preference to returning soldiers when it came to a question of employment.

At Major Davidson's request, Lieut Col. Johnston spoke a few words before the toast to the guests of the evening was responded to by Lieut-Col. Mills. The Commanding Officer of the 93rd Battalion had nothing but praise for the men of his command He assured those present that they would receive nothing but the best of treatment while under his care.

Lieut.-Col. Mills' Reply.

In replying to the toast to the guests of the evening, Lieut.-Col Mills commended the Daughters of the Empire for the active and practical interest shown by them towards the overseas forces. Speaking of the 1st Contingent, Lieut.-Col. Mills said that mere words could not express his admiration of the men comprising that unit. He referred to the hardships endured at Salisbury Plain and in France, also the splendid spirit shown by the men. "Canada has now more men under arms than Wellington had at Waterloo," said the speaker, by way of emphasizing the growth of Canada's army.

Sergt. Allen, a member of the 10th Battery, who returned home a couple of weeks ago, was one of the first to accept the Chairman's invitation to say a few words. Sergt. Allen gave a very lucid and extended account of his experiences while at the front He recalled the stirring sight of the great armada that sailed from Quebec with the 1st Canadian Contingent on board. The ships stretched out for a distance of thirty-five or forty miles. Sergt. Allen named W. E. Graham and William Chapman as two Peterborough boys who had distinguished themselves at the front.

Private Martin was the next speaker. He gave a very interesting account of his experiences from the time he was called out as a reservist until he was discharged, having served his time in the Imperial Army Private Martin was in the trenches within two months after the war broke out, and saw considerable service. He was wounded in the ankle

The toast to the "Empire" was proposed by Captain James Rollins. "The very word 'Empire,' said Capt Rollins, stirs our imagination, and makes our pulse beat faster. It matters not whether you think of the men of the Empire or the Daughters of the Empire. The women of this country have stood quietly and bravely by while they have watched their loved ones go forward in defence of the Empire. They have endured a greater mental strain than those who have faced the actual danger of battle.

Captain Burnham's Reply.

In reply to the toast of 'The Empire" Captain Burnham said that a great cause and a great conflict must excite in all serious-minded people a wonder at the circumstances connected with it, and the purpose of it all The greatest sacrifice and the greatest gift to the world that a man and woman can make is that of their lives. Next to that is the willingness to do so indicated by a cheerful advance within the immediate danger zone. What is it that impels people to be willing to make this sacrifice? In most cases it is a certain noble impulse that must come from God Himself. In some, it is the love of adventure, and in a few, the result of despair. at it is with the noble impulse that we have to deal. It alone works great and permanent results for the benefit of humanity, freedom and civilization. Men and women who have returned as these soldiers the guests whom we delight to hon our this evening, have returned are so far beyond the ordinary circumstances of life in the greatness of the call and of their answer to it that I am quite convinced nothing really remains for an ordinary mortal like myself to say about it. We all understand the splendour of their deeds, their courage and their goodness. They read our gratitude and the honour which we would confer upon them in our admiring faces Words cannot convey all we think or feel concerning them. Without that iron discipline of the army which these men cheerfully obey, knowing that by union alone can the cause be won, their noblest efforts would be of no avail. They do not stop before enlisting to haggle about the conduct of the war, or some little detail of military government. They had the spirit of self-sacrifice and the courage of action. They laid aside all petty ideas and prejudices, bearing in mind that he who is really for the cause lays aside all else and does his best without grumbling. What a contrast is this to the soldiers of another cause—to many of the soldiers of that incomparable leader, Christ, who, calling for volunteers in the great cause of the rescue of the world, finds many willing, but most of them captious and half-hearted. He calls to them and if they will or not it must remain with them. He cannot make a man or woman enlist. There is no conscription in His cause.

Call for Volunteers.

He calls upon them to enlist in His great cause, but many stop to haggle about Church government, about petty points of doctrine and procedure; others about the danger to God's truth, as if Christ and God were not able to guard the truth, and all that is necessary to it, without the assistance of every baulky member of every little baulky community. I make bold to say that this war could not have occurred if the volunteers of Christ had been like the volunteers of our army in France. It is not too much to say that even Protestant Christendom, if united, could have prevented this world-wide horror.

Christianity is Powerless.

The Protestants of Northern Germany, who are the backbone of the Teutonic side of this conflict, the Protestants of the United States, the Protestants of the British Empire could alone, by united, loyal and cheerful action have rendered such an unholy aggression on the part of Germany, as this, impossible. But whilst proclaiming that they march under the banner of Christ, they defy Him. They reserve the right to trust Him, or their own opinions, whenever they please. This failure to give loyal obedience to the spirit and, main principle of the great cause of God, has resulted in the downfall of our highest hopes. Christianity stands powerless in the face of war and why? I have endeavoured to tell you why. It requires some boldness so to do, but I am prepared to run that risk. Unless those who profess to follow Christ will leave the leadership, the plans of the campaign, the orders, the strategy, and tactics, the discipline, all to Him knowing that it is safe in His hands and that there remains for them but one thing and that is obedience to the spirit within them, of loyalty to their Leader and to the cause which He champions, then there is no hope for the future of Christianity. The legions of war must co-operate, so must the legions in any other cause If they are going to halt when it pleases and advance or operate independently to each other, as they see fit, they are a danger to the cause—not an assistance. They are a mob—not an army. They are defaulters—not loyal supporters. Why is it that even in politics men become frenzied and obsessed, yet when the country is in danger they can unite and fight side by side? But when it comes to the great cause for which Christ Himself, died, they will not yield the smallest particle of their objection and prejudices. I am convinced that until this disunion becomes union until differences sink themselves in loyalty, until denominational returns are no longer compiled by comparison, and until all shades and colours and sexes and nationalities can greet and embrace each other whole-hearted ly under the banner of the incomparable Leader whom they pretend to recognise, nothing of value can be accomplished, and the cause itself which cannot be destroyed, because it is of God, cannot prosper because it is in the grasp of such an unreasoning and disloyal people, to whom, by its very nature, it must be entrusted Ready to Assist.

Both Mrs. Joseph Mills and Mrs (Dr.) F. C. Neal spoke a few words on behalf of the returned soldiers. They declared their willingness to do anything within their power to assist in any practical way to help those who have suffered as a result of their efforts to serve their King and Country. Mrs. Neal said she, for one would be willing to throw her home open for the reception of returning heroes who felt the want of home cheer.

The meeting closed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King.

WOMAN PERSISTS IN TEMPTING MAN TO DESERT FLAG

Sadie McMillan Sentenced to Six Months by St. Thomas Court

A SERIOUS CRIME

ST. THOMAS, Dec. 30.—Mrs. Sadie McMillan who pleaded guilty to a charge of attempting to entice a soldier, Herbert Welch, to desert, last Tuesday, and was remanded for a week, appeared before the Magistrate to-day. Evidence was produced in court showing that the woman had made a further attempt to get the soldier to desert. During the remand she secured a pencil-addressed envelope and had it mailed from Detroit imploring Pte. Welch to leave the army. This letter was signed Hazel Taylor, but the handwriting was easily determined to be that of the accused.

Magistrate Maxwell, in dealing with the case, said the crime was of a serious nature, and must be dealt with in a manner which would deter similar offences.

The woman was sentenced to serve six months in the Mercer Reformatory.

POULTRY SHOW WILL BE A BIG SUCCESS

There was a largely attended meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association last night. President Jos. Kelly presided. After the usual routine business had been attended to, the committee in charge of the arrangements for the show which opens next week made a very glowing report on the entry list. Entries are coming in by wire, one was received from Quebec.

It is expected that there will be 1,800 birds on exhibition.

Mr. J. Russel Fee, of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, will be present and give a lecture on the "Candling of Eggs."

Mr. Geo. McClelland made a report to the Association of the annual Provincial show at Guelph.

There have been four new silver cups donated to the prize list. This makes a total of 21 cups to be competed for. There will be $1,000 in cash prizes.

The entries close on Jan. 1st.. Any local exhibitors who have not yet entered their birds can get prize list at Brault's shop.

Voice of The People

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—Ald. Duffus at last night's meeting was particularly strong in his remarks as to outside contractors and wages paid for labour.

How is it that after dealing with local workers on day labour basis and also contractors, he saw fit to import labour and go into the country for a farmer to oversee the building of his own new home

Local Contractor.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The electors of this city this year have three candidates from which to select their choice of a Mayor. I wish to appeal to all thoughtful and serious voters for fair play to the army of workers in Peterborough. Now, Sir, in past years we have had Conservative Mayors, Liberal Mayors, and the workers have supported both. Now this year we have three Liberals aspiring to the Mayor's chair, and one of them is, and has been for years, the representative of the workers. Is it not just and fair that the workers' man should be elected Mayor? We have supported both parties in past years. Now let the honest and fair-minded men of both parties support us, and elect Mr. Hartley, our respected representative as Mayor. In our ranks we have Liberals and Conservatives, who have done good work for their respective parties, and we appeal to all voters who believe in fair play. Is it not time we had our turn? Politics do not enter into this contest, as all three candidates are of the same party, and one is President of the Trades and Labour Council. Is it not only fair play to us as a large body of Peterborough's citizens who have never yet had a representative in the Mayor's chair to have our man elected to that office. He is a capable man and all admit he is honest, and keeps his word. Give the workers a turn and elect Mr. Hartley as our next Mayor.

Yours sincerely.

William Workman.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I have seen a few election campaigns fought in the city but the way Ald. Green and his ward heelers are fighting this one has them all beat easily. One wonders what is coming next. We are told in big head-lines that this city needs Ald Green as its Mayor. What a magnificent bluff. As much as to say we cannot get on without G. W. Green as our Mayor. We are not told what will happen to the city if we do not make him our Mayor. We are simply told we need him as our Mayor. Who is the best judge of that, the city, or G. W. Green? No doubt he does feel that he is absolutely necessary to our city, but to tell us so in big head-lines is really funny, besides being rather conceited. I fancy we can rub along in the future, as we have done in the past, fairly well, without the great G. W. Green as our Mayor. Then, as if that was not enough, we are asked to let him finish his work—the outfall sewer, etc. Well. I admit his work certainly lacks finish, but how much of it is his work? He is Chairman of the Board of Works, and the whole Council is the Board of Works, and are entitled to as much credit as G. W. Green. If he is anxious to finish his work, why does he not stay in the Council, at his old job, and finish his work? No one tried to stop him. I like a man to have a good opinion of himself, but a really good man is also a modest man, not a boaster, and prefers others to praise him, instead of praising himself in glaring headlines. The city can be trusted to know best what man it needs for its Mayor, and will vote for that man. Mr. Hartley does not hold a club over our heads, and he is not suffering from swelled head Neither does he copy the Kaiser's advertising methods. We know G. W Green and we know Mr. Hartley and of the two give me Mr. Hartley. He is straightforward, does not boast but will carry out all his promises to us. He is too well known to have to resort to self-glorification and advertising.

John Smith.

Are Short of Candidates For Lindsay Council

Lindsay Warder: Lindsay ratepayers are to-day confronted with the peculiar situation of having four qualified aldermen and three vacancies in the council. A long list of prospective candidates for aldermanic honours last dwindled down to four, and another nomination meeting will have to be held to nominate more men for office. If more than three are nominated another election may be the result.

EMBARGO HAS BEEN REMOVED

Agreement Has Been Made Between Canada and U. S.

OTTAWA, Dec. 30.—An amicable arrangement has been made between the Minister of Agriculture and the Washington authorities removing the embargo on potatoes. As a result of recent negotiations by Hon. Martin Burrell, at Washington, it has been agreed to prohibit entry into either country of potatoes affected with dangerous diseases such as canker or wart. In regard to minor diseases such as scab, existing in both countries, all potatoes exported or imported, must be reasonably free from such diseases.

CROWDS CHEER "DUFFUS" FOR MAYOR

ASPIRANTS FOR CIVIC HONORS WERE HEARD AT MUNICIPAL MEETING

While Attendance Was Not Large The City's Problems Were Intelligently Discussed — Affair Was Quite Harmonious—Some of the New Men Played Safe, Others Essayed Expression of Opinions.

MAYORALTY MEN LEAD

A comparatively small attendance at last night's municipal meeting in Victoria Hall indicated that the civic spirit is not flourishing in Peterborough. The meeting seemed otherwise successful. Several hundred ratepayers listened more than two hours to what the mayoralty and aldermanic candidates had to say for themselves, and it was an encouraging and attentive audience. It was a decidedly decorous meeting, too, lacking the "hot stuff" they turn out in Toronto; for which the ratepayers here should be truly thankful. Mr. Hartley sprung a little rift in the harmonious lute the other members had used, but even his diversion was scarcely discordant. Mayor Buller presided in good style, incidentally thanking the ratepayers for the support they had given him during his Council experience.

Mr. R. G. Sturgeon

Mr. Sturgeon said he had made a careful study of sewage disposal during the past six years. He suggested that the present sewer should be run down this side of the river to a flat section where a settling basin would be located. Securing a two-hundred acre farm and dividing it into four sections of fifty acres each, each of which would constitute a settling bed, would be a desirable plan, Mr. Sturgeon said. By this means each bed would accommodate the effluent for a period of three months and for the remaining nine months would be permitted to rest. The plan proposed by the city engineer was a costly one in the opinion of Mr. Sturgeon. It proposes to pump the sewage across the river and effluent would return into the river still containing 20 per cent. of the poison.

Mr. Sturgeon said he favoured the idea of the city owning a paving plant and of doing work during periods of depression; he was opposed to contractors bringing in outside labour. He thought the speaker expressed was that the city engineer should tender on all public works similarly to the other contractors. This would discover whether the engineer was efficient or not. Mr. Sturgeon concluded a modest address by asking the north ward electors to mark their ballots for him

Ald. Langford.

Ald. Langford in reply, said that the plan for the sewage disposal system had been decided upon and endorsed by the Provincial Board of Health and it only remained now for the representatives of the people to execute the work as efficiently and economically as possible.

Ald. Langford reviewed the work of the Council during the past three years, mentioning the removal of poles from the streets, the inauguration of a hydro-electric system from which all the citizens would eventually profit. After mentioning other items, Ald. Langford emphasized the importance of the hydro-radial scheme now under consideration and the advantages it would secure for this city if a line were laid east from Toronto.

At this time of the year, Ald. Langford observed, the workingman is made aware of his importance by the solicitude for his welfare. City government is a complex system and questions have to be considered from various angles. The Council has to consider all concerned. It can't do all for the workingman and not think of others; but it has a duty to do all it can for the workingmen. Ald. Langford said that if elected he would do what he could for them and would also endeavour to follow the policy he adopted when he first became an alderman.

Wm. Galbraith.

A candidate for the one-year term in the West Ward, Mr. Galbraith, remarked that he did not wish to make any big promises. It would be his first years in Council work, and he realized he would have considerable to learn; but he would endeavour to give the ratepayers the best of his ability.

Mr. W. C. Austin.

Mayor Buller announced that Mr. Austin was confined to his home with influenza and was unable to take part in the meeting. He is opposing Mr. Galbraith.

Ex-Ald. George Duncan.

In appearing again before the ratepayers ex-Ald. George Duncan said that with his eight years in municipal affairs he would do his best to represent the ward. He understood that the only thing Mr. Phelan was saying against him was that he did not live in that ward. The fact was he happened to reside in Ward No. 1, but he had property interests in the West Ward and was as well acquainted with the needs of that part of the city as of any other section.

Mr. Duncan explained to the electors in that division that they may vote for two men, for a one-year man, and a two-year. Mr. Austin and Mr. Galbraith were the one-year men, and a ratepayer can vote for only one of them. Duncan and Phelan are the two-year men.

Ex-Ald. Harry Phelan.

Mr. Phelan said he had served in the Council eight years, and he would rely on his record in asking the West Ward ratepayers for their support. He said he would try to give them his best services.

Ex-Ald. G. Walter Green.

The chairman of the Board of Works during 1915, said that he had represented the West Ward for three years, and his record was before the ratepayers. He did not claim that he had made no mistakes, or that if elected mayor he would make none; but he would not make the same mistake twice. The Board of Works is the big spending department of the Council, calling for the most careful attention and the greatest amount of time. It had not been the intention of the Board last year to carry on paving operations as extensively as they had done, but the members felt justified because of the many men who had sought work, some of them almost begging it. The Council was able to get very favourable prices from the paving companies by the fact that they had but little work on hand, and they were willing to sacrifice price in order to keep their men engaged. Thus the work was done at $1.75 per square yard, where it would have cost $3.19. The city got good value for their money, and they were able to provide a great deal of work for labouring men.

Ex-Ald. Green detailed his efforts to protect the working man's interests. He personally demanded of the City Engineer that no man should be employed who could not present a certificate showing that he was a resident of Peterborough. When one company did not pay wages which did not seem fair, Mr. Green was successful in getting them to pay the same as the other company, and to agree to a nine-hour day. Last year 11,068 lenior feet of permanent street pavement was laid, a little over 2 1/10 miles. The city has now five miles of this permanent roadway. Three miles of sidewalk were constructed this year, and 1½ miles of sewers, which were built 80 per cent cheaper than in most years.

Outfall Sewer Important.

"The outfall sewer and disposal plant are the big things before the Council now, and will require a great deal of attention from now on. I claim that the experience I have got during the past two years in this matter should be valuable to the city during the next year and that it will be in the interests of the city to elect me. I have been on the work every day and have given it the most careful attention. It has cost a great deal of money and will cost much more. We did not build that sewer because we wanted to, but because we had to. The townships to the south of us issued a writ compelling us through the Provincial Board of Health to construct it."

Ald. Green detailed the work of building the sewer, the quicksand and water to be contended with and the necessity of driving an elaborate protection of spiles.

"We believe we have got past the worst part of it now and are bringing it to a successful issue. When it is completed we will have to go ahead with the disposal system. The very people who compelled us to build the sewer blocked us at every turn when we tried to obtain a suitable location. They fought us by themselves and through their legislative representatives.

The best engineers in the country, said Ald. Green, have assured the Board of Works that the disposal plant's site is now in the best possible situation.

The Board's Expenditure.

"I might say for the benefit of the labouring men that during the past year the Board of Works expended $129,791. That money has been fairly and honestly spent. Now, working man, who has been your friend? Who has tried to take care of your interests? I claim that I have done all I could in your interests."

Oiling of Streets.

Ex-Ald. Green made a reference to the oiling of the streets recalling the opposition raised by automobile owners. He knew, he said, that the only objection could be made to the quality of the oil and he took up this question as if it were his own business. By the use of oil the roads treated were given a permanency that was not gained by the customary use of water which simply washed the roads away as soon as they were built up.

The Bonaccord street bridge was not overlooked. "It's out where Green lives," said the ex-alderman, who stated that the Council had received a petition of 118 names requesting that it be erected. The estimate for it was $3,913 and of this sum $719 had been saved by building the bridge on dry land when the diversion of the creek was arranged.

Ald. Green referred to the fact that in Council when one or two members had objected to the bridge he had offered to pay for it if he were given a fixed assessment on a field of his nearby for a certain number of years.

"I have been accused of purhasing the bridge debentures because they looked good. I may say that those debentures have not yet been printed so Green hasn't bought them."

The hydro-radial scheme was referred to by ex-Ald. Green. Some of his opposition had been saying that he would be "green," but the speaker remarked that he had just spent $218,000 of the people's money and he was well acquainted and was in close touch with the city's affairs.

Mr. Hartley's Lapse.

Referring to Mr. Hartley's municipal experience, ex-Ald. Green said that it was twenty-five years since he had been in the Council, and he could not expect to pick up the work now laid down. It was not in the best interests of the city to bring in a man who has been out of touch with civic affairs for one-quarter of a century. "I ask you for your loyal support next Monday," concluded ex-Ald. Green, "and if elected I will give you the same honest service, the same time and attention that I have given in the past three years."

Ald. Duffus.

Ald. Duffus said he was, with Mayor Buller, the senior member of the Council. It was a fact that there was more important work for the chairman of a committee than for a member, but no chairman does all the work or all the spending. It is all discussed and outlined in committee, and the work laid out and passed on in that manner. In the same way the chairman of the Finance committee decided upon the money to be spent during the year. Ald. Duffus said he mentioned these matters because he wished to make it clear that one man, even a chairman, did not have to do all the worrying or all the work.

The Paving Question.

The financial question was the most important one before the ratepayers. In 1910 the Council took up the paving question and decided it was time to pave the central parts of the city. It could have been done more cheaply then than any time since, but a big petition was presented by citizens requesting that no action be taken. It was not the fault of the Council, therefore, that this work had not been undertaken earlier and under better financial conditions. A few years later it was taken up again, and when it was decided to lay the pavement, almost at the same time, the money market changed quickly. As a result the work cost much more than it would have if it had been undertaken earlier; and the Council had no intimation of the events which affected the financial world.

Surface Drainage.

Ald. Duffus stated that there were many problems to be considered by future Councils. In connection with the sewerage system it would be imperative that as little water as possible should be carried in the sewers To secure this a surface drainage system is absolutely necessary and will have to be considered by the Council. Since there has been laid a considerable length of pavement, the Council will likely view this question from a different angle next year. Owing to the financial conditions a cheaper roadway should be constructed. Narrow up the road, Ald. Duffus said, putting in curb and gutter and using concrete or tar macadam. This would provide a good wearing surface, a good road and a cheap one, for the material can be secured nearby.

Work of His Committee.

Speaking of the Fire Department Ald. Duffus said it was a credit to the city and he was sure the citizens were satisfied with the expenditure it incurred. The Fire, Water and Light committee, of which Ald. Duffus has been chairman during the past year, would show a net saving of $1,100 from their appropriation for the past year.

"We have adopted the incandescent system, which will be the system in the future," he said of the street lighting system. He pointed out that the lights cannot be turned off in the day time on the incandescent lines and their demands of power during the peak hours in the afternoon necessitated that as few new lamps as possible be put in. Again, the Utilities Commission has not completed plans for a proposed new street lighting system and for the past two years the Fire, Water and Light committee has erected as few lamps as possible. This will continue until the permanent plans for street lighting have been prepared and are put into effect.

Favours Hydro-Electric.

Ald. Duffus declared his support of the Hydro-Electric system. When the city was considering the plans that were to be carried out here, he had suggested the engaging of an independent, expert engineer to advise the Council regarding the plans then before them. This suggestion was not adopted, but Ald. Duffus declared that had it been, there would have been a saving of $15,000 for the city. He had been told that because he suggested the precaution of an outside engineer he was opposing the hydro, but he had always been strongly in favour of it and had only been considering its best interests when he made the proposal.

Ald. Duffus said he could not understand how the paving contract slipped through the Council without the insertion of a fair-wage clause. Other members interested in labour affairs overlooked it and it was no wonder it escaped him. If elected he promised that every contract let by the city should have a clause providing for wages equal to those paid by the municipality, and the same number of working hours in a day.

With a passing reference to the needs of Auburn and Ashburnham, which he said called for attention, Ald. Duffus concluded his address with an appeal for support at the polls on Monday. "If you return me as Mayor after serving six years as Alderman, I will do the best I can for the city's interests. If you elect me at the head of the Council for 1916 I will do my level best to carry out the city's business as if it were my own."

Mr. J. J. Hartley.

Mr. Hartley at the outset turned his attention to ex-Ald. Green who, he said, would have been a candidate last year, but there was some obstacle in his way. But now he could not wait any longer.

"He has told you all that he has done. The Council had something to do with it, I think. As Ald. Duffus said, we all know the chairman does not do it all. He says he spent $200,000. He did nothing of the kind. The Finance Committee looks after that."

Mr. Hartley replied to ex-Ald. Green's statement that he believed Mr. Hartley had been so long out of the Council he would not be in touch with its affairs. The schooling could not be a heavy one since Mr. Green had picked up his in three years. "I haven't been asleep," he continued. "I have thought a good deal about the Council, and so have the ratepayers, about what has been going on. It's all right for these gentlemen to tell you how smoothly things have been going, but the taxpayers see it when they get their tax bills."

Mr. Hartley said he could not understand where Mr. Green had obtained the 108 petitioners for the Banaccord Street bridge. There were only twenty houses on that street from Park street to the Boundary. He must have skirmished the whole ward to get 108 names. There are only two houses on the other side of that creek.

"There was an individual who must have been interested in it. He was holding land for speculation and was more interested in the bridge than the ratepayers were. I can't understand why the ratepayers wanted a bridge there just now. They were not suffering greatly without it. I wouldn't mind if it were built when the other taxes were not heavy and if it were necessary."

Reading apparently a civic account to G. Walter Green and Company for $2,610.60, Mr. Hartley thought this was legal, but it did not look well; it would have been more prudent to have let others have it. The Wm. Hamilton Company got only $264 worth of business.

Labouring Man's Wages.

Mr. Hartley said that ex-Ald. Green in his address promised to get wages for the workingman in keeping with the value of his services, that he got good wages and short hours.

"Kindly confine yourself to facts," Mr. Green interrupted.

"That 25 years are going to tell on you know," some one in the audience volunteered.

"To see that the workingmen of Peterborough are given the work the city needs done at wages in keeping with the value of their services, and the purchasing power of their earnings," Mr. Hartley read.

Then opening an Examiner of March 12, 1914, he read the following from a report of a Council meeting:

"'A letter was received from the Trades and Labour Council asking the City to fix the minimum rate of wages for the year 1914 at 25 cents an hour. The present minimum is $1.75 a day.'

Ald. Green—'Why should we be instructed by anybody as to what wages we should pay? Surely the man engaged is qualified to make one-half of the bargain and the employer can be entrusted with the care of making the other half. The letter is the thin edge of the wedge for establishing a standard wage and that's just what we don't want to do. We have got to grade the men and pay them according to their ability to do the work required of them. The letter asks us to pay a standard wage to good and poor men alike."

"What he hasn't done in the past he should not promise to do in the future. Why does he ask us to recognize now what he promises to do when he didn't do it before?"

In conclusion, Mr. Hartley said he would see, if elected, that the taxpayer got the preference before all outsiders, and that contracts stipulate the wages and hours of work. He claimed that his long experience as a contractor would be valuable to the city, and would apply to the sewer construction. He appealed to the electors to return him as Mayor for 1916.

Forty Cases Of Measles

Four More Placards Were Posted Up To-day

There are between thirty-five and forty houses placarded for measles throughout the city. Four more cards were posted up to-day. The above number does not represent the actual number of cases as in many cases there are a number of patients in each house. Chicken-pox is more or less prevalent. Some people are evidently not aware that cases of chicken-pox must be reported to the Sanitary Inspector. It is not necessary to placard the houses but in any case they must be reported to the authorities. Failure to do this might lead to prosecution and in case of a conviction, a minimum fine of twenty-five dollars.

FOURTEEN NOVICES FOR THE SISTERHOOD

Beautiful Ceremony at Mount St. Joseph This Morning

An impressive ceremony was held at Mount St. Joseph this morning when fourteen young ladies from different sections of the province were received into the community of the Sisters of St. Joseph. With this step they commenced the usual novitiate preparatory to final reception into the Sisterhood. Bishop O'Brien celebrated mass at 9 o'clock and Rev. Dean McColl preached the sermon. At the conclusion of the ceremony His Lordship addressed the novices, speaking of the spiritual happiness the sacrifice of this service brings. In addition to the presence of city clergy there were also Monsignor Casey of Lindsay and Rev. Father Collins of Lindsay of the Basilian Order, Sandwich, Rev. Father Monaghan, of North Bay, Rev. Father Quilty of Douglas, Ont., Rev. Father Carr, president of St. Michael's College, Toronto, Rev. Father McGuire, Douro, Rev. Father Meagher of Lakefield, and Father Galvin of Norwood and Rev. Father O'Sullivan, of Port Hope. The chapel was thronged with friends and relatives of the young ladies, many of whom were from Douglas, North Bay, Port Hope, Hastings and other out of town points. It was one of the most inspiring ceremonies of this kind yet witnessed at the mount and the class of novices was more numerous than usual.

The following is the list of those received this morning, with the names they assume in the Sisterhood:

Miss Annie Lynch of Douglas—Sister Mary Marina.

Miss Bridget Black of Campbellford—Sister Adrian.

Miss Margaret McGough, Lindsay—Sister Rosemary.

Miss Quinn, North Bay—Sister St. Veronica.

Miss Tobin, Peterborough — Sister Beata.

Miss Zeta Moher, Douro—Sister St. Patrick.

Miss Anne Marie Enwright, Douglas—Sister St. Lawrence.

Miss Houlihan, of Ottawa—Sister St. Anne.

Miss Frowley of Port Hope— Sister Honora.

Miss Cull, Pembroke—Sister Anecia.

Miss Wendall of Douglas — Sister Mary Daniel.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Saturday being a holiday there will be no collection of garbage by the garbage collectors.

More Measles.

To-day Sanitary Inspector Spence placarded four more houses for measles. This makes about thirty-five or forty cases in the city altogether.

Food Prices Soar In German Capital

Bacon Quotations Increased 95 Per Cent.—Socialists Want Peace

BERLIN, Dec. 30. — The Bossiche Zeitung, in an article commenting on the food prices in Berlin, shows that there has been a great increase of the cost of living in the German capital. The article says that the price of bacon has increased 95 per cer cent., while that of pigs has increased 70 per cent., mution 70 per cent., and Socialists Ask Peace.

MR. ROBT. SHAW WILL BE MISSED BY THE COUNTY COUNCILLORS

In the retirement of Mr. Robert Shaw from the municipal affairs of Harvey, the residents of that township and the whole county lose the services of a wise councillor and an efficient administrator of public business. His voice carried weight in the deliberations of the County Council, and his opinions were received as the produce of his long experience and his native wisdom. Mr. Shaw will be missed from the County Council where he appeared as a "king-maker" or the power behind the throne. As the dean of that body he occupied a position that reflected the esteem in which his colleagues regarded him.

During the past year when the new note of patriotism was injected into the concerns of the County Councillors Reeve Shaw took a splendid stand and those who heard him were proud of him. His own council practically set the pace for the townships, and it is hoped that their generosity was fully endorsed by the ratepayers.

Mr. Shaw has filled the Warden's chair and held all the chairmanships. Mr. Ingram, his successor, assumed the mantle of a well proportioned figure regarding Mr. Shaw from his mental and intellectual abilities, and there will be numerous occasions of revealing the fitness of its folds.

ANOTHER YARN SQUELCHED

The Bugaboo of The Bonaccord St. Bridge

The Bridge was Built, NOT in the Interests of G. Walter Green or of any other Private Individual; but at the Request of the Ratepayers of the Western Section of the City.

It is charged against Ex-Alderman Green that he profited by his position as Alderman by getting his property improved at the expense of the City through the building of the Bonaccord Street Bridge.

There can be no better way of disproving this bugaboo to frighten the electors from supporting Mr. Green than the fact that a requisition is now on fyle in the City Clerk's Office from one hundred and eight ratepayers of the western section of the City, asking the Council to have this bridge built in their interests.

The following is a copy of the Petition and the names of the electors who signed the Petition for the building of the Bonaccord Street Bridge, taken from the original requisi in the Clerk's office:

COPY.

Peterborough, Jan. 18th, 1915.

To the Council of the City of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—The footbridge over the creek on Bonaccord Street is in bad condition and is unsafe, and we wish to respectfully urge upon your consideration the desirability of replacing it with a highway bridge. It is very inconvenient for those living west of the creek, and for anyone having business on that end of the street, to have to go around by the Monaghan Road, and if this street were opened for traffic by the construction of a bridge it would be a better road for persons coming into the city than Smith Street, on account of the railway crossing on Smith Street being between two hills, with trees close to the road. Besides, Bonaccord Street is used by many in going to Jackson Park.

We respectfully urge that prompt steps be taken to have a highway bridge built on Bonaccord Street.

Does this look as if the Bonaccord Street Bridge was built to serve G. Walter Green's private advantage, or was it built to serve the express purposes set forth in the Petition signed by 108 intelligent electors of the Ward?

The Bonaccord Street Bridge cost the City $2,194, or $719 less than the original estimate. But it need not have cost the City one cent if the Council had accepted Mr. Green's original liberal offer, which still stands good.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BRITISHERS GOLFERS NOT COMING TO AMERICA

LONDON, Dec. 29.—George Duncan, the professional golfer of the Hanger Hill Club, stated to-day that he does not intend arranging another American tour during the coming season for the purpose of turning the net receipts over to benefit the war relief funds. Duncan said also that it is very unlikely Harry Vardon, of South Herts; J. H. Taylor, Mid-Surrey; Edward Ray, Oxhey, or James Braid Walton Heath, will accept any engagements to play exhibition games outside of Great Britain until the war is over.

It was in 1911 that Duncan made his first trip to America, his brother "Alec" at the time being instructor at one of the golf clubs near Philadelphia. At that time he was away from England for several weeks, and when he returned he brought back one title, the Western Pennsylvania open, which he won from a good field on one of the Pittsburg courses. Duncan also took part in many exhibition games, set a few records, and once with Harold H. Hilton as his partner gave a demonstartion of his skill at Baltusrol, where the last American open championship was decided.

J. H. Taylor was second to Harry Vardon in the American championship in 1900, while Ray tied with Vardon and Francis Ouimet at Brookline, Mass., in 1913, finishing third on the play-off.

Braid never has been to America, and many of his friends and admirers here believe the day will never dawn when he will cross the ocean. The Scottish member of the Triumvirate is a notoriously poor sailor and stands in dread of even a trip across the English Channel, which he, however, has made several times to attend the Continental championships. Since the war began, all of the leading professionals have been doing good work, playing exhibition matches for the benefit of Red Cross and the various relief associations and committees, and also have entertained hundreds of the convalescent British soldiers.

Only for the torpedoing of the Lusitania, on which they had booked passage, Duncan, Taylor, Vardon and Ray, would have taken part in the last open championship of the United States Golf Association. They resolved at that time to stay in England and "do their bit," whatever it should happen to be, until the end of the war.

Many of their fellow-professionals have joined the Colours and several already have fallen and, according to Duncan, there is no possibility of any of the accepted leaders of the British golfing world going back on their work or shirking their responsibilities to go to America even for the purpose of collecting money to swell the relief funds.

Many British Boxers Serving The Empire

Matt Wells, the little Hebrew who was formerly lightweight champion of England, will begin his 30th year this week, having been born in December, 1886. Matt is now campaining on this side of the Atlantic, but he insists that before crossing the pond last summer he tried to enlist, but was refused on account of his tin ears and his brevity of stature, which is only five feet four inches. Matt declares that any time his country needs him he will answer the call, but in the meantime he is out to make a collection of American coinage. Wells won the British lightweight title by defeating Freddie Welsh in 1911 and lost it to Welsh the following year. Matt was recently outpointed by Johnny Griffiths at Akron, and he has lost most of the battles of his present campaign, but he is still able to keep his opponents traveling their speediest gait.

Wells and Freddie Welsh are among the very few British boxers who are not now doing their figthing in the uniform of his majesty's army. Wells first came to America in 1910 as the sparring partner of Jem Driscoll, the little Welsh featherweight, who was one of the cleverest, gamest boys England has turned out in many years.

Driscoll will celebrate his 35th birthday this week, as he was born in Cardiff, Wales, in December, 1880. Jem enlisted in the Welsh Horse regiment about a year ago, and since then he has seen a lot of active service. He was promoted to acting quartermaster-sergeant last March. Jem probably has more friends and admirers on this side of the Atlantic than any other English boxer who has visited these shores in years, and they all hope that he will have a happy birthday and many returns of them. Jem lost on a foul to Freddie Welsh some five years ago, and on a few occasions he has been outpointed but he went through his long ring career without ever being decisively defeated or put to sleep.

Bombardier Wells, who held aloof from army service for a time because he considered it his duty to help support the families of his several brothers who were at the front, joined the ranks a few months ago. Dick Burge, the old lightweight champion of Great Britain, who is now approaching the half-century mark, is a private in the First Surrey Rifles.

Jerry Delaney, the English lightweight, is also a soldier. Iron Hague, the predecessor of Bombadier Wells as English heavyweight champion, is a Grenadier guardsman. Johnny Summers, who lost the English lightweight championship to Welsh six years ago and who is well known over here, is a corporal. Jack Goldswain, a favorite lightweight boxer is with Burge in the First Surrey Rifles.

Pat O'Keefe, long prominent as a middleweight, is another pugilistic member of the First Surrey bunch, with the rank of corporal. Pat paid a visit to this side in 1907, but lost to Billy Papke, Willie Lewis and Harry Lewis, and decided that England's climate was more healthful. Duke Lynch, also with the First Surrey, is another clever boxer who is now a rifleman.

The fighting Sullivan clan is represented by Jim of that ilk, former middleweight champion of England, who has been knocked out by Billy Papke, the German-American, but isn't afraid of any Teuton with a gun. Other boxers in the British army include Sergeant Curzon, Sergt. Tom McCormick, Sergt.-Major Meekin, Pete Ladbury, Jim Wilde and many others. Jack Munroe, the American heavyweight, lost an arm with the Princess Pats, and it was reported at one time that he had lost his life. Jimmy Britt, the American lightweight, is with the Australians. Take 'em by and large, and you have to hand it to the boxers as a patriotic bunch.

GARVEY CRAVATH MAY LOSE TITLE

Gavvy Cravath and his famous home runs over that short right field fence in Philadelphia, may drop out of baseball records. Not that Gavvy may not lift one over the fence, but National league magnates are considering a plan to knife the "over-the-fence drive" before the first game is played in 1916. Here it is: Instead of a home run over the fence, the blow is to count only a double. This is a secret move on the part of several magnates and lawmakers, to make it fair for all the clubs.

Figures show that Cravath was the leading home run buster in the league last summer. His record was 24, and a dopester found where Gavvy lifted exactly 19 over the right field fence, and it is probable that these 19 homers won 19 ball games for the Phillies. There is a fair argument in back of the rule.

The Phillies play 77 games on their home lot, while each opposition team gets a crack only 11 times. Of course, there were seven clubs calling, which makes 77 in all, but the percentage is all in favor of the Phillies.

It is doubtful if the magnates will announce this until February, and it is reported that between now and the second month of the next year the proposition not only will be discussed, but will be made leal.

Another short right field fence which may have its limit sliced is the one on the west side in Chicago. The Cubs also own one of those peaky things, and the figures also show that the Cubs have an advantage in this fence-busting stuff. The home run figures are: Cravath 24; Williams, 18; Schulte, 12; Becket, 11; Saier, 11; Luderus, 7; Bancroft, 7.

So for four Phillies we have 49 home runs and for three Cubs we have 36. In home run driving the Phillies were first with 54. The Giants and Pirates had 24, the Cardinals 20, the Braves 17, Reds 15 and Superbas 14. Cravath had more homers than four clubs and tied with the Giants and Pirates, which, indeed, is quite an item in winning a pennant.

It has been suggested that the Cubs erect a high screen in front of their right field fence and this will prevent the ball from bounding against the bleacher wall. In Philadelphia the wall could be made higher, as the present boundary is the street.

It does listen peculiar, doesn't it? The Phillies have been playing in this small park for years and years. They have owned dangerous hitters and fence-busters but no one thought about the fence until the Quakers won the pennant.

Played Him a Joke.

A short time ago an Englishman, Scotsman and Irishman were at work together. During the interval for dinner the two former determined to play a joke on their companion. Therefore, seeing his coat hanging up, they drew on it a representation of a donkey's head. Pat did not notice anything until the time arrived for putting on his coat. The first thing he saw was the caricature. Then, turning to the two men, he said, sadly —"Which of you wiped your face on me coat?"

Brampton Team To Play Here Friday Night

Although Lindsay has disappointed the fans by defaulting to-night's game, there will be a game this week after all, as the Electric management got busy last night and arranged an exhibition game with the fast Brampton club, who reached the Intermediate semi-finals last year and who gave Walter Knox's Picton team an awful walloping after Picton had beaten Peterborough. The Brampton team will play in Peterborough to-morrow night and a big night's fun may be expected, as in addition to the game there will be skating afterwards. The crowd will be allowed to skate the old year out and the New Year in, and with the band on hand there will undoubtedly be a big crowd out. The game is called for 8.15 o'clock, so that there will be several hours of skating afterwards. With a hockey match and skating thrown in for the one price of admission it is the biggest evening's entertainment.

PETERBORO BOYS STAR FOR OTHER O.H.A. CLUB

Peterborough boys are making a good showing in the hockey world. Joe Dwyer and Grover Halpin were the stars of the Sarnia team the other night, according to Lou Marsh, who says:

The chief credit of the Sarnia victory must be given to Joe Dwyer, the ex-Peterborough goalkeeper. Not only did the sorrel-topped youth do some remarkable work in the nets, but he kept the team in front of him on the move with his peppery coaching, and treated the crowd around his end to a continuous concert. When the puck was down at the other end he sang and whistled ragtime, and when his citadel was in danger he was whooping the homesters into it to a fare-thee-well. When his voice failed him he rattled his stick on the posts and banged it against the boards, and generally made as much noise as a machine gun on a busy night. The "pep" had its effect, especially upon Grover Halpin, the ex-Peterborough rover, who is now an enlisted man with the Sarnia Battalion. Halpin played a rattling good game and Hillman, a newcomer, from Ottawa Aberdeens, proved himself a very dangerous man around centre ice, though he only got one goal.

Last night Ken Crane of Peterborough played rover for Toronto Riversides against the 40th Battery, on whose defence was Jack Pethick, last year's Peterborough defence man. Concerning Crane, the Toronto Mail says:

Crane of the Riversides was the most effective man on the ice, although to watch him one would think he was merely loafing. However, when ever he hit the opposing defence he was very dangerous, and on the night scored three of the six goals for the East-enders, two of them after fine individual rushes.

LINDSAY OUT FOR GOOD NOW

Have Definitely Dropped out of Intermediate race

The Lindsay Intermediates will not be here to-night. For the past two days there have been so many conflicting reports concerning the Scugogville team that the messages were as confusing as the war news from Europe. Finally, yesterday afternoon, however, a wire from Lindsay decided the fact that the Lindsay team is out before it started. One thing is certain, that another season Lindsay will have to get into group before the schedule is made or else stay out altogether.

England Will Have Racing Next Month

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Steeplechase racing will not be discontinued in this country despite all reports to the contrary. The season will begin on January 1 at Gatwick, and the stewards of the National Hunt Association have sanctioned further meetings during the month at Lingfield on January 7 and 8, Windsor 14 and 15, and Gatwick again on January 21 and 22.

The Racing Calendar has just been issued, and its announcement of dates places the seal of officialdom upon the meetings. The followers of horse racing in this country are jubilant over the prospects of the sport, and it is predicted the coming meeting will be the most enthusiastically attended since the war first began. The results of these races will guide the authorities in deciding about future dates.

While it is uncertain if the Grand National will be run off at the famous Aintree course, as usual this year, there is no doubt but that a substitute race will be framed to represent it by proxy, just as the historic Derby was arranged for at Newmarket last year instead of at Epsom, in order to avoid a break in its long record. The Grand National occupies about the same relative importance in the classics of the steeplechase sport that the Derby does to flat racing.

LOCAL JUNIORS LINE UP FOR THE SATURDAY GAME

The Peterborough Electric Juniors will play an exhibition game in Campbellford on New Year's afternoon, leaving on the 8.20 G.T.R. train Saturday morning. The local youngsters had a lively practice with the Intermediates at Brock Street Rink last night, and showed good form. Nine players will be taken to Campbellford on Saturday, and all will get a chance to play. The following players will make the trip: C. Montgomery, Legros, Lowes, Graham, Cherrett, Hamilton, Rose, Kenneally, Bartley.

WILLARD-FULTON BOUT HAS BEEN CANCELLED

Champion's Manager Refuses To Permit Elimination Bout—Milwaukee Wants It

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30.—On the refusal of Tom Jones, Jess Willard's manager, to agree to an elimination bout for Fred Fulton in New Orleans, Dominick Tortorich and Tommy Burns, the New Orleans promoters, announced the cancellation of the bout to-day. It was reported late this afternoon that Jones will arrange to stage the affair in Milwaukee. Tom Andrews of that city has offered $27,000 for the match, according to Jones.

"Fulton is the first man Willard is going to meet," Jones declared emphatically to-night, "and if the New Orleans public doesn't care to see the match we will take it to Milwaukee. You can say positively that there will be no elimination bouts between Fulton and anyone else."

Who asked why he was opposed to Fulton meeting anyone else Jones said there was lack of time to advertise and also that Fulton had gone to much expense preparing for the New Orleans contest.

"We can take the show to Milwaukee," Jones reiterated. When asked why he came all the way to New Orleans to make arrangements he drew forth a sheaf of telegrams and painted pictures of prosperity as the result of boxing in this city. Jones insisted that Willard would come here afterward to meet Moran or Coffey, but said he thought neither cared to meet Willard.

HOCKEY

Lindsay Warder—The Lindsay Juniors will be in good fighting trim for the game on Monday night with the Belleville Juniors, and have had a number of good stiff work-outs.

The boys will in all probability line up with Art. Carew, "Scotty" Shea, Reid and Griffis on the forward line, and Flavelle and Haugh on the defence, with a dark horse in the goal.

Cobourg St. Michael's have registered the following:

Frank J. Hart, A. Flesch, W. B. Bulger, John Lavis, J. E. Delanty, Vivant J. Butler, Frank Guy, Eric Hand, James Reedy, Edward Drumm Chas. P. Reedy, Cliff Maher.

An exiciting and pleasant evening can be spent at the Brock Street rink to-morrow night, (New Year's Eve). There will be a varied programme. Hockey match, Brampton vs. Electrics, at 8 o'clock. At 9.30 the skaters will take the ice and skate from that hour until 12.15, skating out the old and in the New Year. Big Band in attendance. The Kitchener Club will sell sandwiches and coffee. All the benefits of the sale to go to their funds. Altogether it looks like a fine night of pleasure at the Brock Street Rink to-morrow night. Admission to Band Concert, hockey match, and skating, 25c, 35c, and 50c, according to seats taken for the game. Skating tickets, after 9.30, 15c.

J. D. FLAVELLE HAD A BAD FALL

LINDSAY, Dec. 30.—Mr. J. D. Flavelle, the veteran skip, met with a slight accident while curling. He slipped on the ice, falling heavily on his side. Being a man of considerable avoirdupois, it was thought that he might have sustained a fractured rib However, on medical examination being made it was found that except for a bad bruise the popular veteran was all right.

BERLIN DIET OF FAKE NEWS

Egyptian Campaign Also Looked Upon as Practically Won—India Office in London Denies Wild Stories

NEW YORK, Dec. 30. — Cyril Brown, in a despatch from Berlin to the Times, says:

The centre of gravity of German news interest is slowly but unmistakably shifting to Egypt, particularly to the Suez Canal. Many who have all along felt that the war would be won in the Orient are more convinced that they are right than ever.

Interest in Egypt has increased ten-fold since the news that various steamship lines to the Far East have discontinued the use of the Suez route, and one can hardly pick up a German newspaper without finding a more or less broad hint of impending operations against the canal, which the censorship allows to be printed.

Turk "Success."

An anonymous article which is going the rounds of the German press and bears the earmarks of emanating from an authoritative source, says:

"The fact that merchantmen are avoiding the Suez Canal indicates that the situation there is regarded seriously. The Turks have achieved important and far-reaching military successes at Aden. Whereas on the canal things are ripening slowly, we know that the Arab tribes around Aden have already fought on the side of the Turks.

As Berlin Would Like It.

India is second only to Egypt in new interest, and the most curious source of supply is being tapped by the National Zeitung, which gets its information about conditions in India from the Swedish and Russian reports that the fighting on the northwestern border of India has assumed greater proportions in the last few days. Almost the entire hill population is said to be in open revolt against the English garrison, and the poorer quality of garrison troops in India is said to be making itself increasingly felt. The English troops of the original garrison and the Indian veteran troops are almost all in Europe, Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, and Egypt.

Revolution, Too!

"The English," the Zeitung says, "are able to remain masters of the situation only by large promises and concessions. The censorship is extraordinarily strict. The Ameer of Afghanistan is also causing the English many a headache He recently received an embassy from the Sultan."

"The revolutionary movement in India has recently made such progress that the English authorities are no longer able to suppress it. The bitterness against English rule is making itself strongly felt among the native troops, one battalion after another going over to the revolutionaries."

No Vestige of Truth.

London, Dec. 29.—The India Office in London has made the following reply to the above:

In the whole of this telegram regarding India there is not one word of truth, except that the "source of supply" is evidently "most curious."

There has been no fighting on the north-western frontier of any dimensions since the end of October, and the hill population is not in revolt.

Suez Route Safe.

The statement that the Turks have had far-reaching successes at Aden is a complete misapprehension. In July last the Turks, having occupied Lahej, advanced to Sheikh Othman, in the neighbourhood of Aden, and looted it. They were, however, driven out, and withdrew inland and have not ventured to advance again on the fortress of Aden. Such skirmishes as there have been during the last three months resulted favourably to us; but there has been no material change in the situation during that period. It is a slander on the Arabs as a whole to say that they are fighting on the side of the hated Turk, though some may have temporarily joined the enemy.

So far as the security of the Suez Canal route to India is concerned, the present situation at Aden may be left out of the account.

MR. APPEL IS REEVE.

Naturalization Certified and Other Nominees Withdraw.

TAVISTOCK, Dec. 29.—A telegram has been received from the Secretary of State announcing that a certificate of naturalization has been issued and is being forwarded to W. M. Appel who was nominated, with Wm. Nelson and Fred Krugg, for the Reeveship of the village. This means that any existing bar to Mr Appel's election as Reeve has been removed. Both Mr. Nelson and Mr. Krugg have withdrawn, leaving Mr. Appel elected to the Reeveship by acclamation. Mr. Appel was recently in the Sessions charged with taking the oath of qualification for the Reeveship when he was not a naturalized subject, and he was found not guilty.

MOTHERS OF FRANCE ARE NOT MOURNING

MINISTER OF WAR IS GREETED WITH GREAT APPLAUSE IN THE SENATE.

PARIS, Dec. 29—"Eighteen months ago France wanted peace. To-day she wants war most energetically and to that end will use all her resources," said Ben. Gallieni, the Minister of War, in asking the Senate to-day to aprove the action of the Chamber of Deputies in giving him the 1917 class of recruits for Jan. 5th. Gen. Gallieni's remarks were greeted with prolonged applause.

"Who ever says a word of peace in the streets is considered a bad citizen" continued the Minister of War. Mothers are not mourning for lost sons—they want them to be avenged. The 1917 class will leave with the assent of the nation. It demands that those charged with the duty receive and instruct these young men and prepare them for the great contest, which will not end before France, in accord with her allies, says 'I stop!—I have obtained what I wanted; I resume my work of peace!"

Redoubled applause, interspersed with shouts of "Excellent!" came from the entire Senate, which arose as a mark of honour. Returning to the Ministerial seat, General Gallieni received the congratulations of his colleagues.

CONDUCTORS FINED $100.00

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 15.—C. P. R. Conductors J. Moore and W. Keats were sentenced on December 28th by Police Magistrate D. M. Brodie at Sudbury, to a fine of $100 and costs, or ninety days in jail for failing to account to the C.P.R. Co. for fares which they had collected.

The gifts brought by the children will be divided between the poor of the church and the Belgians. There will be a Christmas tree containing a gift for each member of the cradle roll.

WEDDING BELLS

ANOTHER SHOEMAN JOINS THE BENEDICTS.

(Dec. Shoe and Leather Journal).

Burton D. Menzies, manager o fthe Sudbury store of the United Shoe Dealers, recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, being married to Miss M. Cannel of the staff of F. M. Stafford, merchant, Sudbury. Mr. Menzies and bride spent their honeymoon in Toronto, Windsor and Dettroit. Mr. Menzies began his insaight in the shoe line some seventeen years ago in Lindsay with Robert Neill, and later was transferred to the London branch. In 1902 he returned from Saskatoon where he spent three years. Later J. W. Foy, of Toronto, bought out the business of Mr. Robinson and Mr. Menzies was appointed manager of the Lindsay establishment. In 1908 Mr. Foy opened a second store in Sudbury and Mr. Menzies went there to take charge. Three years later there was a change made in the Port Arthur branch and he was transferred to that city as manager. In the meantime the Sudbury business had grown to such an extent, that at the request of Mr. Foy the subject of the reference returned to Sudbury, where a large and profitable trade is done, the shop recording the biggest turnover of any of the six branches of the United Shoe Dealers. Mr. Menzies is a son of Mr. Robt. J. Menzies, now of Detroit, and formerly of Lindsay, and a nephew of Donald and William Menzies of this city.

PATTERSON—HOWDEN.

The chimes of St. John's Church rang out yesterday afternoon in honour of the wedding of Miss Florence Howden, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Howden, who became the bride of Mr. James Patterson, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Patterson. Only immediate relatives and friends were guests. The bride wore her travelling suit of seal brown velvet, with hat and plumes to correspond, ermine furs and a corsage boquet of bridal roses. The couple were unattended. Rev. Canon Davidson performed the ceremony, and the bride was given away by her father, Mr. J. J. Howden. Mr. R. J. Devey presided at the organ, and played the Bridal Chorus.

A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, after which the happy couple left on the C.P.R. for points west.

OBITUARY

MARY KATHLEEN CORKERY

After an illness extending over a few days Mary Kathleen, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Corkery, 190 Park street, passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital shortly after three o'clock yesterday afternoon. On Sunday last deceased was stricken with appendicitis and was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she was successfully operated upon. Complications set in and death resulted yesterday.

Deceased, who was in her tenth year, was well and favourably known throughout the community in which she resided. Her sunny disposition won for her a host of friends, who will regret to hear of her demise.

The funeral will take place at nine o'clock on Friday morning from the family residence, 190 Park street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

Oriental Hotel To Close Its Doors

The Examiner learns on good authority that Peterboro in a few days is to have one hotel less. The Oriental Hotel which has been conducted as a temperance hotel and which is one of the largest and best appointed temperance hotel in the province has decided to close its doors. It is understood this will take place almost immediately.

IS DISMISSED ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

TORONTO, Ont., December 29th.—Fred Powell was charged with manslaughter. On November 27th, Powell drove a Ford car on St. Clare avenue and struck Coleman Blewett, causing his death. The charge arose out of the coroner's verdict at the inquest. The finding of the jury was that Blewett came to his death by a car that was driven by an incompetent driver. It was left to the court to prove whether the accused was an incompetent driver or not. Mr. Viscik, an automobile expert gave the result of his investigation. He had found the car in perfect running condition and the accused a competent driver. Witnesses who were in the car stated that the car was travelling at a slow speed, and that the accident was not avoidable. The case was dismissed.

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 5—Diseases of the Eyes

THERE are conditions of the eyes in some cases, that cannot be properly corrected by the mere use of eye-glasses, although glasses may help while treatment is being undergone. There may be found to exist a growing cataract, or other surface disease of the eyes or lids, which must be treated by a qualified oculist, and when such cases come to Mr. Fowler, he does not hesitate to direct the party to the oculist where they can be cared for properly. Mr. Fowler does not experiment with glasses at the expense of the patient when he knows that the eyes require a physician's care, and anyone with eye troubles may come to him with the utmost confidence that they will not be imposed on with expensive attempts to fix up eyes that should be under the oculist's care. In these cases he will fit only such glasses as are prescribed by the physician.

Soldiers' Kiddies Had Xmas Tree

Fine Time at The Salvation Army Temple Yesterday

There was a very enjoyable event in the Salvation Army Temple yesterday when a Christmas tree was held nder the auspices of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, for the wives and children of Peterborough's soldiers in khaki. Over one hundred children were in attendance, as well as many of the wives, and the tea that was served was greatly enjoyed. There were presents for everyone, and a real live Santa Claus saw that they were distributed. The Club wish to express their thanks to Messrs. Perkins-Ince, Mr. Richor, Mr. Oke, Mr. Gillespie, the Y.W.C.A. and others, who assisted in the success of the event.

THE WALTZ IS IN FAVOUR AGAIN

Dancing Masters in Session Here, Report Its Popularity.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The old-fashioned waltz is not dead. It is coming to life and totally disabling the lame duck and the canter, in fact. At least, that is the testimony of masters of dancing from a half-dozen States, who began a series of meetings yesterday at the Hotel McAlpin. The teachers are members of the National Association of America of Masters of Dancing, who have come here to learn the latest steps. This is not the national convention, which was held in San Francisco a few months ago, but a meeting of the First and Second Districts, which include New York, Pennsylvania, and the New England States.

The news about the waltz came out at last night's session. A teacher from Springfield, Mass., testified that in his city every one was dancing it. He said he was curious to know whether the waltz was being revived in other sections, and several masters said it was. As one of them explained afterwards, this was a happy state of affairs, for many had cantered and hesitated so long they had forgotten how to waltz and had to take lessons.

It would also appear that dancing masters are more danced against than dancing, for they decided one of their number living in New York should visit the cafes and halls just before the annual convention is held in Chicago next August to pick up the new steps to show the association.

The one step, hesitation, fox trot, and tango, it seems are the popular dances at present in New York. The delegates agreed they had read much about the three step, but hadn't succeeded in teaching many to dance it. They also predicted greater popularity for the tango, and refused to admit they feared the skating craze.

SOCIALISTS WANT PEACE

LONDON, Dec. 29.— The Chronicle reports a special meeting of the Social Democratic Parliamentary party in Vienna, at which Herr Adler said:

"A speedy conclusion of peace is the most important problem of the day. Everybody is now beginning to realise that the defensive task of the war has not been accomplished, and that the war goes on only because the Government does not know how to start negotiations for peace.

"We Social Democratic wage-earners of Austria, men and women alike, have readily borne all the burdens which were the result of the necessity of defending our country, but now we call a peremptory halt, joining our voices to the voices of millions of the other peoples who in all countries and in all languages are asking for peace."

Huge Reserve Of Munitions

Allies Have Added Greatly to Stores in Three Months

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—A cable to the Herald from London says: The three months since the sharp and successful allied offensive of late September have seen a remarkably rapid accumulation of reserve men and munitions on the western front in preparation for the next general advance. The expenditure in shells has been even less than it was during the summer, if conditions may be judged accurately from the official communiques, and, aside from the activity of Hartamanns Weilerkopf, where comparatively small forces are engaged, the men have been called on for little real fighting.

While the expenditure—human and material — has been at a minimum, the production of both necessities has been at the maximum. France and Britain have been working their fully mobilized steel plants night and day, and it is estimated that out of every three shell two have gone into the reserve supply that will be used when the time comes to maintain an unprecedented rain of death on the German positions from Nieuport to Switzerland. Into the reservoir of men has gone a large proportion of the new units, which will receive their real baptism of fire in the next "big push."

RUSSIAN SHELL HIT FERDINAND'S PALACE

Same Squadron Bombarded Bulgarian Port of Traka

LONDON, Dec. 31. — King Ferdinand's palace at the Black Sea port of Varna was hit during the recent Russian bombardment of that Bulgarian town, but the damage was unimportant, says a dispatch from Athens to Reuter's Telegram Company. The same Russian squadron, the correspondent adds, bombarded Bulgarian port of Traka.

Wrapping Up Presents When He Dropped Dead

PORT HOPE, Dec. 30.—George E. Minns, Inspector for the Children's Aid Society for the counties of Northumberland and Durham, dropped dead in the Shelter here. Mr. Minns was about his duties as usual, and was busy wrapping up presents for the children when he fell over and expired instantly. His wife and two sons survive. Deceased had been a resident of Port Hope for one year, coming here from Toronto.

Records Worth $10,000 Missing At Calgary

CALGARY, Alta., Dec. 30.—All the plans, profiles and field work records of the proposed new three million dollar Elbow River water works system, which cost in the neighbourhood of $10,000, are missing from the waterworks vault. A letter from Buffalo, N.Y., signed Oleson, says the writer overheard a plot to destroy these data in order that the men in the surveying department might have another year's work.

The Bristish Crusier Natal Has Been Sunk By An Explosion

No Particulars Given Except The Official Statement That The Natal Sank in a Harbour Yesterday Afternoon And That 400 of Her Crew Were Saved---Internal Explosion Said To Have Been The Cause of Her Loss.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—British troops land at Orfana to check the advance of enemy troops on Salonika from the east.

SALONIKA, Dec. 31.—French General Sarrail has caused the arrest of the German, Austrian, Turk and Bulgarian consuls with their staffs. The Consulates are now occupied by Allied troops.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Austria's new reply re Ancona makes some concessions to the United States.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Canadian authorities are to take over canteens in the training camps.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—British aviators have raided and inflicted severe damage on the German positions in Belgium.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—An order-in-council has been made that the Government keep back considerable portion of soldiers' pay to be paid at the end of his service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—There will be no break with Austria.

The danger of a severance of diplomatic relations between Austria and the United States is past. Austria has "substantially" complied with United States demands regarding the Ancona case.

This was the official, authoritative and practically unanimous view taken in Washington to-day. It lacks only the final formal approval of President Wilson after he reads the Austrian reply. Further negotiations and exchange of notes are probable, but only on minor points regarding reparition for American lives.

A wave of relief swept over the State Department following the publication of the unofficial text of the Austrian reply.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British cruiser Natal has been sunk by an internal explosion, the Admiralty announced to-day.

Four hundred of the crew have been saved.

The Natal carried a crew of about 725, indicating the probable loss of about 300 lives.

"The Natal sank in a harbour yesterday afternoon," said the official statement.

The Natal displaced 13,660 tons. She was built in 1903 and had a speed of 30 knots. She was 480 feet long, and had a 73-foot beam. She carried nine-inch and seven-inch guns.

The battleship Bulwark was blown up in Sheerness Harbour in November, 1914, with a loss of about 800 lives. The converted cruiser Princess Irene was blown to bits in Sheerness Harbour in 1915.

The cause of these explosions was never learned, though it was rumoured German spies were responsible.

In addition to these vessels blown up in their harbours, the British battleship Formidable was destroyed on January 1, 1915, by an explosion in the English Channel.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 31.—The Ford peace party arrived in Denmark from Stockholm to-day, on the last lap of the cruise to "bring the boys out of the trenches."

Business Manager Gaston Plantiff hurried out to see shipping men about chartering a vessel to carry delegates to The Hague.

IF SUBJECT TO COLDS HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Don't load your stomach with cough syrups. Send healing medication through the nostrils—send it into the passages that are subject to colds and Catarrh. Easy to do this with Catarrhozone, which cures a cold in ten minutes. Even to the lungs goes the healing vapor of Catarrhozone—all through the bronchial tubes, nostrils and air passages —everywhere a trace of disease remains will Catarrhozone follow. You'll not have colds, nor will you suffer from sniffles, bronchitis or throat trouble if Catarrhozone is used. Get it to-day but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size, two months treatment, costs $1.00, small size 50c; sample size 25c

We must not let these Belgian Children Starve

Their fathers are with King Albert in the trenches—or dead. Their mothers, destitute and probably homeless, are striving hard but helplessly to save these children on whom Belgium's future depends.

Nearly 2,000,000 old men, women and children in Belgium are absolutely dependent on help from Britain and America. Unless we feed them, hundreds of thousands must starve to death! The has saved them so far. Administered by a wonderfully efficient neutral Commission, it has for more than a year now provided food for nearly all the Seven Million Belgians still in the country. Those who have money pay for it, but there is a steadily growing number who must be fed free.

For this at least $2,500,000 is needed monthly in contributions. Great Britain, burdened as she is, is giving all she can. The United States has responded generously, and her business men are running the Commission as public relief was never handled before. Are we in Canada, prosperous and protected from the horrors of invasion, to enjoy the plenty that has blessed us while our heroic Allies starve?

Death Rates Are The Same

For Every British Soldier Killed a Baby Dies at Home

The Duchess of Marlborough held an "At Home" recently at Sunderland House, Mayfair, to assist the efforts of the Women's League of Service, a society founded in 1910 to befriend mothers and babies and to further the interests of motherhood. Lady Sydenham presided, says the London Chronicle.

The importance of the work of the league is to be seen when it is realized that, roughtly speaking, for every soldier killed on the battlefield one baby dies at home, according to the actual figures of the infantile death rate.

SECURE AGAINST BLOCKADE.

Apropos of blockades the United States occupies a unique position among nations. A blockade of its seaports is absolutely impossible. There are not ships enough in the world to achieve it. Between Bangor, in Maine, and Corpus Christi, in Texas, there are forty ports connected by rail with the vast network of iron rail which extends over all parts of our country.

There are forty ports where cotton and wheat and cattle and canned and salted foods could be placed on shipboard, and a foreign power could no more blockade all of them at once than it could prevent the shad and the salmon from swimming up our rivers to spawn.

In the event of war we would be immune from invasion except from Canada. Invasion of any great nation, or at least continued armed occupation of the soil of any great nation which is separated by an ocean from its adversary, is practically an impossibility. There might be some places where foes could land, but there would be no place where they could re-embark, for those who came would stay. A foreign flag would never float over any interior city.

STARTING A BRIDGE.

The Boy Who Was a Good Kiteflier Came In Handy.

Some years ago there died in Nebraska a man named Walsh, who as a boy started a suspension bridge. When Walsh was about ten years old the first steps for the construction of the suspension bridge at Niagara were taken. The first thing necessary was the stretching of a single wire across the chasm. The engineer in charge had thought of a way to get it across.

"What boy is the best kitefliер in town?" he asked.

The Walsh boy was named as the best kitefliер in the town of Niagara Falls, and the engineer accordingly asked that he be brought to him. He was made to understand that he must fly his kite across the Niagara river. He flew it across and allowed it to come down on the other side. Men were there to seize it. Then the engineer attached a wire to the string on his side, and the men on the other side detached the kite and by means of the string drew the wire across. By this, in turn, a cable was drawn across, and the bridge was well begun.

Tricky Fox.

A gentleman while hunting near a river one winter day saw a fox run out on the ice and make at full speed for an opening in the ice where the rushing water of the river could be plainly seen from the bank, says the Scotsman. At the edge he stopped, turned, followed his tracks back to the bank and then ran some distance down the stream and sat there. Soon a dog came crashing out of the woods, baying finely, hot on the fox's trail. Now, dogs when on a chase of this kind trust almost entirely to their noses. This one was no exception. He ran along the ice, head down, and when he reached the hole he could not stop, but plunged into the water and disappeared forever. Then the fox trotted away with every sign of satisfaction.

A Lightning Result.

During the lessons one afternoon in a public school a thunderstorm arose, and, seeking to lessen the fright of the children, the teacher began an entertaining discourse on the wonder of the elements.

"Jimmy," said she, finally turning to a bright little youngster, "can you tell me what lightning is?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the ready rejoinder of little Jimmy. "Lightning is streaks of electricity."

"That's right," smiled the teacher encouragingly. "Now, tell me why it is that lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

"Because," answered Jimmy quite easily, "after it hits once the same place ain't there any more."

PERSONALS.

Chatham, Ont.—"I was sick for about four years. Got very weak, could not eat to amount to anything. I got very thin and had no strength at all. I was very much discouraged at times—thought I was never going to get better. I could not walk a block without feeling all tired-out. I took different medicines but did not get the help I needed. A friend of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I began to take it with the 'Pleasant Pellets' and by the time I had taken two bottles I was well on the road to recovery, and in six months I was entirely well. My appetite came back and I gained in flesh. Now I am as strong and healthy as any one could wish to be. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines and I am glad of the opportunity to give testimony in their favor; they have done wonders for me."—Miss Thelma Parker, 141 E. King St.

Chatham, Ont.—"I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicine with good results. I was weak and run down, lost my appetite and got very thin. I took 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets' and these two medicines built me up in a very short space of time so that I felt as well as ever. I found them to be all that is recommended of them; they are good."—Mrs. Wm. Wheeb, Cor. Taylor & Grand Ave., E., Chatham, Ont.

Every woman who has backache, headache, low spirits, sleepless nights, owes it to herself to speedily overcome the trouble before a breakdown causes prostration.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a non-alcoholic remedy that any ailing woman can safely take because it is prepared from roots and herbs with pure glycerine, containing tonic properties.

MR. WHITMAN

1674 Esplanade Avenue, Montreal.

"In 1912, I was taken suddenly ill with Acute Stomach Trouble and dropped in the street. I was treated by several physicians for nearly two years. I was in constant misery from my stomach and my weight dropped down from 225 pounds to 160 pounds. Several of my friends advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so. That was eight months ago. I began to improve almost with the first dose. No other medicine I ever used acted so pleasantly and quickly as 'Fruit-a-tives', and by using it I recovered from the distressing Stomach Trouble, and all pain and Constipation and misery were cured. I completely recovered by the use of 'Fruit-a-tives' and now I weigh 208 pounds. The Gentle Bloodhound.

No real reason exists for the common belief that the bloodhound is a fierce animal, ready to tear the person whom it may be tracking to pieces. It is, on the contrary, rather noted for its gentleness, even seeming timid, unless especially trained to attack. The origin of the breed, according to Count Le Couteulx de Canteleu, the greatest living authority on the subject, is from the St. Hubert of St. Hubert's abbey in the Ardennes. It dates from the earliest ages, and the breed certainly existed in the time of the Gauls. As regards the name bloodhound, the Count Le Conteulx believes that when fox hunting in something like its present form was instituted it was found that the sleuthhound was not fast enough for the purpose, and the present foxhound was evolved from various material, and about this time it became usual in speaking of the old hound of the country to call him the bloodhound, meaning the hound of pure blood (as might be said of a blooded horse), to distinguish him from the new hound or foxhound. There is only one breed of pure, genuine bloodhounds, and that is the English.

Geometry.

Plato is said to have written over his door, "Let no one ignorant of geometry enter here." Today such a restriction would reduce his visiting list. Perhaps outside the professional mathematicians he would have no one at all. All the artists, the philanthropists, the historians, to say nothing of those ladies and gentlemen of leisure whose critical faculties are so importantly developed nowadays, would certainly be absent and, worse still, would suffer very little at their exclusion. Yet, going back into the centuries for guests, a distinguished company might have been assembled of those who without being famous merely for mathematical studies, were known to have understood and loved the subject. The Greek philosophers would have been there in a body, Alphonse X., Omar Khayyam, Albert Durer, Leonardo da Vinci, Descartes, Pascal, Napoleon and Lewis Carroll.—Exchange.

Preparedness.

Obadiah, trying to cross the field where the bull was, attracted the attention of the beast, whereupon began a foot race of great personal interest to Obadiah. His neighbor, Silas, saw the race start in a fair field and saw Obadiah putting his best foot forward and mending his gait at every step in an eagerness to make the creek, a good mile away. Obadiah, legging it at the peak of his effort, managed to make the bank a scant few feet in advance of the bull and essayed to leap the thirty feet between the banks. He landed in the middle of the creek. Silas observed this dispassionately and looked back over the mile of field with a judging eye. He hitched his shoulder and spoke:

"You cert'nly can't spect to jump that creek, Obadiah, 'thout gittin' a longer runnin' start 'n that."

Bleeding by Bowshot.

That all diseases can be cured by bleeding is still firmly believed by several savage tribes and especially by the Papuan negroes. When one of their physicians becomes convinced that it is necessary to bleed a patient he goes several feet in front of him, and then, drawing his bow he fits a sharp pointed arrow to it and, after careful aim, fires the arrow into the vein which he desires to open. The arrow, it is said, invariably goes straight to the mark, and the thorn or splinter of glass with which it is tipped does the work as successfully as a lancet. Moreover, the patients never show the slightest fear, since they are convinced that from the moment the arrows pierce their veins they will begin to recover.

BLUNDERS OF AUTHORS.

Some Queer Things of Which Fiction Characters Are Guilty.

For many years a favorite pastime of the literary dilettante has been to ferret out mistakes made by celebrated authors. Writers of the highest standing have been guilty of absurd "bloomers," such as Flaubert's assertion that "the two adversaries were placed at an equal distance from each other." Mistakes of this sort have been excused on the ground that the authors were working under pressure of inspiration and were therefore likely at any time to make minor errors.

Stories of today do not, as a rule, appear to be written under the stress of temperamental excitement. Yet, in spite of their seemingly cool sophistication, they are not lacking in curious mistakes. A short list of these errors has been compiled by a writer

I screamed in silent rage.

"I will never speak to you again as long as I live," hissed Dolly. (Just try to hiss it.)

Her feet were swollen from standing in wet, salty water.

Like Adela, he had dark brown hair, with enormous black eyebrows, a mustache and a short beard.

What, therefore, was our surprise to find Tish sitting by the fire in her bath robe and slippers with a cup of tea in her lap and her feet in a tub of water.

HE WASN'T MAKING MONEY.

But Still He Had a Good Reason For Congratulating Himself.

He was a renter, and at least every other season he was occupying a different farm. By a friend's advice he had moved the year before into an entirely new field, a dozen miles from his usual haunts, and had not been seen for several months. When the friend did see him at last it was quite by accident, business taking him into the old man's neighborhood. The farmer hailed him from the cornfield and came out to the fence.

"Hello!" said the friend. "Is this your farm?"

"Yes; and I jist come over to tell you, sir, that I'll be ready to pay part of that claim of your'n before long."

"You must be doing well."

"I think I'm doin' fust rate, and I'm powerful obliged to you, sir, for headin' me this way."

"I am always glad to help if I can."

"I knowed that, sir, and that's why I come away over here so far from home. It's kinder strange to me, but as long as I am doin' as well as I am I am goin' to stand it."

"Are you making any money?"

The old man's face brightened perceptibly. "No, I ain't sir," he replied hopefully, "but I'm losin' it slower'n I ever done in my life before."

Spontini's Decorations.

Caspero Spontini, the composer, regarded himself in the light of a demigod, and when inspirations crowded upon him he donned a wide, toga-like gown of white silk with a border of gold and a fes of white silk embroidered in gold from which a heavy tassel hung down. With great dignity he sat down before his desk, and if a grain of dust was visible on the paper on which he penned his music he rang the bell impatiently for his servant to remove the obstacle. Spontini owned so many medals and decorations that they could no longer be accommodated on his breast. At a grand musical reunion at Halle an old musician remarked to a comrade, "See how many decorations Spontini has, while Mozart has not one." Spontini, who overhead it, replied quickly, "Mozart, my dear friend, does not need them."

Rameses I.

Rameses I. was the first king of the nineteenth dynasty in Egypt and ruled for a brief period about B. C. 1355. Beyond the fact that he waged war in Nubia, where he left an inscription and constructed some of the buildings of the Karnak, little is known of his reign. His mummy was found in 1881 at Deir-el-Bahri. His son, Seti I., built the Memnonium at Karnak in honor of his father's memory.

Old Postal Rates.

Our postal rates in 1824 were excessive. To send a letter thirty-six miles the cost was 6 cents. For over 400 miles the uniform rate was 25 cents, and as the mails were transported by stage coaches, the process was a slow one.

So He Would.

If a man was only as careful of his hat and clothes at the end of a month as he is at the end of the first day he would always look well dressed.

Hard to Rime.

J. J. HARTLEY
FOR

ADDRESS TO THE ELECTORS:

At the earnest solicitation of a large number of influential citizens, I have decided to come before the electors of Peterborough as a candidate for the Mayoralty. My long experience in municipal affairs, comprising a ten-year term as a member of the Council, also fourteen years on the Board of Education, and Chairman of the Board of Health, peculiarly fit me for the position of presiding head over your Aldermanic body. Those who are supporting my candidature are satisfied that I will, if elected, do my utmost to give the city a straight, honest administration of its affairs, and my motto will always be "strict economy." On the strength of my past record, I ask for your hearty support and the weight of your ballots to return me at the head of the polls next Monday. I promise close attention to municipal expenditures, and to particularly guard against leakages and unnecessary waste of public monies entrusted the Council for administration.

Again soliciting the honour of your votes on election day, and guaranteeing, if elected, to do my best to merit the confidence placed in me, I am,

Yours for economy,

WEST WARD ELECTIONS

Your vote is solicited for W. C. AUSTIN AS ALDERMAN FOR 1916. I have lived in the ward for the past fifteen years, and have been connected with nearly every movement for the progress and development of Peterborough. I was nominated without my knowledge by two of my neighbours on Weller street and have decided to stay in the field and do "my bit," if successful.

If elected I shall do all in my power to bring about a more economical management of our city's affairs. Wishing you all a Happy New Year, and again soliciting your vote and influence.

Respectfully yours,

W. C. AUSTIN

DUFFUS'

Committee Rooms are over the DUFFUS GARAGE UPSTAIRS 195 SIMCOE ST.

Supporters are asked to meet in the Committee Room any hour during the day or night.

To the Ratepayers of The City of Peterborough

I RESPECTFULLY solicit your Vote and Influence to Re-Elect me as a Member of the Board of Education.

It is admitted on all hands that our Public Schools and Collegiate Institute compare favourably with the best in the Province.

This excellent result has been achieved by the Members of the Board taking a deep and active interest in the efficiency of all our Schools and securing the hearty and enthusiastic co-operation of every Teacher in every Department.

As always in the past so in the future I shall continue if I am favoured with your Votes to see that the splendid standard of our Schools is maintained and wherever possible improved.

Yours respectfully,

W. H. HILL

COUNCILLOR FOR SMITH TOWNSHIP

Being unable to see all the Ratepayers of the Municipality, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence at the coming elections.

G. B. NICHOLS,
R.F.D. No. 5,
Lakefield.

24-156-1w-51

To The Electors Of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

As your representative on the Board of Education for the past twelve years, I have served you to the best of my ability, and now I beg to offer myself for re-election, and respectfully ask your support.

Yours very truly,

JOHN CRANE

West Ward Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having been nominated to contest the vacancy in the Board of Aldermen of the City for the West Ward, and having substantial property interests in the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election for a two-year term. Having had eight years' experience in the Council, I feel that I can be of service to the City. I have been Chairman of the Board of Works for three years, Property Committee two years, and am at present Chairman of the Board of Health.

I am as interested as any one in the City, in endeavouring to get a dollar's value for every dollar of the City money spent. And if elected I will in every way do what I can to further the City's interests.

It will be impossible for me to see all the electors of the West Ward, and I take this means of reaching those whom I do not see, and solicit your support in my behalf. Wishing you all, ladies and gentlemen, a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

George H. Duncan

Card To The Electors Of The West Ward

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having been nominated to run as Alderman for the West Ward, I have decided to stand for election, and ask your vote and influence in my behalf. If elected I will use my best endeavours to further the best interests of this city.

Wishing you all the Compliments of the Season, I am,

Yours very truly,

WM. GALBRAITH.

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward:—

Having been nominated for alderman in the North Ward, I ask you for your vote and influence. I am a sanitary engineer of long experience, and the great problem Peterborough is up against just now makes me a very valuable man to have as your representative. This past six years I have made special studies of sewage disposal work. I have prepared and read several papers on this subject before the Sanitary Engineers of Ontario, and to show their appreciation of my ability they made me chairman for all of Ontario. In that problem alone it is enough to place me in a position where I can exercise my ability. In regard to public work, I believe that Peterborough should own its own street paving plant and do their own work.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year.

Yours truly,

Robt. G. Sturgeon

TO THE ELECTORS--NORTH WARD

LADIES and GENTLEMEN,—

Your vote and influence is respectfully solicited to re-elect

WM. LANGFORD, Jr.

FOR ALDERMAN

I have been your representative in the Council for nearly three years, and during that time have endeavoured to conduct the City's affairs as economically and carefully as possible, consistent with efficiency and progress. If re-elected I will continue this policy, and the experience already gained will be at your service.

Wishing you the compliments of the season, I am,

ELECT HARRY PHELAN

An Experienced Ex-Alderman

For the WEST WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the request of a large number of electors of the city, I have accepted nomination as a candidate for Alderman for the West Ward.

I can appeal to the Electors for their confidence and support on the ground of my eight years' previous experience in the Council, and the knowledge gained during that time in the management of the City's affairs.

I have taken an active part on all committees, and was Chairman of the important committee of the Board of Works for two years.

I am not a Non-resident of the Ward; but on the contrary, I have been a regular resident of the West Ward for years, which enables me to have the most intimate knowledge of the special interest of this Ward in particular, as well as of the whole city.

I may also state that I am impressed with the importance of practicing rigid economy in the city's expenditures, and pledge myself that if elected, only the most judicious expenditures will have my sanction.

With best wishes for a prosperous New Year, for Peterborough, I am,

Faithfully yours,

HARRY PHELAN

ELECTION OF DEPUTY REEVE OF SMITH

To the Electors,

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Having again been nominated for re-election for Deputy-Reeve of the Township of Smith, I again ask for your support in favour of my election on Monday, January 3rd.

My record in the Council during the past four years is before you and I can safely leave that in your hands. I may add that my intentions are to remain a resident of the Township, and retain my personal interest there as usual. If elected I pledge myself to continue to devote my close attention to the best interests of the Township.

I am in favour of issuing debentures for 8 or 10 years for the grant made by the Peterborough Council to the British Red Cross Society, in order to avoid taxing the ratepayers at the present time, and to pay the amount out of the general fund.

With best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Respectfully yours,

J. A. JOBE

To the Ratepayers Of North Monaghan

Having been nominated for Councillor for year 1916, I respectfully solicit your vote and influence, and promise, should I be elected, to do all in my power towards promoting the best interests of the township.

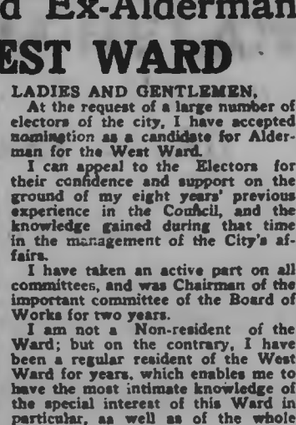
To The Electors Of Peterborough

I respectfully solicit your vote and influence to re-elect me as a member of the Board of Education.

GEORGE BURNHAM



To The Electors Of The Township Of Smith

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I am in the field for the Reeveship of Smith and solicit your kind co-operation in my behalf. It is impossible for me to see all the electors and I am taking this means of soliciting the votes of those whom I am unable to meet. If I am elected to the Reeveship of the very important Township of Smith, I will do my best to merit your confidence.

Wishing you all a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

R. N SCOTT.

Duffus As Mayor

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I have the pleasure of soliciting your votes and sympathy and support in favour of my candidature for the Mayoralty at the coming election.

I have been one of your representatives for six years, during which time I have served on all standing committees, on many special committees, and in addition to this I have acted as chairman of most of the committees, which you will admit should give me a very comprehensive knowledge of the working of your City Council and qualify me for occupying the position of Mayor.

In deciding to be a candidate at the present election, in summing up the situation I could not see how I could reasonably refuse the request of my friends. I strongly felt that with six years' experience the people would expect nothing else but that I would be a contestant and that it would be manifestly unfair to those who had supported me for six years to fail to offer my services at this time.

The City's Finances.

In these days when so many nations are engaged in a bloody and expensive war, and the financial machinery of the world is out of gear, and general business conditions so much disturbed, I am of the opinion that the greatest prudence should be exercised in the city's affairs.

The City is to be congratulated upon the manner in which its finances have been handled during 1915. We have maintained a very rapid rate of progress and yet have reserved for the demands of the near future in connection with our sewers, sewage disposal plan, schools and other public works that are either inevitable, or to which we are pledged. It is with some pride that I can say that your Board of Aldermen are not only free from serious reproach or scandal, but that among municipalities it may safely be said that we stand as representatives of the highest type of municipal financial integrity. The Tax rate of the city has been held down to a point which is an evidence of the most economical government, consistent with prudence and wisdom. As to the financial position at the close of this year, it is always difficult to tell definitely until the Auditor has completed his work for the year, how the current accounts will close. We have had a number of unexpected expenditures, especially with regard to military matters in making grants to assist the Overseas battalions, and these I believe every one will approve of. Even with these unexpected outlays we hope to close the year with a balance on the right side.

There is about $30,000.00 of taxes unpaid, and a balance of $14,467.77 which has been paid on hydro-electric account and to be refunded from capital account when the matter is straightened up. With these and other items of revenue we expect that the revenue and expenditure will at least balance.

Our Fire Department.

The excellence of our Fire Department is recognized not only by our own citizens, but also throughout the Province. The relations of the Chief of the fire brigade with his men and with the Council may be regarded as of the most harmonious. The lowering of the insurance rate, and the protection which the city enjoys has been favourably commented on by Fire Underwriters, and must be a source of gratification to the public.

Utilities Commission.

The members of the Utilities Commission and the Council are to be congratulated on the attention they have given to the installation of the new auxiliary pumping engines which so successfully provides for fire protection to the city in the future in the event of difficulties arising with our regular water pumping system.

New Bridge Over the Otonabee.

From a careful study of the local situation I am strongly of the opinion that a new bridge over the Otonabee river is one of those essential improvements which must come as soon as the financial conditions of the country have resumed their normal state. The present inadequate accommodation is retarding the progress of a large portion of very desirable residential and business sections.

Sewage and Surface Drainage.

Much attention will have to be directed to our sewage disposal with the object of disposing of the sewage of the city by artificial means instead of by helping to pollute the waters of the Otonabee.

The successful completion of the outfall sewer, and the sewage disposal plant are matters of chief importance. If elected, these will have my closest and most careful attention.

Completion of surface draining system for the whole city is another very important matter that should engage the attention of next year's Council, and I promise it will not be longer delayed than its urgency demands.

General Policy for 1916.

I am strongly opposed to any further expensive pavements on our streets under present conditions. Prudence and economy would seem to indicate that on streets where much wear is constantly going on, and which require extensive repairs, a roadbed of tar macadam or concrete, with concrete curb and gutters would amply serve the purpose. I have had occasion, as your representative to attend the Annual Roads Conventions held in the City of Toronto; and being specially interested in road building I have taken a live interest in this matter. Having regard to our local conditions and the nature of the valuable material available on the spot for this purpose, the City would be in a position to do its own work, employ its own labour, and disburse its paving expenditures among our own people.

I am in favour of the developing of the country by radial lines of railway. This matter has engaged the attention of the Mayor and Council during the year, and the indications seems to be for an early beginning of this work, and I propose to do everything in my power to advance this in our city interest.

I may mention that I have considered it my duty to identify myself with various public movements for the general moral and civic welfare of the city. I trust that in no case have I shown anything but a loyal desire for the furtherance of these interests, such as would be consistent with good citizenship.

The City is to be congratulated upon the general character of the public servants. Their fidelity and intelligence have resulted in a prompt, efficient and satisfactory despatch of municipal business. I think the heads of departments should formally meet with the Mayor occasionally during the year that the discussions at these meetings might prove of great value in the work of the City's Government.

It has always been my policy, in cases where difficulties have arisen between the city and private citizens, to endeavour to settle these matters without recourse to letigation, and by arriving at some solution that would be mutually satisfactory to both parties.

I have frequently urged the necessity of water mains, fire protection, water and sewage accommodation, for the northern portion of East City, including Auburn.

I have taken a deep interest in the effective lighting of the city and have always maintained that more light and fewer policemen would serve the city more economically and to better advantage.

The securing of new industries, consistent with the best interests of our city, has always had, and will continue to have, my very best support.

My business record in the city I may leave in your own hands. During the past 15 years, faithful attention to business has brought some of its rewards, and I know of nothing that would bring my business methods under your reproach.

In conclusion, let me say that if elected I will be your Mayor, not of any section of the people, but all the people, and my election will be an assurance that all will be equally and fairly treated.

I ask your vote and support, not in the hope that my election will increase my private gain or add to my personal ambition, but in the hope that I may be enabled to justify your confidence by the results of a sincere, earnest and honest effort to serve the city of which we are all so proud.

With renewed thanks for your kind support in the past, and the hope that the year 1916 may be a year of harmony and progress for Peterborough, believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JOS. J. DUFFUS.

MRS. D. FORBES ANGUS PRESIDENT AT HER DESK

"CANADA has done wonderful. They are doing a very great share in the work," declared Her Majesty the Queen of England, founder of the Queen Mary Needlework Guild, to a lady who visited the organization's headquarters in London. In those words Her Majesty expressed her delight at the work of the Canadian Branch of the Guild, which has its headquarters at 116 Windsor Street, Montreal, and through the enthusiastic and energetic work of its officers has added to Canada's reputation for generosity.

Since Her Majesty expressed her approval of the Canadian Branch's work, this branch has won further laurels by one of the most original and successful of journalistic ventures, the organization of "The Soldiers' Gazette," a twenty-four page weekly which carries ninety-six columns of news matter gathered from every province and city of the Dominion, and served out in a way worthy of the most competent of editors. The paper is printed in both English and French, the edition "Le Patrie du Soldat" being forwarded for the French-Canadian Battalions, and it has a total circulation of over 15,000 copies weekly.

"I congratulate the Canadian Branch of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild on the publication of the first copy of their weekly paper for the Canadian troops, and I feel sure that not only the men at the front, but those in England and in Canada, will be most grateful. I shall have much pleasure in informing Her Majesty of your enterprise.

"LOUISE MARGARET."

Since then, Her Royal Highness has written, saying that the Queen has read the first copy of the Soldiers' Gazette and thought it most interesting.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, wrote to Mrs. D. Forbes Angus, the President of the Canadian Branch, Q.M.N.G.:

"Dear Mrs. Angus.—Permit me to congratulate you, and, through you, the Canadian Branch of the Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, on the splendid enterprise of founding a weekly newspaper for the Canadian troops.

"Nothing cheers the heart of our gallant boys at the front, or in Britain, more than to receive 'good news from home.

"You have our sincere and hearty support in your good cause. These little heart touches are what upbuild our soldiers."

Brigadier-General Wilson, General Officer Commanding the 4th Military Division, also testified to his hearty approval of the project; while Lieutenant-Colonel C. N. Perrault, Commandant of Kingston Military College, wrote asking for the honor of being appointed the "Soldiers' Gazette" Kongston correspondent.

So much importance was attached to the venture by Major-General Hughes that he appointed an officer in London to the duty of supervising the distribution of the fifteen thousand copies that are forwarded weekly to the men in England and France.

Letters "To the Editor," from the men at the front, all expressive of the deepest appreciation of this endeavor on the part of the Guild to keep them in touch with current events in Canada are beginning to pour in, and the ladies who undertook the venture are now assured that it is a popular one and deserving of being maintained until the end of the war.

In the maintenance of the work the Guild is confronted with the need of funds. When the project was first considered it was felt that the money contributed to the Guild by the people of Canada and intended for the alleviation of suffering among the soldiers and sailors of the Empire, could not be diverted to this end. It was, therefore, necessary to establish an independent fund, to be raised by public subscription. With this object a committee was formed and Miss Marguerite Shaughnessy, of 905 Dorchester Street West, Montreal, was appointed honorary treasurer and authorized to receive donations. Owing to the nature of the distribution organization, and the fact that there are many brave Canadian soldiers who have no one at home to remember them and place their names upon the "Soldiers' Gazette" lists as subscribers, it was decided not to accept any individual subscriptions, but to forward some fifteen thousand copies weekly which would be distributed among the officers and men by the military authorities. Today there is not a Canadian soldier overseas who does not have the opportunity of keeping in touch with the affairs of his home town through the "Soldiers' Gazette."

As the expenses are heavy it is the wish of the organizers that all who approve of the project contribute, through Miss Shaughnessy, their share toward its maintenance.

Not alone in the founding of "The Soldiers' Gazette" has the Canadian Branch of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild established its claim on public sympathy and support.

The Guild was formed by Her Majesty the Queen upon the outbreak of the war to assist in the relief of the suffering caused thereby. Donations are sent from all parts of the world to Friary Court, St. James' Palace, London, Eng., where the Queen personally supervises their distribution. Her Majesty's chief aim is to meet the greatest need, and the contributions are at once forwarded to where they are most required. On this account it is not desirable that donations be specially designated, as Her Majesty is kept informed as to where the articles may be distributed to the best advantage. Lists of requirements are issued weekly from Friary Court, and the endeavor of the branches is to fill these needs as promptly as possible. Recently a large number of Christmas puddings, cakes, etc., were received at the Montreal headquarters and as the officers considered that these were more in the form of personal gifts to the Canadians, they were forwarded to the Canadian Field Comforts Association at Shorncliffe, England, to be forwarded direct to the Canadians in the trenches.

Since its inception, the Canadian Branch has forwarded weekly hundreds of parcels and cases of goods, socks, mufflers, housewives, and a thousand and one similar devices, all calculated to bring some comfort to some soldier or sailor. The response of the public to the fund for the purchase of such comforts has been a most generous one, and quite recently, Mrs. Forbes Angus received from Lady Annie Lawley, the Honorary Secretary, an illuminated parchment certificate bearing testimony to Her Majesty's gratification at the Branch's excellent work, and accompanied by the following letter:

"Dear Madam,—

"I am commanded by Her Majesty the Queen, to send you the accompanying certificate as a mark of Her Majesty's appreciation of the valuable services rendered by you and your workers of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild.

"I remain, yours faithfully,
"ANNIE LAWLEY,
"Hon. Secretary."

The officers of the Canadian Branch are: Patronesses, H. M. the Queen, H.R.H., the Duchess of Connaught and Strathearn; Hon. President in Canada; Lady Mackenzie, Toronto; President, Mrs. D. Forbes Angus, Montreal; 1st-Vice-President, Mrs. Herbert Drummond, Vancouver; Hon. Treas., Mrs. John Turnbull, Montreal; Hon. Secy., Miss C. Welland Merritt, St. Catharines, Ont.; Hon. Treas., Mrs. Robert Rogers, Ottawa.

All communications should be addressed Headquarters, 116 Windsor.

Reasons Why Some Conscription Was Needed

(By Wilbert S. Forrest).

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Why the voluntary system of obtaining men for the British armies has failed and conscription has been declared necessary, was explained to the United Press to-day by an officer for fourteen months in charge of London's "cream" recruiting station.

"Just come out and I'll give you a practical demonstration," he said, and he stepped into the Strand from the recruiting hut that stands just east of Charing Cross.

It was at the hour when the metropolitan populace was homeward bound. Thousands of men from stores and shops were hurrying home. The recruiting officer stepped into the crowd and touched the arm of a sleek clerk, not over 24, with a polite, "Why don't you join the army?"

"I'm married and my job would be finished if I did," was the reply. The prospective recruit disappeared quickly.

The next two men approached admirable specimens of manhood, were they were in the government service in the India office. The fourth was a farmer boy with his "girl" on his arm. He was so startled at the recruiting officer's request that he dashed away into the crowd. The fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth men accosted claimed physical unfitness. The ninth said his wife was sick. The tenth claimed to be over 40, the maximum age for recruits, though he did not look it.

The eleventh was a letter-sorter at the postoffice, who pleaded that he couldn't leave the government in the lurch. The twelfth crossed his heart that he was lame and limped away, though he was not seen to limp as the officer approached. The thirteenth was too old and the fourteenth said he was a policeman and citizens' clothes. The fifteenth man approached, six solid feet of manhood, sneered at the recruiting officer.

"You're askin' me to enlist. D'ye think twelve shillin's and six pence a week for separation allowance enough for mah wife? No! None of this army for me."

"There's the answer," said the recruiting officer. "They simply won't go. That's why we're going to have conscription.

"The worst of it is that the majority of the recruits we are getting to-day are the dregs. The middle class fellows with the white collars will not go until they are shoved. Many of the men we are getting are loafers who would join the army anyway for three meals a day and seven shillings a week. We're not getting enough fighting men."

Quadruple Murder And Suicide Shocks Connecticut Town

DANBURY, Conn., December 31.—William Arthur Steele, 25 years old, colored, employed at the Newtown Inn, at Newtown, Conn., bought a bottle of carbolic acid at a drug store at Bethel last evening. After leaving the store he saw Constable Ernest A. Bell, and said:

"I'm going down below. Remember that when you hear about me again."

As Steele was walking in the yard of his home toward the front door, C. W. Perry, a neighbor, saw him fall and found that he had swallowed the carbolic acid. Steele was carried to Perry's house, where he died, saying with almost his last words: "Go over and see my folks, they are sick, too."

Perry and other neighbors went to Steele's home. In the kitchen they found a blood stained axe. In a bed room on the first floor they found, with skulls crushed, and throats cut, the bodies of Steele's wife, Beatrice; her brother, James Riley, 15 years old, and Hannah Hubbel, five years old, Steele's stepdaughter. In a closet upstairs they found the body of William Hubbel, six years old, a stepson, his skull crushed and his throat slashed.

Swindled By Wire Tappers

Wealthy Stock Owner Is Swindled Out of $20,000 by Old Trick

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 31.—Wire tappers alleged to be operating in a suburb of Chicago, swindled Vincent Baer, a wealthy stock man of Midland, Texas, out of $20,000 on a horserace, according to reports to the police.

The swindlers, it was said, met Baer in Kansas City, and the acquaintance was later renewed in Cincinnati. The men who got his money, Baer charges, are Elward A. Alexander and Charles Miller.

Baer and his two companions came to Chicago on Christmas Day, and reported that the wires were "tapped," and Baer was told that every bet had been won. He claims to have turned over $20,000 to the two men, and all three left for Cincinnati, whence they were to go to Lexington, Ky., to collect their winnings. Baer said he missed his friends en route, and has not seen either of them or his $20,000.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

(Edited by Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.)

PILES:—Not a pleasant subject for discussion, but much more unpleasant for the afflicted. When one finds out that nearly all suffering from that trouble is entirely unnecessary the value of real information on the subject is essential. I believe that I am safe in estimating that fully 75 per cent. of the suffering from Piles is unnecessary, and that 75 per cent. of the operations for the relief of the trouble is also unnecessary. As a matter of fact I have seen but few cases of Piles, Hemorrhoids or Fissure in a period of 25 years where surgery was necessary or beneficial, and I have seen many cases.

In the first place there is seldom if ever a case of Piles that is not preceded by constipation. There are few if any cases that will not get well under a very simple form of home treatment if the cause is entirely removed.

Obviously it is impossible for me to go into a lengthy discussion of why constipation causes Piles, nor is is necessary. Those who want to know all of the details will be able to learn the entire story by procuring my Home Health Club Book, Vol. 3, which tells all about the whys and wherefores in a way that you can readily understand. It tells many other things about health and how to preserve it, but what we want now is immediate relief. Well, as I have always told you, first find out the cause and remove it, then nature has a chance at the job of curing your ailments.

In this case it's constipation. Now here comes John Doe and Richard Roe, and both declare that they are never constipated, but both are suffering from Piles. One glance in their faces tells me that although they are supposed to be truthful men they don't know what they are talking about. Because they have a movement of the bowels every day does not prove that they are not constipated, and I tell them emphatically that both are suffering severely with bad forms of constipation. At once they want to know what kind of pills they should take, and hardly know what to make of it when I say, "No pills."

It is seldom, according to my observations, that the liver is at all to blame for the sort of constipation that causes Piles. The fault is in the individual. Improper diet, and in this is included not enough water, also carelessness.

Neglecting to attend to the calls of nature promptly causes what is known to physicians as reverse peristalsis. The focal matter which should have been expelled is returned or forced back into the colon and there the patrifactive process continues.

There may be, as in the case of Roe and Doe, a movement every day and of proper proportion, but it is from one to three days behind time. The result of this delay is not only a poisoning of the system through the absorption of toxines, but during this period of delay the natural moisture and lubricants of the mucous surface of the colon is absorbed and the result is such a dry hard mass, that injury results.

How to remove this accumulation in an emergency, and to prevent its accumulation in the future as well as to heal the injury already done, will be discussed in the lext lecture.

Dear Doctor—Can you tell what will cure bunions under the feet? They are so painful that I have to limp when walking. My feet have been that way, it seems, nearly all my life, and I have never worn tight shoes. I have done everything I could for them and could not cure them. Any advice will be thankfully received. MR. K. J.

Answer—I think this is not a case of bunions, but of callouses or corns. A bunion is found on the large joint of the great toe. In cases such as yours I would suggest that you get one ounce of Commercial Acetic Acid, which is 82 per cent. pure, add to it one ounce of Witch Hazel extract, and apply it to the parts on a little pad of cotton, well saturated, and bound on at night. In many cases a week's treatment will cure the worst kind of corns, callouses and even help bunions. The cost would be but a trifle.

Dear Doctor — The doctor here says our six-year-old has bronchitis, but the medicine that he gave her did her no good. She clears her throat constantly. Should I keep her from school? She wants to go. It has been at least three months since we noticed something wrong with her, no discharge from nostrils or throat. Otherwise she is apparently well, though somewhat nervous.

MRS. G. F.

Answer—Try to get the school room well ventilated, not only for her sake, but for the sake of the other pupils and the teacher. Every night until cured, when putting her to bed, put a cold compress around her throat and over that a dry flannel cloth. Pin them on securely with safety pins and leave them on all night. Sometimes stomach trouble causes an accumulation of mucus which creates a desire to clear the throat. Do not allow her much sweets or piecing between meals. If there are any recess lunches, let them be of fruit, an apple or an orange. If the headache continues have her eyes examined.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

A Word for Father.

The editor of the Indianapolis News thus rushes to the defense of the downtrodden father:

When a man succeeds in living a good or useful live that fact is usually attributed to the influence of a mother. When men talk of days past no word brings forth more treasured memories than "mother." When a lawyer wishes to arouse a jury's compassion for a client he invariably speaks of the effects of conviction on the mother. Poets, dramatists, and fiction writers of all ages have united in honoring the name. Days have been set aside in her honor, pensions are given her, flowers named for her, societies founded for her. All this is well. The world would be a sorry world indeed if it were not so. But is there not danger of father being overlooked in the shuffle? the average father succeeds pretty well in discharging his duty to society. He labors along persistently and quietly for six days a week that his family may be provided for, he stands between his family and the world, shouldering the responsibility of the rent, the taxes, the grocery, and the coal bills; he admonishes the boy and advises the mother, seeking always to make their burden lighter, he works unceasingly without complaint, fighting, scheming, suffering to the end that his family may be assuerd comfort and independence. In this he sometimes fails, but he keeps on trying, cheerfully, stolidly, stubbornly, plugging along to the end.

The sacrifices that must be made he makes willingly. The boy must go to college and the girl must have music lessons; something must be cut, and usually it is some luxury of father's that perishes by the wayside. He is not so poetical a figure as mother, not so demonstrative in his affections so elate in pleasure, so depressed in grief. And yet many will remember a kind word here, or a thoughtful act there, thant stands out, clear and distinct, as one of youth's happiest impressions. Not often is he appreciated by the growing boy. Often he stands in the family as the official admonisher to whom the boy's faults related for punishment. On him falls the unpleasant task of applying the rod; his is the arm that must enforce respect for mother and regard for the rights of others. In this light the growing boy is likely to view him with a mixture of fear, awe and respect. Not until years bring a proper perspective is he rightfully understood and appreciated—and perhaps not even then.

Help the Boys.

We want to say a few words for the boys. We mean those wild reckless boys who have no friends. We know this is to many an unpleasant and disagreeable subject, but we must not forget that the boys make men, and our country will be governed in the future by the boys of to-day. We are writing about the very bad boys, and we don't mean that we are to uphold them in wrongdoings. Don't go down in the ditch with them, but lend a helping hand and help them out. Give them a kind word of cheer whenever you can. We must trust a man to save him. Make him think that he is a man, and the good that is within him strives to do the best it can.

You are too apt to distrust our fellowmen. We don't love one another as the Master bade us do. When a brother goes wrong we don't try to bring him back, but like Cain, we cry out, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' You hear people say in speaking of some of these boys: "There is no good in him, he will never be any good." We don't know each other because we don't try. We are looking for faults instead of trying to find some good. We don't think you will find a boy with no good in him. We never have.

We don't know why he went wrong Maybe he was neglected at home. So many people thing that anything is good enough for the boys. Start him right; give him your love and respect at home, and we won't be apt to forget it. Perhaps if you had the temptations he has you might be lower than he is.

A girl can be such a help to a brother if she will. And you who meet him in the world's broad field, don't judge too harshly. You don't know his heart. You will never know the longing of his heart after better things while you and I are looking coldly and forgetting that for such as he the Blessed Master came and suffered. There is not one but is worth saving, yet we professed followers of the Master pass by on the other side.

Home Life.

We wish we could sufficiently impress upon every woman the importance of the home, and that a woman can have no higher work in life than making a home for her husband and growing children. This truth is in great danger of being lost sight of in these modern times, when women will leave their little children to be cared for by hirelings, while they take up outside work, which might just as well be done by others. Of course if the mother is obliged to earn their living, that is a good excuse, but if not, she has none.

If all godd people who deprecate divorces would be more careful about making marriages; if the churches would not give their sanction to bargains for titles, and then deplore the outcome, there would not be so many mistakes to rectify. The first thing for any human being to learn is that life is law and any transgression will bring trouble.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

NEW TIRES ARE MINUS RUBBER

Austrian Engineer Has Managed to Invent Them.

VIENNA, Dec. 30.—The announcement that a German professor has succeeded in making synthetic rubber from chemicals has brought to light here the fact that an Austrian engineer named Von Dunikowski two months ago applied for a patent on a tire consisting of wood fibre and certain binders. The main material used is willow and birch fibre. What the binder consists of has not been revealed, but it does not contain rubber. A motor car fitted with the new tires ran 437 miles and showed no signs of undue wear.

A fairly large nose is a sign of an active, progressive disposition: one that "gets ahead" in the world, and is a good sign, if not too pronounced. A long straight nose denotes a fine, high-spirited nature, and a small nose is indicative of lack of energy and temperament.

THE USE OF NET FOR FROCKS AND BLOUSES

IT COSTS YOU

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—When the practical quality steps in, illusive chic, they say, steps out. This may be true when the idea of the practical is carried to an extreme. We have learned, however, to add a touch of trimming here, and a note of colour there; to slash a sleeve, or band a skirt in a way that quite overcomes the pre-dominance of practical over chic, and preserves both.

The Dress for General Wear.

Suitable for the business woman or the young girl just beginning her days at college, is the popular serge in various qualities and weights. This material is appropriate for the stormy days of the heaviest of winters and also for the most balmy of climates. Wool poplins, gabardines, and tweeds are also serviceable, and make exceedingly attractive costumes. These models, often simple in design, permit of a smart touch of some distinctive colour or effect, perhaps a motif, symbolic of the mystic Orient, or of the more fantastic cut-in-stone relics of our aborigines, the Indian mound builders, which have been brought to view after almost numberless decades. Details of this kind often close the high collar, being in the form of buttons, oddly shaped, or medallions, serving as buckles, or simulating belts on the dress itself. With these effective novelties a dress or suit may be rendered unique to a degree and carry an individual note, difficult to obtain but very satisfactory to the wearer, as she may be sure that her creation is for her wear alone, and will not be duplicated.

The Use of Lace and Net for Blouse or Frock.

Net has once more come into popular use for dainty blouses and frocks, both for daytime and evening wear; thread-run nets are especially favored for the latter purpose. Plain net is used considerably for blouses in simple designs tucked here and there and with tiny frills that fold softly about the neck, or lend grace to the sleeve. Chantilly, that charming lace of web-like texture in almost too delicate a weave to be worn, is also used to fashion many gorgeous creations. Shadow lace, too, has its part in the making of the more elaborate dresses, in combination with soft taffeta or satin, as trimmings in narrow bands, for sleeves, or in softly flaring bretelles. Strange as it may seem, velvet in vivid colours is often used for trimming these filmy costumes in panels and bandings, making a wonderful effect.

Satin or Taffetta as Trimmings

Narrow pleatings and ruchings of lace and net seem to be used universally for trimming the dainty evening costume; soft satin, too, in the narrowest of bands or folds, occasionally beaded with small pearls, edges the tiny ruffles and sleeves as well as tunics or flounces which compose the costume.

To wish is of little account; to succeed you must earnestly desire; and this desire must shorten their sleep. —Ovid.

SAYS DOCTOR EXTORTED $500 "HUSH" MONEY

BERLIN, Dec. 30.— County Judge Hanning reserved judgment until January 4 in the case of Dr. Wellington Jacobs, a local osteopath, charged with extorting $500 from Mrs. Frank Snyder of Woolwich Township.

The complainant testified that she paid the money to Jacobs in response to a demand from him for it as 'hush' money, in return for which he was to save her son, David Snyder, from a penitentiary term for an alleged offence against a young girl. She swore that Jacobs had declared that he knew of the case and that he would have the youth punished if the $500 was not forthcoming.

Dr Jacobs on the stand declared that he had not benefitted at all by receiving the money. He had acted for the girl's father and no idea of personal gain had ever entered his mind.

Doctor Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 105 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to se me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enlivened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S EMPIRE GOWN.

By Anabel Worthington.

The negligee is always an important garment to the woman who has hours of leisure, and in summer it is especially so. Whatever form of it is scant and simple is always best for warm weather, and in the model which we illustrate herewith we have an ideal design for present use.

The small bodice is cut on kimono lines, with sleeve and body in one piece. The neck is low, with a small, flat collar outlining the edges and the sleeves end at the elbow. The waist line comes very high up under the arms, passing across the bosom, and below this is the skirt, which has two back gores and two front gores, joined to the bodice without any fulness whatever at the top. The lower edge is almost straight, and this causes the garment to cling closely to the figure.

This gown takes so very little material that one may well make it of something a little expensive, such as crêpe de Chine or wash silk, but this does not mean that more ordinary fabrics will not make up daintily in the same manner. Of these there are many cotton crêpe materials which are very attractive, and there are mercerised cottons which are so silken as to deceive the average observer. Then there is organdie, plain or flowered, white or colored, and dotted swiss and many similar weaves.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

Foe Uses Cottonless Powder Eight Months

BREMEN, Dec. 30.—Germany's experiments with substitutes for cotton in the manufacture of gunpowder have been so successful, it was announced here to-day, that for eight months no cotton has been used for this purpose. This statement was made by the President of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce, in an address to a convention of merchants of this city. After referring to the designation of cotton as contraband by Great Britain he said:

"I have had the opportunity to establish officially that for eight months not a kilogram of cotton has been used for making powder. Thanks to the work of German science and industry, we have succeeded in winning from the immeasurable supply of German forests a cellular material which is cheaper and better suited for powder-making than cotton. Even after the war German munition factories will not buy another bale of cotton from America.

"The second important ingredient saltpeter—of the entire Chilean outputs of which we formerly took two-thirds—is now manufactured exclusively in Geramny from the air. Our factories already are so advanced that in the coming spring they will be able to cover the entire requirements for nitrogen, including the amount used in agriculture, and if the war lasts longer they will even be able to export this product."

The speaker also asserted that camphor, which for seven years has been produced synthetically from American turpentine, is now obtained more cheaply and in better quality by chemical means from synthetic turpentine. Even after the war, he said, there will be no more importation of camphor from Japan or turpentine from America.

Loses Memory in Battle, Forgets Fiancee, Then Woos Her Anew

STRANGE EXPERIENCE OF THOMAS TRUSLER

Sent Back to Front from Hospital, He Fails to Recall His Name and is Reported Missing

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Fate has played many strange pranks with the men fighting in Europe, but none perhaps is more curious than that in which Thomas F. Trusler figures. Mr. Trusler, who is stopping at the Marseilles Hotel, was a gunner in the Third brigade, Canadian Field Artillery.

The concussions from a shell which struck the ground near him last winter caused him to lose all recollection of the past. Consequently, his fiancee in Montreal mourned him for dead, and even after he learned his identity through a scar on the right foot he did not remember her or his parents.

However, as he explained yesterday, he took his parents' word that they were his father and mother, and, although he does not recall his first proposal, he said he has fallen in love all over again with the woman he was to have married and soon he hopes to make her his bride.

Although Sir Frederick Treves, King George's surgeon, is said to have attempted to restore his memory by means of hypnotism, Mr. Trusler, who is twenty-one years old, recalls nothing of his past prior to the day his mind became blank from the concussion, and when he returned to Canada in the early autumn because of his wound it was necessary for him to relearn the way about his native city of Montreal and to be introduced to lifelong boyhood friends and schoolmates.

The young man's memory of events since he recovered consciousness in a field hospital three days after the concussion from the shell shocked him is excellent he says and he recounted many interesting experiences in and near the trenches, telling of the wonderful bravery of the Canadian troops when they saved the day at Ypres. Mr. Trusler also told many interesting features of the German spy system, even within the armies of the Allies, and he gave a vivid description of many of the campaigns and battles in which he engaged.

Under Fire at Ypres.

The young gunner went with the first Canadian contingent which reached France a year ago. At that time the German General Staff was perfecting its scheme to break through to Calais by way of Ypres. Mr. Trusler first came under fire near Vlamartinghe, just west of Ypres. His division was acting as a reserve force.

"I have been told by men who served with me on my gun that we all saw a huge German aeroplane fly over us," Mr. Trusler said. "Soon thereafter there came a rain of high explosive shells from a big German gun. Several of our boys were killed, and the fact that I was not was a miracle. One of the shells fell within ten or twenty feet of me, I was told, but did not explode. The concussion, however, was terrible, and it dazed and stupefied me.

"I remembered awakening in a base hospital with the wounded all about me. I felt myself all over and could find nothing smashed, so I sat up in my cot. Then I got out of it and stood up and asked why I was there. A physician told me what had happened to me and sent me back to my brigade, which he located by the insignia on my uniform. When I got back I didn't seem to recollect anything or anybody.

"Some of the men of my gun company saw me and took me back to my quarters. It was necessary for me to make friends with my companions again. They called me 'Howie,—a nickname—and soon I became known as 'Howie Trusler,.' That fact made it difficult for my parents to locate me, because when I was asked my name I spelled it 'Tressler,' because I didn't want anybody to know that I couldn't recall where I came from or who I was.

Is Reported Missing.

Consequently "T. F. Trusler" went on the rolls of the missing. Consequently also, I failed to get mail from my fiancee and my parents. It was not until last summer when I was wounded in the leg so badly that I was sent to England that I made any attempt to find out who I was. I confided my story to an English woman of high rank who was interested in the hospital. She made inquiries among the officers of my who remembered 'Trusler' who came out with the contingent.

"My parents were communicated with and my mother remembered an old scar on my foot. Sure enough the scar was there. Even when I returned to Montreal I didn't recognize my mother and don't yet. I learned I was engaged to be married before I left for the front and on my return home my fiancee was at the station with my mother and father. I didn't recognize any of them, but they took me home."

Here Mr. Trusler admitted that he had fallen in love "all over again" and with the same girl.

Although the gunner cannot remember what happened before last January, he has a vivid recollection of what has happened since and his description of the battle at Ypres in April and of the effect of the poison gases used by the Germans is most vivid.

"About five o'clock of the evening of April 23," he said, "we were getting quite bored, for we were in the reserve force along the Poperinghe road, three miles west of Ypres. The dull monotony was rudely broken by the sudden appearance of swarms of French colonial troops, Singalese and Zouaves, rushing in from the front trenches, clutching at their throats, holding their sides, rolling on the ground, gasping for breath, eyes bloodshot and staring, many of them bleeding at the mouth, but most of them unable to explain the cause of their peculiar actions.

Asphyxiating Gas Cloud.

"Along with them came scores of refugees, men, women and children, bearing with them all they could take from their burning and wrecked homes. At that time we had never heard of asphyxiating gas and were at a loss to make out what it all meant. The order 'stand to your arms' was quickly passed along to the reserves. The Montreal Highlanders were the first to get on the move. It takes longer to get artillery wagons on the move, and while we were working at feverish haste the Highlanders went by, each man singing and smiling, although they must have known that many of them would never return.

"At seven o'clock the artillery forces were all ready and waiting for the order to move forward. I shall never forget the scene at the moment. From the city of Ypres there arose high in the heavens huge jets of flames, while overhead shells burst by the hundreds, and in our ears was the din of falling walls and all sorts of indescribable noises.

When the order came to move forward we urged our horses with a cheer and a song. It was necessary for us to make a detour south of Ypres in order to get to the main road leading to our damaged front. It also was necessary to cross the Yser Canal, about half a mile south of the town, on a pontoon bridge. The first gun got over safely, when along came a German shell and destroyed it.

"Under a deadly fire, for the Germans had the range, we waited while the engineers worked to construct another bridge. Two long thick poles were placed across the narrow canal and cross ways on them timbers and logs were piled. The second gun went across precariously, but the third was upset by a rolling log, the cannon carriage falling on one side of the narrow bridge and the six horses on the other. While the cannon and horses seemed to be seesawing this way and that across the bridge a shell put an end to all the trouble.

Into Hurricane Of Fire.

"Then a third bridge was constructed and my gun went across. By this time the glare from the burned town was dying down and I was wondering just what was ahead of us when an aeroplane high above dropped a star shell. This was followed by a perfect hurricane of shells, and the last gun to attempt the crossing went into the water. Emerging from a wood, we ran into a murderous gunfire from German infantry and machine guns. My gun and others of our battery were hurled into this open fire swept field, swung around and in less than two minutes opened fire on the Germans.

"Each of our shells contained 800 bullets, and at a range of 200 yards one can readily imagine how the Germans fell. Yet under this torrent of steel they came on and on with fixed bayonets, only to be beaten down, torn to pieces and piled in heaps. Walking over their own dead regiment after regiment was hurled against us. They got so near us on several occasions that the infantry were ordered up to repel them.

"This was the first hand to hand fighting that I saw. It was awful to see men with the blood lust on them killing and not caring. Finally we halted them, but the German infantry remained hidden behind a deep fringe of trees with their own dead piled up against them. Our guns could not do effective work because of the trees. Therefore we were ordered to use high explosive shells.

"I shall never forget how these shells were brought to us: The horses on the ammunition supply wagon became crazed and ran away. They dashed within a few yards of the German lines, and one brave rider—no one ever knew who he was—shot the first two horses dead. The wagon rolled over them and him. Then there was an explosion, for the wagon, hit by a shell, was blown to bits. The explosion wroght havoc among the Germans and our infantry, quickly following up the advantage drove the Teutons out of the woods.

"Meanwhile our line was badly pressed near St. Julien, and after the arrival of fresh British and Canadians our battery was ordered there. We went right into the town. But on and on came the German infantry, and the retreat was sounded, but not for me. My gun and two others, in all about fifty men and 700 men of the Montreal Highlanders, were ordered to remain in the town to cover the retreat.

"The Germans said that the town was becoming evacuated and at daylight advanced in tremendous numbers. The Germans didn't expect to meet with any resistance in the town at all, so they marched in singing. We wiped out with our three guns the first two regiments. Then we were ordered to retreat while the Highlanders went forward. The Highlanders were almost annihilated and we stopped and gave them assistance.

"Never did I see such a hail of bullets and the Germans came on in thousands. The spokes in the wheels of the gun carriages were nearly all broken and one brave company of Germans got right up to our gun. It was saved by a French-Canadian whose name, strange to say, was McConnell. With the butt of a short rifle he killed three Germans who attempted to get behind the bullet shield of the gun. At last the Germans were checked and we saved our three guns."

"The Germans are very clever at it, and one method of sendng news between the lines is by trained dogs. One night one of our sentries saw a dog dart past him. He called to the animal, thinking the dog would make an excellent mascot for the battery. The dog came back and wagged his tail and the sentry took him to his quarters.

Dog Betrays Spy.

"The following morning one of the men remarked on the thickness of the plain leather collar worn by the dog. An examination revealed that the collar was hollow, and in it we found a message in cipher. Instantly an officer was summoned, the dog was put on a long wire leash and driven out of camp. He went direct to a barber shop, where the men were in the habit of lounging and talking when off duty. The barber, whom we thought to be a Belgian, was a German spy and afterward was put to death.

"I was quartered soon after that on an outpost guarding general headquarters. Not even the King of England could have passed the road we guarded unless he had a passport. Toward evening a handsome automobile of English make containing two staff officers approached. The sentry on duty saluted with fixed bayonet and asked for passports. One of the officers got out of the machine and reached his hand into a leather case. Instead of drawing out a passport, he drew out a revolver and shot at the sentry. He missed him, and the sentry shot him dead. Meantime another sentry killed the other supposed officer. Both men were Germans. In their automobile was a quantity of high explosives."

Mr. Trusler told of German treachery in the use of the white flag.

"Germans in a trench raised the white flag," he said, "and we ceased firing. Then about thirty of them, holding their hands over their heads, came out of the trench, indicating a general surrender. The Northamptonshire regiment, 1,000 strong, was sent to take charge of the prisoners. When the regiment got within 200 yards of the German trenches the unarmed Germans, as at a command lay flat on their faces. Then a murderous machine gunfire was poured into the Northamptonshires and only 400 of them got back uninjured. About six hundred of them were killed.

DO THIS FIRST—YOU!

You know, and every physician knows, that when any sickness has passed, whether it be throat trouble, organic disturbances, contagious diseases, or even a severe cold, a relapse is feared, because sickness robs the system of Nature's resistance and leaves it subject to lingering germs.

Drugs never build up a worn-out body—only food can do that, and the first thing to take after any sickness is the concentrated, blood-making oil-food in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the tissues, benefits the blood and strengthens both lungs and throat.

Physicians prescribe Scott's Emulsion after sickness. Nurses everywhere advocate it. Scott's is pure medicinal food, without injurious drugs.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, attractive folks aren't wanted around so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

SHELDON'S VICTIMS WILL GET DIVIDEND.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—The liquidators of the estate of Charles Sheldon, the "get-rich-quick" broker, have decided to pay his creditors, some 3,000 in number, one and one-third cents on the dollar.

Sheldon some years ago started in Montreal what was called a pool to purchase stocks, and for a while paid fabulous dividends to his customers. He decamped from Canada, and was arrested in Pittsburg. He was charged with fraud and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Sheldon was released early in the year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Ascending Lord. Acts 1:1-14. Golden Text: When he ascended on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. Eph. 4:8.

1. Verse 1. What former treatise is here referred to?
2. What did Jesus do and what did he teach?
3. Which class of persons could we do without with the least injury, the doers or the teachers, and why?
4. Verse 2. What was the chief objective commandment, which Jesus gave his apostles just prior to his ascension?
5. What would you say is the chief work of the Christian church to-day?
6. Verse 3. What were the nature, and the number, of the proofs that Jesus gave of his resurrection from the dead?
7. Verse 4. What was "the promise of the Father," referred to in this verse? (See Luke 24:49, John 14:16, et. seq.)
8. What would you call the gift of the Holy Spirit, in present day language?
9. As there is only one God, would you say or not, and why, that the gift of the Holy Spirit is God himself becoming incarnate in each person?
10. Had the apostles up to this time, and have all true Christians to-day, received the Holy Spirit in the pentecostal sense? Give your reasons.
11. Why is it that so few Christians are conscious that they are indwelt, and enveloped, by God the Holy Spirit?
12. Verse 5. What resemblance, if any, is there between water baptism and the gift of the Holy Spirit?
13. What are the conditions for a Christian to receive the baptism of the Holy Spirit?
14. Verses 6,7. Would it be a help, or an injury to us, if God were to answer all our questions concerning future events, either as to ourselves, our country, or God's church? Why?
15. Is it wise, or otherwise, and why, for Christians to speculate, or teach, or even form an opinion concerning the time of Christ's second coming?
16. Verse 8. What is the prime necessity for Christians to know by experience, in order to have power to live right, and to effectually testify of Jesus?
17. Verse 9. By what power did Jesus go up into the clouds, and where was his destination?
18. Verses 10,11. What is the import of what these two men said concerning the return of Jesus?
19. Why would not the coming of the Spirit of Jesus on the day of Pentecost be the return of Jesus as these two men meant?
20. Verses 12,14. What did they wait for, and pray about, in this upper room?

GALLIPOLI.

J. Lewis Milligan.

If heroes blood and sacrifice
Can purchase one bare rod of land,
Then Britain's sons have paid the price
Of fatal Dardan's barren strand,
Our lowliest and our loftiest men,
Fond lovers of the ingle-side,
Have left us ne'er to come again
Across the blue Ionian tide.
Where Hector and Achilles clashed
And in the final onset fell,
The dauntless Australasian smashed
A blood-red path through hosts of hell!
No Greek or Trojan ever bore
A stouter heart into the fray
Than Brooke and Scott and many more
That sleep in honored dust to-day.
There in those barren wastes they lie
Beneath ten thousand sacred stones;
Fair by the vales Gallipoli,
Thy soil is rich with British bones!

There is more character in doing what you can than in attempting the impossible.

The Iscaria Steel Works

A Story Illustrating the Difference Between the Old and the New.

By JOHN Y. LARNED

There are in Europe a number of petty kingdoms, principalities and dukedoms that in the various changes of the map which have occurred during ten or a dozen centuries have for one cause or another been left out of the great divisions. One of these is the duchy of Iscaria, which several centuries ago, on readjusting the boundary between Italy and Austria, became independent. It consists of seventeen square miles in a mountainous region, the capital, Arancon, lying in a beautiful valley in the center of the dukedom. This little state has always maintained all the ceremony of an empire. The duke, being a reigning sovereign, associates on equal terms with the crowned heads of the world. He has a prime minister and a cabinet, and his army numbers 400 men. On state occasions he sits on a throne and wears a crown. The royal family, being members of the family circle, find it difficult to gather about them sufficient persons within the dukedom of high enough rank to form a court society.

Bob Anderson was a young American whose grandfather had established a foundry which had grown to be the Pemberton Steel company. Bob a few years ago came of age to find himself the sole owner of these extensive works. He retained the control of the concern, but there was an efficient manager who relieved the owner of the responsibility.

The young man, having a taste for adventure, on completing his education set out to see the world. During three years he traveled, returning only at long intervals to satisfy himself that all was going well with his steel works, for he had inherited from his father a natural gift for administrative action. He not only knew what kind of man to get to carry out his ideas, but took care to make an examination of what he was doing at such intervals as he deemed essential. After each investigation he would start out again on another ramble.

One day Bob found himself in Arancon, the capital of Iscaria. It happened to be a field day, and the reigning duke, Michael III., reviewed his army. Bob tried to hire a presentable livery rig in which to view the spectacle, but found everything engaged except the most rattletrap cab in the dukedom. He was obliged to be content with this and drove on to the grounds where the review was to take place.

During the ceremonies Bob's cabby got on to grounds reserved for royalty, and his old trap, desecrating a space on which stood the splendid equipage of the duchess, was ordered off by a policeman. Bob slipped a florin of gold pieces into the man's hand, who straightaway, pretending that there was no way for the cab to get out of the tangle of vehicles, permitted him to remain. The duchess looked daggers at the official and at Bob, but said nothing.

Beside the wife of the sovereign was her daughter, Eudoxia. There was something so discordant between the cab and the carriage in which she sat that she could not repress a smile. That smile brought a resolve to the American to show her royal highness that he was used to better equipages than a cab that was ready for the scrap heap.

Now, the dukedom of Iscaria was like a Parisian shop, where about all the stock is in the window. The duke was financially the poorest sovereign in Europe. His territory, being mountainous, was unproductive, and his subjects were gradually going elsewhere to make a living. Smarting under the young duchess' smile at his rig, Bob, as soon as the troops had passed, returned to his hotel to think over a plan whereby he might show those impoverished royalties that he was able to ride in as fine a coach as they. The result of his thought and investigation was as follows:

Through the city of Arancon ran a mountain torrent directly before the hotel in which Bob was stopping. While cogitating a plan to show his power through his wealth he was looking on this stream.

"I have it," he said suddenly. "That's a splendid water power. I will line the stream with mills. I will show these people that I can turn the flow of emigration to immigration. I will build up the dukedom. Then I will ride through the capital in a donkey cart if I choose and they will have something to laugh at."

Anderson spent some time inquiring what manufacture would be best suited to the locality and found that there were undeveloped iron mines in mountains near by that were very rich. His first move was to buy a large tract of land on both sides of the waterway below the city. Then he sent to America for a corps of engineers and mechanics, and buildings began to go up enormous dams were constructed, and machinery by the hundreds of tons began to arrive.

Meanwhile the builder of this water power plant went off on his travels, leaving instructions with his managers that they should keep the ownership a secret. The duke, seeing what was being done, sent his grand chamberlain to inquire what it all meant. He was told that the Iscaria Steel company was building a plant to smelt the iron to be taken from the mines in the mountains, but as to who or what was the Iscaria Steel company the chamberlain was given no satisfaction.

The building of the works, the opening of the mines, caused the influx of workmen to the capital. A park was laid out a few miles from the city, but near the plant, on which long rows of laborers' cottages sprang, as it seemed out of the ground. Hundreds of men who had left their families to go elsewhere in search of employment returned. It seemed as if Iscaria had been dead and some unseen power had breathed into it the breath of a new life.

The government reaped a substantial pecuniary benefit. Those who were in arrears for their taxes paid them, and there were thousands more to be fitted. The duke discarded the tarnished tinsel of a hundred years and purchased new and modern articles. The duchess and Eudoxia went to Paris for gowns of the latest fashion. Families of the head men of the steel company came to live at the capital, and a social circle was formed similar to that existing in the capital of a democratic monarchy.

But who was at the bottom of this prosperity? No one but the president of the steel company knew, and he would not tell. But what had been done was only the beginning. The large force that was employed in opening the mines, preparing the water power for use, building the vast city of machine shops, was as nothing to the influx of workmen that took place on the completion of the plant and the commencement of manufacture. Certain property belonging to the crown was sold in town lots, bringing in a sum of money that enabled the reigning sovereign to pay his debts and invest the balance at an interest that brought him a truly ducal revenue.

Shortly before the works were started Robert Anderson returned to the capital, bringing letters of certain persons influential in various governments to members of the cabinet of Iscaria. Being a young man of good appearance, tall and well built, he progressed rapidly in a social way in the court circle. He made no display of wealth, dressed plainly, and no one suspected that he was very rich. One of the important functions he attended was a ball at the palace, the first given since the royal ladies had put off their old fashioned gowns and appeared in their Parisian costumes. Anderson was taken to the royal family for introduction and, on giving place to others before the sovereign, joined the young Duchess Eudoxia.

"It seems to me," she said, "that I have seen you before somewhere."

"And your highness' face is familiar to me," replied Bob.

"I have it," said the lady. "I saw you at the last review of the troops."

The remembrance of his rattletrap cab brought back the smile that Bob had seen on that occasion. It was a becoming smile, and now that Bob had prepared the way for his revenge he returned the smile in kind.

"The steel works are to be opened tomorrow," he replied. "I confess that my equipage was out of place at the review of the army. Tomorrow it will be more appropriate. We Americans are representatives of commerce and manufacture. We do not put on much style."

"The court attends the inaugural ceremony. My father has been invited to press the electric key that starts the machinery."

"I shall be present."

Anderson passed on, but after the brief interview with her highness Eudoxia had no further interest in the assembly and soon took his departure.

The next day a procession of the managers and the operatives of the Iscaria Steel company started from a given point and marched to the building where the duke was to press the electric key. The route led them past the palace, and the young duchess viewed it from a balcony. At the head of the procession, in the same rattletrap cab in which he had attended the review, was Bob Anderson. Next behind him was the president of the steel works. Following these were the managers of the different departments and their subordinates. Last came the vast body of workmen.

What Anderson's presence at the head of the procession meant Eudoxia was at a loss to know. She descended to a carriage waiting below and was driven to the building where her father was to open the works. Shortly after her arrival the managers entered, followed by representatives of the workmen. Two seats were placed on the platform, one on each side of the electric key. Anderson took the one on the left. When, in a few minutes, the duke entered Anderson arose and, with a profound bow, said:

"I feel honored, your royal highness, that you have consented to open the plant that I have built in your dukedom. May it give work to your people when I shall have passed to another existence!"

The duke, not wishing to betray his astonishment before so many people, bowed and pressed the key.

The Duchess Eudoxia rose from her seat in the royal compartment and left the hall. What prompted her to do this before the ceremonies were finished was not known. The next day Bob Anderson, hearing that Mount Aetna was sending up a column of flame and smoke, left the capital for Sicily.

Nevertheless there is a report that the Duke of Iscaria has offered to make Ned a bajon and give him the hand of his daughter in order to secure Ned's vast wealth. It is also rumored that Ned is willing to accept the daughter, but not the title.

WHY NOT?

Why not a telephone in your home for Christmas?

It will brighten not only Christmas Day, but all the long days to follow.

It will lift many a burden from the housewife's shoulders, make the life of the family brighter and happier, and protect them in any emergency that may arise.

Novel Rabbit Catcher.

Crabs are put to a curious use on certain parts of the Devonshire foreshore. They are used to catch rabbits. Having located a promising burrow, the snarer takes a crab and affixes a short length of lighted candle to the back of its shell. The behavior of a crab which finds itself in a narrow inclosure is well known. It begins to run. It therefore starts away up the burrow at top rate and presently the rabbit is horrified at the sight of a jog trotting flame coming to his sanctuary. Off he goes for the other exit, only to find himself, when he emerges, in a trap.—London Spectator.

His Mental Incapacity.

Oddest Parasite in Creation.

The royal Bengal tiger is infested with one of the strangest creatures that ever lived. It is said to be a fact easily demonstrated or proved by one who has access to a zoological collection that the web of the foot of tigers of the above named species is inhabited by a bloodsucking insect about the size of a common flea which is a perfect counterpart of a tiger in every particular, shape, claws, tail and stripes included.

Maisie (no address) asks for a nice cake, but it must not be an expensive recipe. How will this do? There are only two eggs in it. One lb. treacle 1- pound each dripping, stoned raisins and currants, 1-4 lb. brown sugar, 4 breakfast-cupfuls of flour, 1 teaspoonful bi-carbonate of soda, one breakfastcupful of buttermilk, 2 eggs well beaten. Melt the dripping in a saucepan, and add sugar and treacle stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Mix flour, soda and fruit in a basin, pour the treacle, etc., into a hollow in the centre, and add buttermilk and eggs. Mix long and thoroughly, and bake for about an hour and a half.

WHISPERS OF PEACE HEARD MORE LOUDLY IN GERMANY

People Who Had Been Told War Would End in October in No Mood To Hear Politicians Who Cry For Fight To Finish

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A few months ago the great mass of the German people really believed the war would end in October, as the Kaiser himself is said to have told them. Russia, they were told, was about to be shattered, the German legions were to turn westward and France and England, deprived of their Eastern ally, would be forced to terms. Disillusion came swiftly, on the heels of the Russian renaissance, in the launching of the third war loan and the announcement of a winter campaign, writes Mr. Leonard Spray to the Daily Telegraph from Rotterdam.

"Then" he continues, "fearing the effect of the reaction on the people, the government allowed Maximilian Harden to break to them the truth. 'Not one of our enemies are disarmed,' he wrote. 'England, the strongest of the lot, cannot even be considered badly hurt by our blows. All our foes believe as honestly as any German that victory will be theirs, and they are determined to do everything to that effect. This must evidently be a war of exhaustion. The human eye cannot fanthom the end of it. Nail these ideas into every German brain.'

"What was the effect of this cranium piercing operation on its victims? It has become clear in the last few days. It was not that intended—the reconciliation of the people to a war of exhaustion, its end obscured in depths no human eye can fanthom. No; the German people had been promised peace, and it is peace they are demanding. They know now there can never be peace imposed by their conquering will. But they still believe in the possibility of a peace with honor, though not with victory, and they are fearful less their rulers, blinded by the possession of military assets that can never be realized, should deprive them of the promised boon. That the desire for peace is now the dominant one among ever widening circles of the people is witnessed by every traveller whom you meet returning from Germany. But what is of real significance at the present moment is that this longing for the end of the war, even with no conquests to show in return for the appalling sacrifices of blood and treasure, is finding open expression. True, it is little more than a whisper, but it is a whisper that is daily becoming more insistent a whisper that has at last passed from lip to lip in the Reichstag itself.

Saxony Angry at Taxes.

"Meantime there are straws which show how the wind is blowing in other parts of the German Empire than Prussia. Already, some time ago, the social democrats of Saxony made an angry protest against increased taxation. Now there is divulged another incident showing their attitude toward the war. Yesterday the Upper Saxony Chamber met and the Minister of the Interior made the following pronouncement:—'Germany did not begin the war. It was forced upon us by our adversaries, who thought to rob Germany and to suppress our national existence. That object forces us to act accordingly and to bring our enemies to the recognition that they are beaten and conquered.' Now, that has been said before. It was much the sort of nonsense to which, at the beginning, the socialists lent a willing ear. But this time it had no such reception from the socialists of Saxony. They received it in marked silence—a fact duly recorded by Vorwaerts, without the comment that, if it were free to do so, it would gladly pass. The reason why the democrats could not give assent is obvious. They knew what the declaration meant. 'We must continue the war to the end.'

"In searching the German press for opinion it is always necessary to bear in mind the iron censorship under which it works. For that reason a paragraph or a mildly expressed comment is of much greater significance than would be columns of invective in an English journal of the 'pessimist' school. There is, therefore, no danger of attaching too much importance to a recent remarkable utterance of the Frankfurter Zeitung, the principal organ of the financial classes. As no newspaper from that part of Germany has reached the outside world for several days, the original article is not to hand. But—a fact of deep interest in itself—it is quoted at length by the Vorwaerts.

"Greatly daring, the Frankfurter discusses that officially forbidden topic, the object of the war. It quotes first Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg's famous declaration. 'Germany must so build up its position, so strengthen and fortify it, that other Powers will lose their tendency to enforce the policy of an iron ring around Germany.' Then it proceeds:—'The policy of the iron ring has suffered complete defeat. French intrigues will never again prop the 'revenge' idea on its legs, and as the English guardianship, the war has, before the whole world, exposed it down to the ground and brought it into discredit. Therefore, there now remains only the English sea question. The whole theory of the domination of the sea rests upon out of date analogies with former times. It is a question of being guided according to the real conditions and getting rid of all sentimentality, which, just as blind hate, can be as dangerous as blind love.'

On Pan-Slavism.

"Having thus neatly disposed of German cant about fighting for the 'freedom of the seas,' the Frankfurter proceeds:—'Finally the speedy resumption of the Pan-Slavish treachery toward the west is not to be feared. It is true that lasting security is wanting, but we must be careful not to look for this along the wrong roads. Certainly, we can, as a matter of fact, never have, and it is because that must be recognized that the teaching is so much to be stigmatized as false which would make us believe that Germany may not put the sword into the sheath before Russia has been torn into pieces. That would lead us along the quite un-German road of a conquering imperialism, which we never intended to follow, and which is at variance with the words, "the freedom of the great and small nations."

This article, the correspondent says in closing, has attracted widespread attention throughout Germany. For it is a clear pronouncement that Germany had done all it can ever hope to do, that it can never dream of conquering Russia, and that the cry of the 'freedom of the seas" in these days when, owing to the deeds and the policy of England, freedom for the whole world on the ocean highways is an accomplished fact, is so much humbug. In other words, the Frankfurter Zeitung, standing for the great commercial interests of Germany, tells the German government to silence its false battle cries and raise the standard of peace.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lansdown Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

GERMANS UNABLE TO LEAVE TRENCHES ON DVINSK FRONT.

PETROGRAD, December 28.—An official statement says:

"At several points on the Riga front our artillery was successful against the enemy batteries, silencing them. South of Ilukst the Germans attacked our trenches under the cover of gas. On the Dvinsk front the Germans repeatedly tried to leave their trenches but were easily driven back.

"In Persia our troops defeated a German-Turkish force, among whom were several thousand rebel Persian gendarmerie and others armed with artillery and machine guns. The enemy lost several of their positions. Many were killed or wounded and the rest fled."

SUEZ CANAL NOT IN GREAT DANGER IN THE OPINION OF OFFICERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—According to officers and engineers in the British Naval Reserve who arrived in New York recently from Egypt, the reports of the danger of the Teutonic forces capturing the Suez Canal by overland attack from Damascus have been very much exaggerated.

Merchant steamers from England including the Peninsular and Oriental Company's liners to India and China and the Orient liners to Australia still go through the canal with passengers and mails without any alteration of their schedule. The big freighters from New York bound for the Far East are mostly going around the Cape of Good Hope because the saving in mileage by the canal route is not sufficient for their owners to take the risk of any delay, and the saving of dues almost pays for the extra days at sea with the present freight rates.

The officers, who have been in previous Egyptian campaigns, said that the greatest difficulties in moving an army of 100,000 men or more over the desert near Damascus or Jerusalem would be the lack of water and food, which would have to be transported on camels. The small British expeditions into the desert to fight against native tribes required a caravan of several thousand camels, they said.

The rolling stock of the Syrian railroad from Haifa to Nazareth and Damascus, which was commandeered by the Turkish government, would hardly be sufficient to carry the troops across the desert, without counting baggage, provisions, or water, not to mention the artillery, the officers asserted.

El Kantara, which is the best point for attack on the Suez Canal, as it is the end of the old caravan route, the only one where water in any quantity can be had, is within a short distance of Port Said, where the British Navy have plenty of supplies, and command the Mediterranean. The new railroad from Damascus to Mecca passes far away to the east of the canal and could not be used to any great purpose for an invasion of Egypt, the naval officers said, and its light rolling stock is very limited.

The journey from El Kantara across the desert of Et-Tih to Jaffa and Jerusalem is roughly 200 miles. The first 16 miles to Katieh is over hard land, followed by a marshy plain and sand dunes. From that point to Bir-el Abd, where there is plenty of water, there is 17 miles. The next stop is Bir-el Maza, 31 miles, where there is only one well. El-Arish is 32 miles from Bir-el Maza, and has good wells, an oasis for camping, and a fortress.

When Napoleon marched to Syria, with his army in 1799, he took three and a half days from Katieh to El-Arish and three days from El-Arish to Gaza, which is the chief stopping-place after El-Rafah, 25 miles away. The total distance from El Kantara to El-Rafah is 143 miles. In many places the route lies within two or three miles of the low, sandy shores of the Mediterranean, where the British and French cruisers are on the watch day and night with their searchlights and guns ready for any signs of any invading foe to appear.

From Gaza the old caravan route leads to Ascaloh, 12 miles, and thence 30 miles to Jaffa or 45 miles to Ramleh on the road to Damascus.

The British officers said that the canal was protected by forts on the Palestine side and warships were strung along from Port Said to Suez. They have recently been added to by the battle cruisers Mavala and Barham, which, in addition to their batteries of eight 15-inch guns, have two 17-inch guns which will carry 23 miles. Sidings have been cut in the banks of the canal for these warships so that the traffic is not interfered with, and forts have been erected in front of them with loopholes for the big guns.

The Suez Canal at present is 150 feet wide and has an average depth of 40 feet, so that in case of emergency the warships could steam through at full speed. Ismalia, the town situated half-way between Port Said and Suez, where the pilots are changed, is connected by railroads with Suez, Cairo, and Port Said.

A captain in the British Navy, who was in New York last night, and who has taken part in two of the Egyptian campaigns, said that nothing could live marching across the desert at Et Tih at present against the death-dealing reach of the Navy guns. Besides, there are regular artillery, which is in strong force, and the army of 35,000 troops, strongly entrenched from Port Said to Ismalia along the canal. The enemy would have to carry water as well as all provisions and ammunition and fodder for horses and camels.

"I have marched and fought over the sands of the desert," the officer continued, "and have been there in more peaceful times looking for game and know what difficulties have to be met. The Government is not afraid of the Suez Canal being captured by the Germans or Turks in the near future, but personally I believe they will make the attempt, and that it will be soon before the very hot weather starts."—N.Y. STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. You; nostrils are open, your head is clear; no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

SKIN TROUBLE ALL OVER CHILD'S HEAD

Like Little Water Blisters. Itched So Could Not Sleep. Hair All Dropped Out. Cuticura Healed.

99 Foundry St., Moncton, N. B.—"My little girl's trouble started just like little water blisters on her head, which went all over her head. They itched so she could not sleep at night and she would cry by the hour and then she would scratch it. I never had any rest with her night or day she was so cross and fretful. She failed in health. All her hair dropped out.

"I was given a wash for it and a salve and I used them and they did her no good. Then I got ——— Ointment which did her no good. I was told about Cuticura Soap and Ointment which healed her head in two months." (Signed) Mrs. James Flood, Mar. 11, 1914.

ACTOR KILLED.

Lieut.-Col. Howard Was With Somerset Light Infantry.

LONDON, Dec. 29. — Lieut.-Col. Lewis Charles Howard, 8th Somerset Light Infantry, has been killed in France. Lieut.-Col. Howard enlisted as a private and rose to a lieutenancy. He then resigned from the British army, going to America, where for several years he was engaged as an actor. When war broke out he returned to England, and was given a commission by the War Office. His efficiency won speedy promotion. Howard was 34 years of age and single.

GERMANY CHECKED IN 1915 WILL BE IN 1916 A BEATEN GERMANY

Temporary Set Backs May Occur to The Allies in Various Quantities But We Are Not Likely to Witness Disasters Like The Retreat From Mons---The Critical Period Has Passed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—The Star's Military Critic says to-day:

"To-day is the last day of 1915, and to-morrow we enter the third calendar year of war. The year 1914 saw Germany victorious; in 1915 Germany was checked; 1916 will see Germany defeated.

Temporary setbacks may occur to the Allies in various quarters, but we are not likely to witness disasters comparable to the retreat from Mons, or the Russian withdrawal from Poland.

Present indications are that Rumania will enter the war on our side before the summer of 1916, and that Allies will break down the German resistance and advance rapidly ere autumn comes again. The year his disappointed expectations cherished by the Allies on the last day of 1914, because we did not know what the Teutons could accomplish by mobilising all their industrial resources, nor did we realise the amazing slackness of our own preparations to wage aggressive warfare.

The Empire seemed to regard the struggle as a diversion, a side show that could be put on without much trouble while business as usual was conducted. Now we can all wonder at our good fortune in escaping destruction at the hands of our more alert enemies

They knew that we were blundering in our ignorance, and they hoped to get a decision before we would realise our danger.

But the critical period has passed.

PARIS (French Official Communique) Dec. 31.—German attempts made yesterday and last night to capture a small French post in the Champagne region failed completely.

There were no other important developments on the western front.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 31.—Sir Robert Borden is to-day doubly afflicted. In addition to a very severe attack of la grippe, Sir Robert is this morning suffering from lumbago.

The Prime Minister may be confined to his house for a considerable time.

Lady Borden has almost completely recovered.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 31.—In future there will be a dental officer with every Canadian unit, just as there is a medical officer.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 31.—Major Gen. Sir Sam Hughes expressed gratitude this morning to the press of Canada, "for its loyal and patriotic spirit in helping out in every legitimate way the work of recruiting and the development of forces to meet the common enemy."

A message of greeting from the Daughters of the Empire to the men in khaki has been forwarded to the Militia Department.

"To those men," the message reads, "whether on shell torn battle ground, or in the dreary trenches or hospitals, the Daughters of the Empire desire to send messages of gratitude and good cheer."

PAN AMERICAN PROGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—It became known here to-day that the forthcoming Pan-American Congress will bring together representatives of twenty-one American republics. North, central and south, in one great movement to form a Pan-American treaty to get all these nations solidly behind the Monroe Doctrine.

The Proposal is that each nation will create an army and navy of the size agreed upon, whole to be available at any time for defence of any American Republic against European or Asiatic aggression. It is also proposed that a Pan-American court be created to decide disputes between American nations, and the creation of an international police force. Officials here feel that the Congress will be prolific of big results.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The Dublin correspondent of the times predicts trouble if Ireland is excluded from the operation of the Conscription Bill. He asserts that the Irish Unionists will take every means to protest against exclusion, and that Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Irish Unionist party, will make an emphatic statement of their views in Parliament. Newspapers are still guessing at the possible Cabinet resignations, on the conscription issue, but there have so far been no official announcements of Cabinet resignations.

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—German troops, after successful blasting, captured a British advanced trench northwest of Hulluch, taking some prisoners and two machine guns, the War Office reported this afternoon.

"Enemy aircrift attacked Ostend causing heavy damage to buildings," said the official statement,. "Among them the Convent of Sacred Heart. Nineteen Belgian civilians were wounded and one killed. No military damage was done.

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—The loss of the fine British armoured cruiser Natal is deplorable, but it serves to remind us that Germany is having little success in wearing down the British navy.

British battle squadrons are increasing tremendously in strength, and are at least 25 per cent. more powerful than at the beginning of the war. It is a question whether a vessel of the Natal type would have been considered of sufficient value to be put into the fighting line. She was neither a scout nor a capital ship, and being of little account for fighting, pursuing, or scouting, belonged to the type which has no particular role to play, and is rapidly becoming obsolete. Her best work would have been in keeping the enemy scouts at a distance.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—It is reported that Esind Pasha, "Provisional President of Albania," has declared war on Austria and Bulgaria,. He has 20,000 armed men. His action, if confirmed, will be of real assistance to the Entente Allies.

BERLIN, via wireless, Dec. 31.—The Greek Government has sent a second protest to the Allies on account of fortifying of Salonika.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The steamer Miguel Beuilliure has broken up and is totally wrecked in a severe storm off the Scilly Islands. It is believed lives have been lost.

VIENNA, Dec. 31.—An Austrian squadron sank the French submarine Monge in the harbour of Durazzo Thursday morning, a few hours before the naval battle in which two Austrian destroyers were sunk.

PTE. S. GARRETT MAKES BIG PLEA FOR MORE MEN

"Come Along and Keep The Union Jack Flying" is The Invitation Of Wounded Otonabee Boy.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

The parents of Pte. Stanley Garrett, the Otonabee boy who left with the 57th quota in the first contingent, and who was wounded at Ypres, have received a most interesting letter from him. Pte. arrett, who has recovered from his injuries and is now with the 1th Reserve Battalion at Shorncliffe camp, says in part:

"Well, Christmas is near, but it doesn't seem like it. We haven't got any snow like we get in Canada—it's nearly all rain, but we are used to it now, so we don't mind it."

I was over to see Bill Zebell last night. He is doing fine and Bill McGregor's brothr George is also over there in the C.F.A. He looks finer than I ever saw him before. Bill Bocock is just across the road from me and he is well too. How are the lads joining up there now? I think all the able-bodied men, young and single and with nothing depending on them, should all enlist and do their share to wipe the Germans and Turks off the face of the earth; not slink back like some of them do. They ought to be ashamed of themseles, letting lots of married men go in their places.

I say if a country is worth living in, it's worth fighting for, isn't that right? If we all hung back what would become of my sisters and my mother and father. They would all be murdered lie the poor Belgians were, for the pigs of Huns hate England worse than Belgium one hundred times, for Germany would have ruled the world now only for the British, so let the sons of the British Empire defend our right and not leave it too late. We're not going to leave France until every German is out of Belgium if it takes ten years, so tell the young men of Peterobrough to come along and keep the Union Jack flying, and then we can all sing, "Britons never shall be slaves!" Where are our Peterborough boys now who used to go out with the 57th Regt. and the 24th Battery. A lot of them have gone but there are a lot more to come.

I thought when I used to be in the 57th we had a good fighting regiment as well as a well trained one, but they have a lot of men left yet. The 24th Battery is the same and the cavalry isn't far off, so now is the time for all who are fit. They can have a good trip across the water, lots of potatoes, beef, soup, jam, bread and butter, a rifle, bayonet and lots of ammunition supplied free, good hunting and big game, lots of adventures, clothes found free, and we give $1.10 a day and a V. C. for the one who catches Uncle Bill or Little Willie. I had some and would not miss it on a bet, and lay-be I'll be there again before lo-

BROCK ST. RINK TO-NIGHT'S PROGRAM

An Attractive Evening Has Been Arranged

To-night, at Brock Street Rink, will be an attractive one, a combination of events being held which will make the evening most pleasant.

First of all, a hockey match, Brampton vs. Electrics, from 6 to 9.30 o'clock, skating from after the game to 12.15. Skating out the old and in the New Year. Band Concerts all the way. Kitchener Club will sell sandwiches and coffee.

THE WEATHER

We had the first taste of decidedly cold weather this morning, when the thermometer stood at 10 degrees below zero about seven o'clock.—W.P.

New Year's Greetings To The Boys At The Front

May New Years morn the Herald be
Of the happy dawn of a lasting peace
When the world shall dwell in amity
And all this cruel strife shall cease—
While we with fervent hearts will pray
May God in Heaven haste that day.

If it is hard to toil—all those who love you
Are thinking of you, and each hour they ask
That the kind all-wise Providence above you
Will glorify your task.

Then here's to "The Day"
And pray may it be soon
When the booming of guns shall cease
And bring to our great Empire
That thrice happy boon
A lasting and far-reaching Peace.
—By Pay Sergt. Abraham, 93rd Battalion.

MANY 93RD MEN ARE AWAY ON THEIR NEW YEAR LEAVE

As a Result There Was Not The Usual Activity Around The Armouries To-day---Sergt. Playford and Bandsman Dyer The Recipients of Presentations---More Supplies Arrive.---To-day's Military News.

Many of the men of the 93rd Battalion are away on New Year's leave to-day from now until next Tuesday, the usual activity around the Armouries will not be so much in evidence. Then the Battalion will get down to hard work in bayonet fighting and other training specialties.

An interesting presentation took place in the dormitory of No. 3 Platoon, 93rd Battalion, at noon, to-day, when Sergt. Jack Playford was presented with a handsome rosewood gold-headed walking stick, suitably inscribed, from the N.C.O's. and men of the platoon. Pte. B. Carpenter read the address which expressed the pride of the platoon in having as their platoon sergeant a soldier of such experience as Sergt. Playford.

Bandsman Reg. Dyer of the 93rd Band, who is to be married to-morrow, was the recipient of a beautiful dinner cutlery set yesterday afternoon from the members of the Band. The gift was a most handsome one.

Battalion Sergt. Major T. Miller of the 93rd Battalion, is confined to his room in the rmouries to-day, suffering from an attack of la grippe.

The Apsley recruits are being fitted out with uniforms from the Quartermaster's stores, here. The prospects for more recruits in that section are very encouraging.

Pte. Nicholas Watson of the 80th Battalion, C.E.F., Belleville, is visiting his father, John Watson, 425 Chambers Street.

SUCCESSFUL DANCE HELD

A very successful dance was given by the young people of the Canadian Kitchener League on Tuesday evening, December 28th in the Conservatory of Music. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion with flags and pennants and about sixty couples danced to the delightful music furnished by Messrs. Moher and Moher. Dainty refreshments were served by the young ladies of the League.

The patronesses were Mesdames Wm. Leahy, F. J. A. Hall, M. Hartley and Kimberley.

The proceeds are being used by the League for patriotic purposes.

TRINITY METHODIST A BEAUTIFUL CHURCH

RICH BUT NOT FLAMBOYANT

Trinity Methodist church is complete with its finishing touches fresh upon it, and in its assembled beauties of architecture and appointments invites its congregation to dedicate it with their worship. It is a rather idle attempt to adequately describe this new home of the congregation which for so many years has gathered in prayer in the old and unpretentious church on Charlotte street. But a few words may convey a general impression of what the materialized plans present.

The site is a lofty and ideal one on the entire Cox block, bounded by Scott street on the north, Reid street on the west, Simcoe street on the south and on the east Rubidge street. With its imposing facade directly looking into Simcoe street which may be imagined as an avenue terminating with the wide flight of stone steps which mount to Trinity's triple doors of the main entrance, the edifice has been most advantageously located.

A modern adaptation of the Gothic style has been followed in the design of this church, which is built entirely of gray Credit Valley stone carefully selected for uniformity of colour. The twin turrets that lead a nice proportion of height are done in Indiana stone which has also been used in the caps, buttresses and other trimmings, and the exterior tone is further harmonized by the dull coloured slate roof.

The entrance from Rubidge street sweeps up boad stone steps with spacious landings and rugged retaining walls to three immense doors. These open upon the vestibule beyond which is the lobby which extends forward almost completely under the gallery. This is a pronounced feature of Trinity church. The lobby floor is red tile. It is enclosed with leaded glass and opens through ample doors into the body of the churrh and toward the gallery stairs.

A happy and soothing effect has been obtained in the interior design and its treatment. The wide spreading arches and the walls are of stucco with ribs and pilasters of white plaster. All the windows are leaded and under them the radiators are hidden by artistic copper screens. Nothing but quartered oak appears in wood work from the gallery to the choir loft, and the entire floor is carpeted in a dull brown colour. The result is a blending of subdued effects creating a composite monotone that immediately appeals to the senses in its cheate beauty and restful influence. Visitors will doubtless be struck by this effect which seems to give a definite promise of permanence. In other words, Trinity's congregation will always be unconsciously reminded of the art of the designers and efficiency of the contractors. There is not a blemish in any direction. The organ's console, for instance, of quartered oak, was made in St. Hyacinthe, Que., by Casavant Freres, but so closely does it harmonize with the shade of the rest of the woodwork made in Dundas that one would have to be informed that they were the products of different factories.

Another very pleasing feature of Trinity are the outside aisles. The shell of the body of the church is of solid stone to a particular line on the north and south side from which it makes a departure and is carried downwards in heavy piers.

The aisle on each side of the church is contained within an outer stone wall built up a considerable distance and covered in by a pent roof to the clear torey. It requires technical exactitude to explain the method by which

AN ALL ROUND IMPROVEMENT IN ALLIES' POSITION

No Military Events of The First Importance During Past Week But News From Russian Front Is Very Encouraging.

TAY PAY'S SUMMARY

(Copyright by Central News, 1915—By T. P. O'Connor)

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Although there have been no military events of the first importance during the last week, news from various points indicates an all-round improvement in the Allies' position. The veil of silence that shrouded the situation on the Russian front for nearly three weeks, owing to the breakdown of the Russo-Turkish telegraphs, is now lifted. It discloses the German armies suffering severely from the rigors of an exceptional winter. Men have been invalided by thousands owing to frost bite, despite ingenious precautions, and the fact that their spells in the trenches have been reduced considerably.

The Russians, acclimatised to these conditions, are steadily strengthening their lines everywhere. Their new army of two millions is now almost fully equipped and equipped as well as the Germans, themselves. Munitions are at last beginning to arrive in satisfactory quantities, so that the Russian generals are no longer obliged to restrict the allowance. When the Russian offensive comes the artillery will prove a decisive factor.

Meantime the Austro-Germans show reluctance to begin attack on the Allies at Salonica, though the delay increases the difficulties of the task. The explanation of the delay is the Bulgars' refusal to participate in the expedition without assurance of further territorial advantages, which Germany is unable or unwilling to give. Another and more probable reason is the Kaiser's fear of the entrance of the Bulgars into Greek territory will cause the Greeks to join the Allies. This possibility is substantially increased by the results of the Greek elections. The electors are still strongly Venizelosts.

The outstanding fact in the situation is that Germany and Austria, themselves, do not appear to have sufficient men to undertake the enterprise, unaided. This is the first direct evidence that the man supply of the Central Empires is giving out.

The development of conscription as a domestic trouble is regrettable as diverting the mind of the country, but in no way affects the national determination to carry on the war to a triumphant conclusion at all costs. Every day sees increased confidence in the final result. Even the adoption of conscription is not without compensation in that itself it is evidence to the world of this very determination.

The position of affairs in the House of Commons is very mixed. The resolution to carry on the war and the certainty of ultimate victory do not grow less strong, but stronger. Yet, by a paradox, the feelings of pessimism and criticism becomes not less, but more rampant. The political course of the war, like that of most wars, is the same as existed in the Civil War of the United States. Reverses both of diplomacy and warfare, such as have occurred in the

FRIDAY, DEC. 31, 1915

A WORD OF GREETING.

There is no change in passing from the old year to the new. The flow of time is continuous; the same burden of responsibility, and the same promise of blessing shine upon us in spite of all changes in the calendar. The missed opportunities, the neglected duties of the one are as points of warning for the other. We have had, in one sense a hard year, but we have bravely, in the main, met its buffets; and with trust in the spirit of our people, and in the righteousness of our cause, we can face the future still bravely, and can do much in our mutual relations, and in our mutual efforts, to make come true, the wish The Examiner most heartily extends to all its readers—

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

INTERCESSION SUNDAY.

By divine command transmitted to us through an imperial source, the King-Emperor, through a vice-regal source,—the Governor-General, and, locally through "our spiritual pastors and masters," Sunday, Jan. 2, is to be observed in all the churches as a day of intercession and prayer, in the interests of our Empire's cause, and the cause of humanity.

If our belief in God and his supreme power in the governance of things, were as soul-deep as it is mind-deep — if our belief in religion and its verities were as spiritual as it is intellectual, the call to prayer and intercession in our city churches on Sunday would fill them with waves of devout humanity. We make much boast of our belief in God and religion We strive mightily with the arm of flesh to make them overcoming forces in the great struggle in the world to-day. We believe in them with all our heart, if employing all our physical forces to make them triumph, means belief. But the moment we are called upon to use God's way, prayer; we show cynical unbelief—we assent with our minds—but we don't believe in our hearts — we don't pray—we leave that to ministers and women. Why, if our belief is real—is sincere — should we not trust in prayer, and ask God, who makes what he will prevail, to fight for us. The most monstrous inconsistency in humanity, is theoretical belief in God and religion, and practical disbelief in God and prayer. Tennyson in his Death of Arthur, puts these golden words into the mouth of the passing Knight:

More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men, better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life, within the brain,
If knowing God they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by gold chains around the feet of God.

If we believe in our religion; if we believe in the essence of its practice, shall we not bind God to our side? If in theory we believe in God, and in practice disbelieve in prayer, what do we believe in anyway?

"How is it you always back the winner?" "A friend gives me 'tips'." "I see, and you follow his advice?" "Certainly not! I always back another horse."

A BIG INSURANCE MERGER

The Sun Life Acquires The Manufacturers Life Which Was Controlled by The Gooderham Family

The recent announcement that the Sun Life has taken over the Manufacturers Life came as a surprise, for so quietly had the negotiations been put through that few outside of those directly interested were aware that negotiations were under way. The move is one which will benefit all concerned. Captain Ross Gooderham, who has been the active head of the Manufacturers Life for some time will be relieved of all anxiety as to its future, and will pursue his military career with no anxieties as to the policyholders and shareholders of a life company which was founded by the Gooderham family and controlled by them since its inception. The merging of the company into the Sun Life will make for economy of administration from which the policy holders will greatly benefit, and at the same time the Sun Life will benefit by a large amount of desirable ready-made business.

The Manufacturers Life had a paid up capital of $300,000, with total assets of upward of $19,000,000. Of the total capital stock the Gooderham family controlled a majority, Capt Gooderham himself being credited with 7,511 shares out of a total of 15,000 shares. Founded by the late Mr. George Gooderham, father of Capt Ross Gooderham, the Manufacturers Life had as its first president the late Sir John A. Macdonald, and its first manager was J. R. Carlile. For a number of years the Manufacturers in common with a great many new life insurance companies, had its troubles, from which it fortunately emerged later on owing to more efficient management.

The union means not only strength, but means also a lower ratio, and greater profits to the policy-holders of both companies. The Manufacturers policy-holders are particularly well cared for by the agreement. Each one will receive from the Sun Life a certificate of guarantee, directly assuming all liability under his particular policy. In the distribution of surplus, the abstainers' section of the Manufacturers is to be treated as a separate class, as heretofore. The expense ratio of the Manufacturers Company has averaged over 30 per cent. of the premium income. The Sun agrees to manage this business for 10 per cent., and its existing organization enables it readily to do this. The result is an annual saving of over 20 per cent. The profits paid by the Manufacturers in its ordinary branch have averaged, perhaps, 65 per cent. of those paid on similar policies by the Sun Life. The profits to the Manufacturers policyholders are to be at once raised to not less than 80 per cent. of the Sun Life scale, and in a very short time they will be placed on full equality with policies of the Sun Life.

The shareholders of the Manufacturers Life will receive the amount of their paid-up capital, $300,000, and the amount to which they are entitled up to Dec. 31, 1915, as provided by the Insurance Act. They will continue to participate in the profits of the business of the Manufacturers Life for a further period of three or four years. And in addition they will also share with the policy-holders in the saving of expense, but only to the extent of 17 1-2 per cent. for one year, these amounts not being definitely ascertainable until after the books of the company are closed on Dec. 31st next.

As soon as the necessary clerical and actuarial work can be completed each policyholder and shareholder will receive a full statement and particulars of the agreement.— Toronto Saturday Night.

Ennismore Council By Acclamation

For Reeve—
William H. Crough.
Edward Corkery.

For Councillors—
Daniel Holland.
James Guiry.
Patrick Y. Crowley.
Michael Perdue.
Clayton Telford.
Daniel Cavanagh.
Edward O'Donoghue.

The following have signed a resignation, viz:
Edward Corkery, Reeve.

Something Deeper.

"Willie," said an interesting mother to her first-born, "do you know what the difference is between body and soul The soul, my child, is what you love with; the body carries you about. This is your body," touching the little fellow's shoulder; "but you know, my child, there is something deeper in. You can feel it now. What is it?"

"Oh, I know," said Willie with a flash of intelligence in the eyes, "that's my flannel shirt."

A FEW OTHER REASONS WHY THE PARK IS A "GOOD BUY"

For a Payment of 19 Cents a Year on Every $1000 of Assessment We Get a Property That Brings The City Many Times The Payment While The Payment is Going on and When That is Completed a Regular Revenue Will be Received.

The Ratepayer has only to do a little thinking to convince himself that voting for the Purchase of the Exhibition Grounds is a duty—to himself—to the city—to the best interests, the material advantage and profit of the city and its good name for progress and enterprise.

First the purchase is a necessity; that is if we are to continue to have an Exhibition, or wish to have an Exhibition, worthy of the city; and a source of profit and trade and money advantage to the city.

If from lack of grounds and lack of ownership we are compelled to worry on with the present unsatisfactory exhibition, or possibly none at all, it will be admitted that it is unsatisfactory, though the present directors have done wonders under the tremendous handicap of no buildings and conveniences.

Adequate buildings can only be provided if the grounds are bought.

The only way open now is to have the city purchase the grounds.

The grounds at the price asked—$30,000 for thirty acres in the heart of the city — the only available site, are splendid value for the money. The ratepayers are asked to make the purchase as an investment.

What will be the returns from the investment? We shall have the possibility for a first class exhibition—

An exhibition that will not only be a credit to the city's good name, but have a large money value.

If by buying the grounds we can be assured of the best exhibition in Middle Ontario,

We shall attract thousands of visitors, and the city will have every year the benefit of the spending of thousands of dollars in the city, that will be infinitely greater than the small annual payment.

The price is reasonable, and the annual payments reduced to $2,207, which is the reduction of the by-law payment by the withdrawal of the city's annual grant of $600.

This payment will not be burdensome. It will only amount to an addition of 19 cents to every $1,000 of assessment.

And every foot of city property will be made more valuable, by the advantages the purchase will provide.

For a payment of 19 cents per $1,000 of assessment each year the city will become the owner of the most valuable, and the only remaining open space of property in the city. For this small payment—by paying $3.80 cents for each thousand of assessment spread over twenty years—we shall have a splendid property owned by the city with numerous advantages.

We shall be assured of a first-class exhibition—something we must have if the city is to keep its name for enterprise.

It is no matter of guess work that a first-class exhibition, will every year, brng in money value to the city—in outside money spent in the city—thousands of times greater than the annual payment.

Then in addition we should absolutely own an exhibition park, of location and area, unsurpassed in any city of Ontario of our size.

It will practically cost us nothing—for the money profits of greater exhibitions — increased business in the city, will be worth many times every year what we pay for the property.

We shall have a recreation park infinitely superior to anything we now have in the city.

Our parks have cost us nothing, and the Exhibition park will not be an exception.

When we sum the matter up it will have been paid for by outsiders—the money left with us by exhibition visitors, will amount in twenty years to twenty times what the property costs.

Then when the purchase is completed the Exhibition park will pay the city revenue—the Exhibition people will pay back to the city the surplus from annual exhibition—Toronto gets back from $50,000 to $60,000 a year from the National—and there is no doubt that the greatly improved exhibitions, made possible in Peterborough, will result in annual payments of surplus of from $1,500 to $2,0000 a year, equal to the interest at six per cent. upon the $30,000 cost.

Some may say the property is too valuable for park purposes. So much the better for us—so much the better the bargain we are making.

When we consider all the advantages in money and business improvement the ownership of the grounds will give the city, it seems that an annual payment of 19 cents per thousand of assessment is an easy way to buy a great good.

In London the Great, where land is the most valuable on earth, there are hundreds of parks totalling 5,000 acres. There are in the heart of London two parks—Hyde Park and Regent's park, containing 835 acres surrounded by land that could not be bought if it were covered with guineas.

From the first year it will be a money-maker, and with an improved exhibition, bring thousands of dollars to the city to be spent among our business men and benefit the whole city.

If we want to make Peterborough an exhibition centre—if we want to make our city a centre of attraction for business, we can't afford to let slip the chance to buy the Exhibition Grounds.

When we can make the purchase at the low payment of 19 cents on a $1,000 of assessment, we can't afford not to do it.

We must do a little looking ahead. We must show enterprise and public spirit. A very small price to pay for so large a gain.

WHY ATHLETES GO STALE

Hours of Training Found to Be Bad for Them

The question of short versus long periods of practice in training the human muscles for any particular kind of work is obviously one having far-reaching application.

Some interesting experiments on this subject were carried out by Dr. K. S. Lashley, of Johns Hopkins university. Acquisition of skill in archery was selected as the subject of observation. Twenty untrained persons were divided into three groups. One group shot five arrows with the English onghow per day; another twenty shots per day; and the third, forty shots. The results showed conclusively that the group shooting only five times a day impraved in accuracy with less expenditure of time in practice than was requested by either of other groups for the same amount of improvement. A report on the experiments says: "The relatively great efficiency of shot periods of practice continuing for many days is in accordance with the results of the story of animals and of speech habits in men, the length of practice periods required is usually too great for maxi-

Bantamweights Are Always Real Scrappers

The most valuable goods often come in small packages, and this is certainly true of boxers. Although the bantamweight division is not what it used to be, yet the fact remains that the little fellows of to-day usually give better exhibitions of true fighting spirit than the larger men. And it always has been so. When Lynch, the first of the little scrappers to gain fame in America, went over to England nearly 60 years ago and fought George Holden, Dan Harrington and Sam Finighty under London rules with bare fists, he displayed the tigerish ferocity which has since been a characteristic of the majority of the bantams. Lynch was called a featherweight, but he fought at 112 pounds. In fact, all the featherweights up to the time Ike Weir and Tommy Warren fought for the title in Minneapolis in 1897, at 117 pounds, were what are now called bantamweights, while the limit of the latter division was 105 pounds.

Of the modern bantamweights, beginning with George Dixon a quarter of a century ago, perhaps the best example of the fighting spirit which animates the breasts of the little fellows was afforded by Jimmy Barry, of Chicago. New Yorkers will deny this, and will award the palm to Terry McGovern, who became king of the bantams after Barry had retired, but if TTerrible Terry could have fought the Windy City boy when both were at their best, it is not at all certain that the Brooklynite would have triumphed. Certainly the result would have been the most cyclonic mill in ring history.

It was just 17 years ago yesterday that Jimmy Barry made his last appearance in the squared circle, which was at Davenport, Ia., on Dec. 29, 1898. On that occasion Barry fought Casper Leon, the game little Sicilian, for 20 rounds to a draw. Barry became the acknowledged king of the bantams in 1894, when he whipped Leon in 25 rounds at Lamont, Ill. After that he fought Leon five times, each battle ending in a draw. After the Davenport session Barry decided to quit while the quitting was good, and announced his retirement from the ring.

Barry was a native of Chicago, where he was born in 1870. Incidentally, three other claimants of the bantamweight title, Harry Harris, Harry Forbes and Johnny Coulon, were Windy City boys. In one of Eden Phillpott's novels an orphan boy, when asked his name, replied that it was 'Tiger,' and explained that it was because he "was so fierce." Early in his career Barry was dubbed 'Tiger' for exactly the same reason. He was a graduate of McGurn's place, a favourite resort of the boxers in the days when Chicago was on the pugilistic map. At McGurn's a fight was a fight, and not a dancing lesson, and in that hard school Barry became a ravening tiger, with all the characteristics of a striped feline which had been fed on raw meat. Harry Gilmore, who claimed the lightweight title until he was whipped by Jack McAuliffe in 1887, took Jimmy under his pinions and gave him the finishing touches in boxing science and ring generalship. Barry usually confined his ferocity to business hours, and was amiable and a good fellow immediately a fight was over, but there was one notable exception. A boxer he had licked refused to shake hands, and the enraged Jimmy, aroused by this defiance of professional etiquette, sailed into him with the raw 'uns, until the fellow was glad enough to shake the victor's paw. Barry went through his entire career without taking a beating, and retired undefeated, although Harry Harris gave him a close call, and several others held him to draws.

Britain Has Good Reason for Seizure of German Mails

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—It is authoritatively stated that the State Department is seriously considering the effect upon American rights of the seizure by the British Government of American mail taken from steamships to and from this country, and will make representations to the British Government in these cases.

Unofficial information has reached Washington to the effect that in making these seizures the British Government is endeavouring to recover Belgian securities which the German Government is understood to have sent by mail for delivery in this country to be hypothecated. An equally interesting angle of the British mail seizures was the disclosure here to-day that in quarters close to the German Embassy fear is entertained that important diplomatic documents destined for Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador at Washington, from the Berlin Foreign Office at Berlin, may have been included in the batch of mail seized.

Curses do not always land where they are sent.

A RUMOR DENIED

Look Out For Roorbacks—There Will Be None From Green's Committee Room

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have heard a rumour on the street to-day to the effect that the wages of the workingmen were cut in 1915 while I was chairman of the Board of Works.

I wish to say that so far as I am aware no workingman's wages was cut during 1915 while I was chairman of the Board of Works. What may have occurred and what may have led to this rumour is this: In one or two cases where a man was put at a class of work that was found to be too heavy for him, the foreman has changed his job and given him lighter work, and his wages were graded according to the Engineer's schedule.

If what I say is not true I will donate one hundred dollars to any patriotic institution in the city that may be named by the party proving the contrary.

Yours truly,
G. Walter Green.

THANKS FROM THE BOYS AT THE FRONT

The Peterborough Progressive Club received the following letter this morning.

Somewhere in Belgium
14. 12. 15.

Mrs. G. Stewart Cameron.
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Madam:—

A splendid bale of socks arrived to-day and they look like very good ones, there is such a big difference between the machine made and the home made sock and here is where we find it out, it takes good wool to stand the constant wetting and drying out again.

I thank the Peterborough Progressive Club very much indeed on behalf of my men who I assure you appreciate the kind thought that prompted the gift, and who realize the amount of work there is in such things. Kindly express to the Club our thanks and assure them that their kindness is indeed thoroughly appreciated,.

Yours sincerely,
S. M. GRAY,
Major and O. C.

A Christmas card from the officers N. C. O's and men of No. 3 Company 21st Canadian Battalion was also received.

The Club wishes to gratefully acknowledge the receipt of $25.00 from the Cheese Board and $5.00 from Grafton and Co,. Ltd.

WEDDING BELLS

WELCH—MYERS.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized in All Saints' church at 7.30 o'clock Dec. 24, 1915, by the Rev. R. B. Grobb of Miss Ida F. Myers to Mr. Percy R. Welch, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Welch of Otonabee. The bride was assisted by Miss Hilda Welch and the groom was supported by Pte. W. F. McWilliams of the 23rd Battalion. The young couple will reside in Otonabee.

RICE—ARMOUR.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. G. S. Armour, when her eldest daughter, Gertrude May Elizabeth was united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Mr. Arthur T. Rice of Kingston. The ceremony took place at 7.45 p.m., December 30th. The Rev. Mr. Mackenzie officiated. After a dainty repast the bride and groom left on the 9 p.m. train for Kingston where they will reside. The couple were unattended.

READY FOR THE RECEPTION

Everything is in readiness for the reception of Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben to-night at the S. A. Temple. They will arrive at 8.45 from Montreal and will be the guests of Fire Chief and Mrs. Howard. An open air meeting at 7.30, at the corner of Hunter and George Streets, will be the first shot of the three-days' campaign. The welcome meeting will be at eight o'clock and after a short interval the Watch Night service will commence at 10.30, to be conducted by Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben.

To-morrow night at 8 o'clock the Brigadier will give his renowned lecture, "Trophies of Grace." Everybody is invited to all of these services.

DIPLOMATIC RETORT.

The drill sergeant was real mustard, and the recruits were having a bad time of it.

The weather had been very wet and the parade ground was still slippery. In doing a movement smartly, as an example to his men, the sergeant slipped and fell full sprawl, and naturally the "rookies" could hardly repress their mirth.

Getting up with all the dignity he could muster, the sergeant's eye fell on Murphy's grinning face. "Well, you grinning jesus!" he roared. "What's making you? Do you see anything funny?"

"No, sur," gurgled Murphy meekly; "but, shure, Oi was just thinkin' what a laugh we cud have had if it had been anyone else save yerself, sergeant!" —London Answers.

HOW THE WAR HITS ENGLAND.

War has cruelly bereaved a well known Cheshire family. Mr. John Loring, of Doddington Cottage, Nantwich, in October of last year, lost his brother, Lieut.-Colonel Walter Loring, who fell while gloriously leading a charge of the 2nd Warwicks in France; in the December another brother, Major Charles Loring, 37th Lancers, Indian Army, died near Givenchy. Now comes news that a third brother, Captain William Loring, Scottish Horse, has died on a hospital ship from wounds received in Gallipoli and has been buried at sea. Apart from these Mr. John Loring has lost a son and two cousins in the war, while his eldest son, Capt. E. J. Loring, has been wounded twice.

A combination ladder, step ladder and staging has been invented, mainly to aid in picking fruit.

By treating them with certain grapes a Frenchman has succeeded in keeping eggs fresh for ten months.

Election of New Township Representatives Leaves a Doubt Re Patriotic Grants

When the County Council was visited by the numerous deputation representative of rural ratepayers and was urged to make a generous contribution to the Patriotic Fund the individual reeves were then assured that at the next elections they would not be called to account for this expenditure. The sentiment of that deputation appeared to be the sentiment of the whole county; and it was pitched in the same lofty key that swelled and still re-echoes throughout the entire country. It was a gratuitous endorsation, previously announced, of whatever decision the Council reached. It exhibited a splendid spirit at the time, but the complete election returns on Monday next will reveal the extent to which the feeling obtained.

Reeves have been returned by acclamation already, and perhaps it might be observed that this fact removes all doubts, if there were any, of the opinions of the electors in those townships. Mr. Charles Coben, of Galway and Cavendsh, has been returned without opposition. It will be remembered that he united the Council, when it was divided on the amount of the contribution, by commencing the National Anthem. Mr. Anderson of Otonabee, Mr. Crough of Ennismore, and Mr. Walsh of Douro have also been re-elected by acclamation. During the past year Otonabee decided to raise $15,000. Turning to the reverse side, Smith and North Monaghan Councils provided for donations to the British Red Cross to be raised by a tax of one mill on their assesments. The reeve and deputy-reeve of each of these townships are members of the County Council. All four of these men have a fight on their hands for re-election. Reeve Shaw of Harvey, has for some reason retired from the municipal field, and Reeve Bullied of Chandos has opposition. Harvey, by the way, is not a wealthy township, but its Council during the year displayed a most commendable patriotic zeal, and in its contributions would be accorded a premier place in comparison with the rest of the county. Reeve Shaw reflected in the County Council's discussion of a war grant the spirit that apparently swayed the township Council of Harvey.

In reviewing the election situation in those sections of the county the promise of the aforementioned deputation is recalled. At the same time it has been stated that the question of township expenditure during the year has been introduced and magnified by some persons, notwithstanding the general impression that the various councils have husbanded their resources in view of the financial situation. Enquiries have elicited the opinion that in none of these townships has there been unusual expenditure apart from patriotic grants. Councillors of Smith and Monaghan state that during the past year no special work has been undertaken. They admit, of course, that the British Red Cross contribution added an extra mill to the tax bills. In brief, the Empire's extremity touched its ultimate units.

If the ratepayers of the various townships where elections are being held replace their reeves, and even their Councils, it is felt that they should, in some way, indicate that the changes are in no way connected with the patriotic levies self-imposed by their representatives of the past year. This sentiment springs from a recollection of the public meetings in the townships at which patriotic contributions were discussed and endorsed. It is strengthened by the promises, on those occasions and at the meeting of the County Council, of continued support to the municipal representatives. And it does not disregard vague rumours that not a few ratepayers were objecting to the contributions.

If the ratepayers of the townships wish to remove their present representatives for stated reasons, let those reasons be widely stated lest the suspicion be formed that the change is prompted by sinister objections to the patriotic contributions. That is the opinion expressed by a number of prominent residents of the county during the past week. The reason is self-evident. The Councils were assured at rather small meetings which claimed to represent the countryside that their actions would be upheld. Hence, a defeat for these men on Monday might be readily misunderstood by the rest of the county.

Furthermore, the townships have manifested their desire to share the burdens of the Empire, and it is generally felt that further demands may be made this year. But new reeves and deputy reeves will find little encouragement, in the very fact of their elections, to continue this patriotic duty from the point where it was suspended by the 1915 officials. Hence, to reiterate the caution, the townships that defeat their municipal representatives of 1915 should take the pains to safeguard the honour of their respective communities, and to protect and encourage the new patriotic spirit Peterborough County has splendidly developed during the past year.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The public in general is cordially invited to visit the Y.M.C.A. Building on New Year's Day, the following schedule being carried out:

Morning, 10-12: Boys of the city, members and non-members alike, are invited to participate in gymnasium games, and swim in the plunge. Afternoon, from 3-5.30: The Ladies' Auxiliary will receive in the lobby, serving light refreshments to the Association visitors. In the evening, at 7 o'clock there will be a bowling contest between a team picked from the C.G.E. men and the leading bowlers of the other league teams. It is expected that this will be a spirited contest with plenty of fireworks. At eight o'clock in the gymnasium there will be a basket ball game between the George street Methodist boys and St. John's Anglican team. At nine o'clock another game will follow between the Bankers and the Collegiates. Both of the games will be very interesting and each team will be supported by a number of rooters. The billiards and bowling will be free throughout the entire day. The bowlers, about whom the following rhyme is written, will be seen in action to-morrow evening:

Who's the fellow with the speed like the winds,
Who busted the cushions and split the pins?
Who sometimes got strikes, frequently splits,
And lost C.G.E. games when the king pin he missed?

It is desired that friends of the Association who have not inspected the building changes will take advantage of the privileges offered on New Year's Day. The Captains of the Membership canvass teams have agreed to continue the membership effort until the 15th of Jan., in view of the fact that many of our men have been unable to pay their fees before the 1st of Jan. It is hoped that every member who can do so will pay his renewal by the evening of Jan. 1 so that they may be credited to 1915.

Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock supper will be served to the membership, canvass workers and all members who propose to enter the senior gymnasium class. Men who will accept this invitation will please notify the Y. office not later than Monday noon. The officers of the association wish every young man in Peterborough, the members of the 93rd Battalion and all friends who have so generously supported us during 1915, a very Happy and Prosperous New Year.

A meeting of the bowlers will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Those who are interested are invited to be present.

EXAMINER CALENDAR DELIVERED TO-MORROW

The newsboys will deliver the 1916 Examiner calendar to-morrow, thereby providing the new leaf you will doubtless turn over. Many of the boys probably missed few papers during the year and youth appreciates any acknowledgment of its merits. It has been customary to give the deserving boys some little reward and they will of course appreciate anything in this form received to-morrow.

Green Is Easily The Labor Candidate

Working Men! Don't These Facts Speak For Themselves:

According to the figures in the Treasurer's Office, the following is a summary of the amount paid out for LABOR on City Works during 1915:—

Pavements	$62,936.00
Sidewalks	5,962.00
Sewers	9,750.00
Outfall Sewer	23,442.00
Bonaccord St. Bridge	990.00
Board of Works	23,000.00
Street Sprinkling	1,361.00
Snow Clearing	2,350 00
TOTAL LABOR	$129,791.00

An additional $4000 might be added to the above amount for the labor expended on the manufacture of lumber and pipe.

This amount is equivalent to 65550 days of labor at an average Wage of $1.98 per day. It would also be fair to add $2000 more for lumber and pipe.

If it was spread over the whole year it would mean over 200 men employed each day of the year at $1.98 per day.

Surely the Chairman of the Board of Works, Ex-Alderman G. Walter Green, can claim more credit in connection with the labor engaged for this expenditure than Mr. Hartley.

LITERARY RAMBLES

One of the most important sections of the Library and one that requires unremitting care to keep up to a proper standard, is that which is devoted more especially to the children. As is to be expected, it is one that shows more signs of dilapidation than any other, not because children are more careless in their treatment of the volumes, but because it is undeniably the one that is the most frequently resorted to of any section in the Library. It is noticeable, however, that whilst there are very many good and instructive books taken out by juveniles, there are certain classes that are very rarely handled; their covers are as bright to-day as when they were purchased months and months ago, and it is for the purpose of drawing attention to the splendid quality of these books that this article is written.

Starting with Geography, there is a very readable series of books entitled "Peeps at Many Lands." These give an epitome an intelligible description of the features of the various countries, of their chief points of interest, as well as the general characteristics of the inhabitants. There is nothing deep or bevond the capacity of the ordinary childish intellect to grasp. They are just the sort of books for a mother to read aloud to her children. As there are very few mothers who seem to take any interest in the Juvenile section of the Library, perhaps through insufficient knowledge of the whereabouts of the children's books, it is as well to bring this point clearly to their notice.

Then there is a series of Biographies which is eminently suited to the same purpose. Canadian children are like children of other nationalities, and there is nothing that is more calculated to fire their youthful ard our than a description of the methods by which so many of the great national heroes achieved greatness. It is not at all likely, however, that of their own free will and accord they will pick these books for themselves from the Library. The titles do not appeal to them. But there is one sure way of awakening their interest, and that is by reading aloud to them.

Then there is a very compact and interesting series of Biographies, dealing with historical characters, such as Oliver Cromwell, Napoleon Bonaparte, and Joan of Arc, as well as stories of the Crusades, Stories from Roman History, and stories of the Vikings. Every one of these is written in a manner calculated to arouse and keep the interest of young people. There are other little tales, too, like the story of Barbarossa, otherwise the great King Frederick of Germany. How many know the legend associated with his name? Many have heard of him, but have placed him in the same category as the great heroes of the Scandinavian epics. Barbarossa was a living entity like ourselves, and one of the great heroes of the Crusades. The legend that sprang up concerning him has been indiscriminately attached to many other heroes of mediaeval times, amongst others to Charlemagne, King Arthur, Mansur, the insurgent Moslem, who preached a more tolerant form of Mohammedanism, and was imprisoned in a mountain for his pains; Desmond, of Ireland, and Sebastian I. of Brazil. Children love legends, and they would like to be told about Barbarossa: how he never died, but is still sleeping in a castle in Thurlingia, waiting till the fulness of time to release Germany from her bondage, and give her the foremost place in all the world. It may be that the present Emperor William, steeped in superstition as he is, looks upon himself as the incarnation of the great King.

A list of Juvenile books was published in the papers a few days ago. A new list is published in to-day's issue, and it is one that is calculated to interest all children who are fond of reading.

NORTH MONAGHAN FINANCES EXPLAINED

Mr. Mcintosh ShowsW here Some of The Taxes Went

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— When the North Monaghan Council took office January first, 1915, they found a deficit of $1,200.00 and had previously been told there was no deficit. The 1915 Council has paid this deficit, paid $800.00 local relief and conducted the business of the township on 4 mills on the dollar. It cost about 1 1-4 mills to pay the overdraft of the year previous.

We have endeavoured in 1915 to get the finances of the township back into shape and have not wasted a cent of the township's money. If there had been no deficit from the year previous we could have paid the local relief of $800.00 and run the business of the township on 2 3-4 mills.

I do not thing the electors of North Monaghan desire to go back again to the period of deficits. The Council of 1915 has given me every assistance in the proper conduct of the township's affairs, on sane and safe principles.

Wishing you all a very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,
John McIntosh.

THE CONTEST IN SMITH

An Economical Reeve For The Township

Sir.—Mr. Scott, one of the aspirants is going to lessen the expenses of municipal government in so far as representative is concerned. In his appeal to the people at the nomination he stated that the Council recklessly appointed a man chairman of the Roads and Bridges who got on the train 40 miles from town at "Coboconk," thereby necessitating heavy travelling expenses.

This same man 40 miles from town who got on the train at "Coboconk," was chairman of the House of Refuge committee, and he claimed as fees and travelling expenses, $43.80 for the year.

Mr. Scott, who lives 5 miles from Peterborough was chairman of the House of Refuge committee one year and he received for his claim for fees and travelling expenses $120.10.

In his canvas he has humbly confessed that he has changed his way of going and if elected will work cheaper, probably for nothing.

Council Met as a Court of Revision to Hear Complaints Respecting The Special Assessment Levied For Sidewalks

The North Monaghan council met as a court of revision for sidewalks at the Court House Dec. 28, at 2 p.m., to hear and determine any errors or complaint in the special assessment prepared in connection with the sidewalks recently completed on the south side of McGill street, on the west side of Monaghan Road, from Frank street to Chamberlen street, and on the north side of Chamberlen street to the western limit of lot No. 8; on the west side of the Monaghan Road from Chamberlen street to a point 120 feet south of Brown street, and on the south side of Brown street from the Monaghan Road to High street, as a local improvement.

Reeve McIntosh was in the chair and all the members of the council were present. Mr. Peck, the township solicitor, also was present.

The special assessment for the above sidewalks were then read and fully discussed by the court. No appeals having been made the following motion was made by Messrs Rye and Robson. 'That the special assessment prepared for sidewalks be accepted and confirmed."—Carried.

Moved by Bell and Robson, that the court adjourn and that council proceed to pass by-laws in connection with the above mentioned sidewalks.—Carried.

By-law 719 authorizing the municipality to borrow $7,661.99 upon debentures to pay for the sidewalks on the south side of McGill street as a local improvement was given three readings and passed.

By-law 720 authorizing the municipality to borrow $343.10 upon debentures to pay for sidewalk on west side of Monaghan Road from Chamberlen street to a point 120 feet south of Brown street, was formally passed.

By-law 721 to provide for the borrowing of $620.92 upon debentures to pay for the sidewalk on south side of Brown street from the Monaghan Road to High street, as a local improvement, was passed.

By-law 723, to provide for the borrowing of $294.65 upon debentures to pay for sidewalk on the west side of Monaghan Road from Frank street to Chamberlen street, and along the north side of Chamberlen street from the Monaghan Road to the eastern limit of Lot No. 8, plan 35, as a local improvement, was passed.

By-law 722, to consolidate the sums authorized to be borrowed by certain local improvement by-laws into one sum of $2,-.16 and to borrow the same by the issue of debentures, was passed.

By-law 718, appointing deputy returning officers and poll clerks for 1916, was passed.

Miss A. B. Crawford came before the council and presented a letter re fence viewers' expenses, $6. The clerk explained that the fence viewers had consulted the solicitor and had acted on his advice.

Reeve McIntosh informed Miss Crawford that council could not take any action.

A bill was presented from W. J. Byers for groceries re charity for the month of June for $6.66. This account was ordered to be paid.

Mr. Norman Wilson complained that St. Georges' church had been assessed for 3 lots while they only had 1. Mr. Wilson did not think this property used for church purposes should be assessed.

Mr. Victor Wilson asked for remission of taxes on a house that has been vacant for quite a long time. On motion of Robson and Rye the complaints were referred to the township solicitor.

Mr. Israel Payne complained about being assessed too high, namely $2,600 for 64 lots. Mr. Payne stated that the revenue derived from the property would not pay the taxes. He also stated that he did not know for what amount he was assessed, as he had not received a schedule. No action was taken.

On motion of Messrs. Rye and Robson, the following sidewalk bills were passed and ordered to be paid:

E. A. Peck, solicitor's fees, $46.
H. B. Rye, inspection, $36.
B. Johnston, examining lists, etc., $21.
John McIntosh, court of revision, $5.
J. H. Forster, court of revision, $3.
Wm. Robson, court of revision, $3.
J. H. Bell, court of revision, $3.
H. B. Rye, court of revision, $3.
B. Johnston, court of revision, $5

Following is the cost per foot of sidewalks recently constructed: McGill street, 87c; Monaghan Road, 75c; corner of Monaghan Road and Chamberlen street, 56c; south side of Brown street, 46c.

Two Beautiful Windows.

Two beautiful coloured windows strike the eye of the visitor. One is immediately over the main entrance, and from the inside is seen above the gallery. It is a representation of the Ascension of Christ and is shown in four sections within the huge stone frame. This is the only window in the city that is set in a stone, the usual material being a metal. The stone is ornately cut, contributing a grand setting to this splendid window, the gift of Mr. H. C. Cox in memory of his parents, the late Senator and Mrs. Geo. A. Cox. The congregation of Trinity church is deeply indebted to the benefactions of the Cox family, and in this sublime picture against the sky the family will always be lovingly remembered.

The other window represents Christ blessing the little children when He said, "Suffer the Little Children to Come Unto Me." It is in the south transcept and was donated by Mr. W. G. Morrow in memory of his parents. It is an inspiring theme with lovely colours, which in this morning's sun cast their radiant hues across the church vault.

On the north west end of the church is the vestry with a separate entrance for the pastor. Its furnishings have been donated by Mrs. A. Parker's Bible class. The basement has been turned into a wide supper room and it is understood that permanent Sunday school quarters are to be provided in an annex to be built to the south west corner of the church.

Mr. Wm. Langford has been the contractor and his work speaks eloquently for him. It is not the first he has erected in Peterborough, but it certainly is one of the finest, if not the best he has performed. Burke, Horwood and White of Toronto were the architects. Adamson and Dobbin had the heating contract, Brenton the plumbing, Alexander and Miller the wiring, and lighting, ad Alex. McLeod the slating. Mr. A. Webb was foreman of the stone work.

Trinity church has a seating capacity of 900 and there is no doubt that its capacity will be taxed to the limit at the opening services on Sunday morning, January 2, 1916.

A Hard Job.

One afternoon in the trenches an Irish soldier discovered that one of his company was wearing a nice new pair of boots.

"How did you manage to get hold of them?" asked Pat, enviously.

"Well," said his friend, "I stole out of the trench last night and found them on a German I killed."

Pat became thoughtful, and that night disappeared. Early next morning he staggered back into the trenches carrying a pair of boots. Making for his friend, he whispered:

"I've had the hardest job of me life. Had to kill about fifty of the blighters before I got a pair to fit me."

Balkans, and elsewhere, have produced their inevitable crop of criticisms, and, of course, the Government is held responsible for everything; it is against the Government that criticism is mainly directed. This force of criticism was brought to an end for a while when the new Coalition Government came into existence, and the Ministers were no longer confronted by a strong body of prominent and responsible opponents, who were ready to take their place. The era of perfect parliamentary reconciliation which was expected to follow this union of party forces has not justified its hopes. Several consequences followed which have brought many parliamentary critics to the opinion that the Coalition, instead of a bond of greater unity, became one of greater dissension. It has been pointed out in several parliamentary debates that as all responsible criticism has come to an end, irresponsible criticism took its place. The character of the irresponsible criticism confirmed these views, for it fell into the hands of men, who, though some of them of considerable abilit, ye never could have held the same authority in the House as men who were the chiefs of parties. Furthermore owing to the censorship and to the drastic retisence of the authorities, this criticism had very often to be ill-informed. It occupied itself with small, instead of big, questions; and, as a whole, it might be summed up as nagging, rather than criticism.

However, the irresponsible opposition has taken a new form and gained undoubtedly greater strength. Its first accession was Sir Edward Carson; that grim, resolute and tenacious figure became willingly or unwillingly the nucleus around which the discordant elements could gather with more strength than in any previous phase. The Morning Post which is a deadly opponent of the present Ministry, and especially of M. Asquith, immediately began to run Sir Edward Carson as the leader of the opposition, and dimly suggested his taking the place of head of the Government. This move, however entirely failed, as it was realized that such a change of ministry could not carry on a war in a Parliamentary atmosphere so hostile. Sir Edward Carson, in addition, did not improve his position by his criticisms of the Ministry he had just left, partly because these erred against the canons of Parliamentary warfare, and partly because his criticisms did not seem to be particularly intelligent.

For a while, then, Sir Edward Carson rather receded. Then came the wholesale defeat of Sir Edward Grey's policy in the Balkans, and the sickening, uncertain hesitation with regard to the Salonika expedition; and criticism once more became strong and powerful. A further chance of strengthening his position came to Sir Edward Carson, when the Government had to propose their Bill for prolonging the life of the present Parliament. This measure had been agreed to by two such powerful leaders of the Conservative party as Mr Bonar Law and Sir F. E. Smith; but Sir Eward Carson, with characteristic tenacity, refused to yield to even so powerful a combination; stirred up a revolt, in the end got some of his terms accepted and pressed for more. He was able to hold practically the first party meeting since the beginning of the war, and the hostility of the old-fashioned Conservatives—especially—to the abolition of the Plural Vote, which gives the wealthy such a voting advantage over the working classes, enabled him to array behind him a considerable number of Conservatives and a great deal of Conservative party feeling. Simultaneously with this, the small group of Radical critics became more vehement, and some of them were quite ready to fall in with the proposal to create what was called a National Opposition. This scheme, however, was prematurely revealed by a Liberal journalist, and as it had very little chance of success at any time dies almost before its birth. The elements, however, of discontent remained, and found strong mouthpieces among the Radical critics. These are headed by Sir Henry Dalziel, Sir Arthur Markham, Mr. Hodge, and Mr. Pringle.

Sir Henry Dalziel is a brilliant journalist with a remarkable career. Born in modest circumstances, he became a young reporter when he was still in his teens; drifted from his native Scotland to the Press Gallery of the House of Commons, and when he was just over twenty-one years of age dashed up to Kirkealdy, a Scotch Constituency, and wrested the nomination for the seat from six or seven other candidates; and while still a mere boy, became a member of the House of Commons. He displayed remarkable ability, with a keen sense of the Parliamentary situation, great readiness of speech and great activity. At that time he and Mr. Lloyd-George were hunting in couples. "with Dalziel a little ahead," as Mr. Lloyd George once said in a reminiscent mood.

But Sir Henry Dalziel soon found other spheres of activity in journalism; by and by dropped a little out of politics, and when he was made a Privy Councillor and a Knight, was assumed to have satisfied his personal ambitions. The war, however, brought him to the front again, and he has been the most fearless and incessant critic of the Government.

Sir Arthur Markham is a very different type. He is a politician rather by accident than by aptitude. Most of his life has been spent in the control of great colleries, and he has displayed in this work a business genius which has made him one of the wealthiest colliery ore proprietors of England. A dark man, with gleaming black eyes and sallow skin and lithe form, he looks more Italian than English. He has a rasping and a blurred voice; snaps out his sentences, and is never afraid to say the most disagreeable things.

Mr. Hodge and Mr. Pringle are Scotchmen, alert, keen, industrious, and vigilant.

Whitmer, and what all these different elemtns will come to, it is impossible to say. The House of Commons is after all, the creature of events in time of war, and changes come in its temper and in its attitude much more from success or failure in battlefields than from circumstances within its own elements. It may be that a surprise will come some day, and the House of Commons will find itself confronted by a catastrophe in the field which will combine all these different influences and produce a combination that must lead to a change of government.

ENTERTAINMENT LAST NIGHT

Annual Event Observed By The Murray Street Baptist Church

The Sunday School of the Murray Street Baptist Church held its annual entertainment last night. Supper was served to the members of the school, after which a splendid programme was given by the different classes of the school. A special feature of the programme was a military tableau given by Rev. Mr. Webbs' class, entitled "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall." This was a splendid spectacle, showing soldiers of the different colonies, Red Cross Nurses, etc. During the evening a cut-glass fern dish was presented, on behalf of the teachers and officers, to Mrs. Harold Foster (nee Nessie Smith), one of the teachers of the school, who was recently married. The Chinese class, consisting of Lee King, Lee Tip, Lee Wie, Lee Toy, Lee Wah, Yee Chue, Lee Tow, Lee Foo, and Charlie Fong, made a presentation to the Sunday School of a Chinese embroidered piano cover and table cover, and to the Church, a Chinese embroidered altar cover. These gifts were presented on behalf of the class by Mr. Pettit, the leader of the class, and Lee King, one of the pupils. The Chinese Class also furnished the Christmas flowers for the Church at last week's services. A special feature of the evening were the gifts of the children, amounting to $36.00, half of which goes to the poor of the Church and the other half to the Belgians. The orchestra of the Sunday School, under the leadership of Mr. Asa Huycke, rendered a number of selections, which were very much enjoyed.

NAVY AND ARMY

Interesting Talk on The War By One Who Knows By Experience

An unusually interesting literary event is to take place on Tuesday evening, January 11th, in the George Street Church. Organizations, representing both George Street and Mark Street Churches have secured the services of Major C. G. Williams, who will lecture on 'The British Navy and the War." The lecturer is the Canadian Secretary of the British Navy League and has been furnished by that organization with slides for his work. Lt.-Col. Johnston will preside.

GREEN A SPENDER

Mr. Green boasts of spending $47,459.88 on the sewer this year, and that is only a starter. He also spent $32,000-00 on other street work—a total of $73,500. This amount does not include the paving. Not so bad for G. Walter? He knows how to spend other people's money and don't you forget it. If you want extravagance and high taxes, G. Walter is the man.

SPECIAL DAY FOR PRAYER

The Ministerial Association of Peterboro Has Arranged For a Week of Prayer

A request has come to us from our beloved Sovereign that we observe the first Sunday of the New Year (Jan. 2nd) as a special day for prayer and intercession on behalf of our Empire and Allies and the cause we represent in the world war.

This of itself should be sufficient to induce all Christian people of our Empire to unite in prayer for the progress and final triumph of our arms and for the blessedness of the world we serve.

"War never was and never can be a matter of force alone." There are invisible and spiritual factors involved which cannot be disregarded or violated without disaster. The prayers of all are therefore as necessary as the more tangible sacrifices if we are to win in this fight.

It is the earnest hope of all the Christian leaders of this city that all who can possibly arrange to do so, will be present at the services of their respective congregations next Lord's day, and contribute their share of intercession for the spiritual uplift of our empire and the world.

It is appropriated that this call and these services should come as an introduction to the world wide week of prayer. The Ministerial Association has made the following arrangements for the observance of the latter:

Monday, 8 p.m.—Lecture Hall of All Saints' church. Subject of address, Thanksgiving and Humiliation.

Tuesday, 8 p.m. — Mark Street church. Subject, The Church Universal.

Wednesday, 8 p.m. — St. Paul's church. Subject, Nations and Their Rulers.

Thursday, 8 p.m.— St. James' church. Subject, The Numbering of Our Days.

Friday, 8 p.m. — Murray street church. Subject, Equipment For Service.

A collection will be taken at the Friday evening meeting to defray the incidental expenses of the sessions.

Your presence is requested at these gatherings to help make them the power for good they ought to be.

Sacred Heart Rink

The Sacred Heart open-air rink is now ready for business. There will be two band concerts each week during the season. The first band concert on New Year's night. Price of tickets has been reduced and the following prices are set for this season.:

HARTLEY for MAYOR

To the Merchants, Professional and Business Men of the City of Peterboro

Gentlemen,—I would ask you to give me your support and influence in this Mayoralty contest. I have been unable to see a great many of the electors, but have every confidence in them, and am leaving the matter to their own good judgment. I have lived my whole life among you, all I have ever earned has been spent in Peterborough, you never found me going to Toronto or other places to buy my goods. I always believed in supporting our own people and no man can say that I ever beat him out of a dollar and I think I can say that during my whole life I have lived in peace and harmony with my neighbours. I therefore ask you to do me the honour of electing me Mayor of the city of my birth, and if you do I will give you faithful service.

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Yours very respectfully,

North Monaghan Elections for Reeve

TO THE ELECTORS:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I am again a candidate for the Reeveship of North Monaghan, and solicit your support and votes in my behalf. Together with your Council of 1915 we have endeavoured to give you the very best service possible and we think you will agree that it is an improvement over the year previous.

Trusting to receive your continued support, I am,

Yours faithfully,

JOHN McINTOSH.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I noticed in last night's Examiner a letter signed John Smith, dealing with the present Mayoralty campaign, and it has been pointed out to me that I was the writer of the letter. As I have not taken any part whatever in the election or rejection of any candidate at the polls for either the Mayoralty chair or the Aldermanic Board, but am confining my efforts to my own election to the Board of Education. I wish it known that John Smith, the writer, is not John E. Smith, the candidate for the Board of Education.

Thanking you for your space and wishing you a Happy New Year, I remain, yours faithfully,

J. H. SMITH.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Do the people of Peterborough want a man for Mayor who runs away from his obligations? The electors of the West Ward sent Mr. Green to the City Council for two years. After serving one year he has left his work unfinished, and now wants to be elected as Mayor to finish the work that he has run away from as Board of Works chairman. Surely if he took such an interest in the outfall sewer as he states, it was his duty to stay his full term and finish it. Does Mr. Green realize the great danger he is placing our city in? If he should not get in as Mayor, the outfall sewer and all the other activities of the city will immediately stop, and then where will we be?

I am,

Yours truly,

ONE IN FEAR.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Ex-Ald. Green is very insistent about what he intends to do for the workers, but there is one little fact that he never mentions. When the war started Mr. Green was the first employer of labour in the city to reduce the wages of his employees. I think this is something the electors of Peterborough should be made acquainted with. One of the results of his distilled wisdom whilst Board of Works chairman was that last spring when the streets should have been clean, the citizens were blinded with dust, because forsooth the sprinklers were of no use for the days of old Ald. Green had brought. I would like to know how many of his own workmen will cast a vote for him, and also how many of his neighbours? The workingman who votes for Green will be casting a vote against his own class, and against his own interests. Mr. Green evidently thinks he is granting us some new privilege by his statement that the poorest citizen shall get the same treatment when appearing before the City Council as the wealthiest get. Does Mr. Green mean that they have not had fair and proper treatment in the past? If so, it is most remarkable that he has only just opened his mouth about it. His new found interest in the poorer class is too thin, far too thin to be swallowed by the electors, who know that his interest in them is like his distilled wisdom, could be put in a mighty small package. Let us hope he will get all that is coming to him next Monday, a place at the bottom of the pole. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Iron Moulder.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice in the Toronto papers something about a proposed deal by which the Sun Life Insurance Company of Montreal, wishes to buy out the business of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co., of Toronto.

I, as a policyholder of the Manufacturers' Life, think it would be a most unfortunate affair, not only for the policyholders of our Company, but for the insurance business in general throughout Canada.

In the first place the moral effect upon the public with regard to insurance would be very bad. The average man would take it for granted that the Manufacturers' Life was in financial difficulty. Nothing could be farther from the truth. If a great Company like the Manufacturers' Life must be taken over by another Company, what about the many smaller Companies doing business in Canada under Government charter?

Secondly, why does the Sun Life wish to purchase the securities and business of the Manufacturers' Life? Is is to bolster up their own securities? It is a well-known fact that the Manufacturers' Life has its entire investments in gilt-edged securities, such as are favoured by conservative investors, while on the other hand, it is equally well known that the Sun Life has millions of dollars of more speculative securities, as for example, Illinois Traction Co., and Electric Power Co. It has frequently been urged that their holdings in some of these concerns represent a much larger percentage of the total assets of the Sun Life than is advisable, having regard to future profits and even to security of the policyholders.

Thirdly, the Sun Life is offering Five Hundred Dollars a share for the Three Hundred Thousand Dollars' stock of the Manufacturers' Life. Where is all this money going to come from? Surely not from the policyholders of the Sun Life? There is no place for it to come from except from the policyholders of the Manufacturers' Life. They stand to lose. The Stockholders of the Manufacturers' Life are the only people who stand to gain.

The promoters tell us there will be a saving in expense of collections. My opinion is that any saving from this source will be more than offset by the disorganiation which will result in the wrecking of a first-class going concern. The number of lapses which will result will be very great, and the policyholders, as usual, stand to lose.

I sincerely trust our Government at Ottawa will discourage rather than encourage monopoly of this kind.

I thank you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

Yours respectfully,

POLICYHOLDER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I read and hear a good deal of abuse of G. Walter Green, one of the candidates for the Mayoralty, and it strikes me that Mr. Green is the man who should get our votes. When a man is getting slammedby his opponents you will find that they are afraid of him and his ability. Then again, his explanation of the Bonnacord Street bridge petition and the sale of the debentures is something that has been put up to the public to say the least unfairly to Mr. Green.

I have been, up to the present, against Mr. Green, but it is now my opinion that he has the ability and aggressiveness to make a first-class Mayor.

Yours truly,

MERE VOTER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Whatever may be said about the other candidates for the Board of Education, Dr. Neal should be elected of the five now running. Dr. Neal has been a resident of this city for a number of years, is a considerable property owner, and always was interested in educational matters. He is an energetic, aggressive, type of man, with a wide practice, and is associated with all the progressive movements in the city. He is a good type of citizen and is a man who is needed on the Board of Education, where his knowledge of business affairs can be used to advantage.

In addition to that Dr. Neal is a physician, who would be most valuable in watching the sanitary needs of the schools, and offering suggestions for improving such.

I trust that Dr. Neal's host of friends will not fail to give him one vote, each, this election, because he would be a man who would watch and safeguard the interests of the ratepayer as well as any man in the field.

Yours truly,

RATEPAYER.

THE FAIR GROUND.

To the Electors of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—The proposal advocated by the Peterborough Examiner to pay $30,000.00 for thirty acres of land to be held for a fair ground, is one that should be turned down for the following reasons:

1. The ground is in the wrong place and it would be forever a nuisance, the nuisance being greater as the years go by.

2. It would be an impassible barrier betwen the Southern and Northern parts of the city.

3. It would require at all times a high close fence that the outside world might not see the fair from without; a low, fancy iron fence advocated, would be lined on the outside by people who would see without paying gate money. A fine iron fence with cement foundation to surround the grounds would require 4,948 feet of fencing and it would cost $15,000.00 at the least, probably much more.

4. The fair has never paid expenses counting all it has received from the city and the citizens.

5. It profits, mostly, the fast-horse man, who use it all the year round, the fair people use it two days in the year.

6. If the city buys at $30,000.00, the interest of the purchase money alone would be $1,800 a year, not counting the annual grants made. If the city buys then a dead set would be made to ge the city to put up buildings fences, etc. These would probably run up to $100,600; the Agricultural Society has no money.

7. Property suitable for a fair ground can be bought in the neighborhood for one-tenth of the money such property would not cut the city in two and be an eternal barrier and nuisance all the year round, and, if well chosen, it would be made into a park.

8. Much that is said by The Examiner in favour of an exhibition may be true, but it is equally true if such exhibition were held outside of the ground that is required for city extension. I am not opposing an annual fair, but I am opposing placing it where we will never cease regretting it. The more money is spent on it the harder it will be to get rid of it, or to move from it.

9. In early days a wise government planted a cemetery right in the centre of Peterborough; it had to be closed. A fair ground in the heart of the city will be as dead a thing as the cemetery, now Central Park, was. By the way, the wise ones put a ten-foot fence and sheds around the Central Park, then a cemetery, and held the fair there for some years. It became a nuisance and the fences, etc. were torn down.

10. All the glowing things said by The Examiner as the fruit of an Exhibition may be taken for what they are worth; they are not arguments in favour of placing a fair ground in the heart of a city.

11. The land at $30,000 is cheap to cut up and sell for building lots, say eight to the acre, after taking out streets there would be left about 24 acres for lots, say 200 lots at $250 each—$50,000 at 16 mills to the dollar the land would bring in to the city $1,300 a year for taxes, but with buildings probably ten or fifteen times that sum.

12. If held for manufacturers it would do the city ten times the benefit that a fair ground would.

For these and many other reasons I think if our citizens will use their best judgment and buy a fair ground, if one is needed, somewhere else than on the present racing track, they will be wise. I have considered this matter for many years and I am satisfied that if the present fair ground be purchased it will be a financial loss to the city and a growing cause of regret.

I am, gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

D. M. DUMBLE.

N.B.—I own no property in the South end of the city. I know that, taking thirty acres out of the market will cause people to buy in other places and so might help me, but I don't want to see the city make a mistake and I ignore my own interests for the general interests of the people.

When we grow old we walk unfeelingly over that which we in our youth madly chased.

Everybody Welcome

For Board Of Education

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have been again nominated for the School Board and kindly solicit your support. I have endeavoured to faithfully serve the city on the Board for the past year, and if elected will continue to give my very best efforts in this branch of public service.

Again soliciting your vote and wishing you all a Very Happy New Year, I am,

Yours faithfully,

NEW YEAR'S MARKET WELL ATTENDED

Considerable Quantities of Fowl Offered—Butter and Eggs Maintain Their Standard Prices

The good housewives of Peterborough evidently ran short of rations after their strenuous efforts at satisfying the appetites of their families at Christmas time, for they turned out in goodly numbers this morning to replenish their larders for the forthcoming holiday. Prices on the whole were quite up to those of last Friday and the Christmas market has always held the plum for top-notch quotations.

THE BASKET SECTION.

Butter sold at 38c, although a few women had the temerity to start out with 35c, but no doubt they thought differently before the day was far spent.

Eggs brought their usual price of 40c. One or two however asked 45c but they did not dispose of many at that figure.

Turkeys sold as follows: A 20 lb. bird for $4.60; 16 lb. for $3.75 and 17 lb. for $4.25.

Geese were a trifle higher than last week. The following are a few examples: 12 lbs. for $2.40; 11 1-2 lbs. 93; 13 lbs. $2.50 (dressed.) 14 lbs. $2.35.

OUTSIDE SECTION.

Straw made its first appearance at $6 a load; hardwood 4 ft. lengths, $5.50; 16 in., $4.50; tamarac 4 ft., $4.00.

Beef bought 10 and 12c, lambs 18 and 20c, pork 14 and 15c.

Live hens $1 each.

Farmers are taking advantage of the roads and are bringing in large quantities of wood and hay, to say nothing of grain and peas which now command $2.15 a bus.

PRESENTATION AT SALEM

Organist of Salem Methodist Church Was Recipient of Ladies' Companion

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter, of Elmdale Farm South, were delightfully invaded, in their new home, last night, by their friends of the lacteal guild. About thirty-five members of the Milkmen's Association, made up of husbands and wives, lovers and sweethearts, in commemoration of Mr. Hunter's recent marriage, visited his home, where they were most hospitably received in their new and elegantly appointed home, by the President of the Association and his gracious wife.

On behalf of the Association a congratulatory address was read by Mr. Dunmit, and the presentation of an elegant eight-day marble mantle clock was made on behalf of the visitors by Mr. E. Butler. The address which complimented the President on having recognized the responsibilities of his position by joining the ranks of the Benedicts, was was signed on behalf of the visiting members of the Association by Messrs. Robinson, Butler, Darling and Dunmit.

Mr. Hunter, on behalf of himself and wife, thanked the visitors for their gift, for their congratulations, and their good wishes. Congratulatory speeches were also made by Messrs. Butler, Darling, Sanderson, and others. Then followed a song by Mrs. Percy Castle. Then substantial refreshments were served.

To the refreshments succeeded a delightful dance, and far into the "wee sma' hoors" the enjoyment went on, and happy memories were created, to be looked back upon as one of the most delightful evenings in the lives of the hosts and guests.

If Mr. and Mrs. Hunter needed any proof of their popularity, or if proof were needed of the jolly good fellowship of the Milkmen's Association, the evening furnished both.

BRITANNIA IS STILL ON JOB

New Yorker Tells How It Is Sure thing Germans Get None of Food Sent To Belgians

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—"All this talk about the money and food that is being given by Canada and the United States falling into the hands of the German occupants of the country is absolute foolishness," said a prominent man, who has been investigating conditions in Belgium. "There is no doubt that the Germans would take this and everything they could lay their hands on if they were permitted, but the Belgian Relief Commission is one of the best organized and most efficiently administrated bodies that the world has ever known. Such a combination has never been seen before as this body of men and women working for the pleasure they get out of the work, at the same time maintaining a state of efficiency that would make any so-called efficiency expert insanely jealous.

"To return to the possibility of the seizure of food and clothing by the Germans, I will mention just one thing that should be sufficient to dissipate all rumours or suspicions. 'Britannia Rules the Waves.' Isn't that enough? If this flour and wheat that Canada is sending to the Belgians were going to feed Germans, how long do you think these Belgian Relief ships would be permitted to sail the Atlantic? The British Navy would be the first to take a hand.

"The Belgian Relief Commission guarantees that not an ounce of food sent from Canada goes into German mouths. That is why the plea for food, made by starving Belgium, always comes through the Belgian Relief Committee."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEYISTS! A CALL TO ARMS!

New Year's Message From C. A. H. A. President to All Players and Officials Throughout Canada

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 31. — In this my first official note as president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, I take the greatest pleasure in sending out to all officials and players in the many Provincial associations connected with our governing body the heartfelt wish that the coming year of 1916 will bring to one and all the greatest amount of happiness and prosperity possible.

I feel, however, that I have a greater responsibility and duty to perform at this time, and that is to point out to the great army of hockey players and officials scattered throughout our beloved Canada from coast to coast how great and urgent the need is for men to come forward and rally to the defence of our common cause, and strike a blow for liberty and justice that will re-echo around the world.

Canada's athletes have responded nobly to the call in the past, and will, I am sure, continue to do so. In a few short weeks our hockey season will be over, and if there are any who have not made up their minds regarding their future course of action, let me say that, in my opinion, there should be only one conclusion, and that should be to exchange the "stick and puck" for a "Ross rifle and bayonet," and take your place in the great army that is being formed to sweep the "oppressors of humanity" from the face of the earth.

There can be no future security for our homes and loved ones until this is accomplished, and this gigantic task cannot be accomplished until every available man comes forward and fits himself for the great and glorious effort.

It takes nerve and gameness to play the game of hockey. The same qualities are necessary in the greater game that is now being played in France and on the other fighting fronts.

The thousands of hockey players throughout this Dominion have all the necessary qualifications. Therefore, I earnestly urge all such to "rally around the flag." With every man doing his bit Canada will raise an army of brains and brawn from our hockey enthusiasts the like of which the world has never seen.

The whistle has sounded. Let every man "play the greatest game of his life." Sincerely yours,

JAMES T. SUTHERLAND.

Electrics Will Have Their Strongest Line Up

Although the O.H.A. sub-committee has held up the certificates of several Peterborough players for further consideration this will not interfere with the game with Brampton to-night. Secretary Hewitt of the O.H.A. informing the Electrics this afternoon that the players in question will be allowed to play to-night. The local club will wait upon the O.H.A. in regard to the matter and it is hoped that the action of the Sub-Committee will be changed.

To-night's game with Brampton promises to be a decidedly interesting battle. Brampton has a strong Intermediate team, a seven that reached the semi-finals last year, and they will take a lot of beating to-night. The Electrics will have their strongest line-up on, and a big crowd will be out to see them perform on hard ice.

There will be skating afterwards, with the band in attendance, so that it will be a big evening's entertainment.

Curlers decide For Another Bonspiel

The Curling Club, at a largely attended meeting last night, decided to hold an open bonspiel this winter, and reappointed last year's committee to take over all the details of its date and arrangements. Mr. W. G. Morrow, R. Harstone, R. Neill, W. G Ferguson, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, and Harry Foote comprises the commitee and their success of a year ago is an assurance that a big 'spiel will be staged.

The Skips are again reminded of to-morrow's games between the President and Vice-President.

R. P. Best and H. R. Martin reported last night regarding the purchase of a piano and they were given instructions to proceed with the matter

THOMAS L. S. YALE, FOOTBALL STAR, DEAD

Pneumonia Follows Cold Contracted While Coaching Team During Fall

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 31.— Thomas L. Shevlin, millionaire lumberman, and famous Yale football star, died of pneumonia early to-day. He had been ill but six days. Shevlin contracted a cold while coaching the Yale football squad last fall.

Shevlin's death came a few hours after Dr. B. W. Sippy of Chicago arrived in Minneapolis in a special train in hope of saving him.

Shevlin played football at Yale four years and was captain in 1905, when Yale had the greatest team in its history. Always ready to return when Eli's eleven called for coaching, he has whipped several seeming impossible teams into winning shape. After contracting a cold at Yale this fall, he went to California, but was unable to regain his strength.

Shevlin for four years was the all-American end. He gained fame also as an all around athlete. He won his "Y" in track and crew.

Shevlin's lumber interests netted him a big income. He is said to have carried $1,500,000 life insurance, having increased it from 500,000 only recently.

Fighting For The Federals

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Giants and Yankees to-day were growling competitors in the pursuit of Federal League magnates. Interest centered in the Cincinnati meeting of Jan. 3, when the Federals playing staffs will be disposed of. The Yankees to-day were said to have bid for one or more players from each of the outlaw clubs and the Giants also made heavy drafts on the Federals.

Other clubs of both circuits were sure to be on hand with hunting artillery primed with gilded shekels, but none as yet have shown the anxiety that Colonel Houston, of the Yankees, and John McGraw have to bag a few former outlaw stars.

The National League and National Commission meetings in Cincinnati will be postponed, it was said to-day, until after the Federals' peace committee and the National Commission in the January 3rd meeting dispose finally of all details of the peace plan. This was believed to indicate the commission might later raise the player limit to accommodate the flock of ball players whose clubs will be absorbed.

The people that we come in contact with during our every day lives influence our thoughts to a greater extent than most people are willing to admit.

When people love you they cheat you; when they fear you they let you cheat them.

Major Leagues' Great Season

Attendance Figures Surprising In View of The Conditions

NEW YORK, Dec. 29. — Although the past season is frequently referred to as one of the worst, from a financial standpoint, in the history of professional baseball, the attendance figures do not bear out this statement. Whil a number of the minor leagues suffered heavy losses, the majors weathered a period of extremely trying conditions in a satisfactory manner. Carefully compiled, although unofficial, attendance figures for the season of 1915 place the attendance in the National League at 3,225,400 and the American League at 2,964,400, giving a total of 6,199,800.

Going back to 1909, which is generally conceded to be one of the best years in big league baseball in many seasons, the record books show that the aggregate attendance in the two major leagues was 7,378,108. A comparison of the figures for 1909 and 1915 indicates a falling off in attendance of 1,178,308. At first glance this would appear to be a serious defection, but when the varying conditions are taken into consideration the showing is little short of remarkable.

The Federal League attracted many fans in certain cities where the independent league played against organized interests, while the automobile, motorboat, golf and tennis also opened new fields for fans to an extent never dreamed of six years ago. With a readjustment of circuits and a general strengthening of all the clubs of the National and American league, making for a closer and more interesting pennant race in both circuits, there appears to be no reason why major league baseball should not surpass all previous attendance figures within the next few weeks, if prosperous business conditions prevail throughout the nation.

NOT SEEKING ROMANCE

"I say is this here the novel you advised me to read?" said the cabman to the librarian.

"Yes," replied the Librarian, "that's the one."

"Well," said the cabman, "you can have it back. There nine people in the first four chapters who hired cabs and each one o' 'em, when he got out, flung his purse to the driver. Now, when I want that sort of literature I'll go to Jules Verne and get it pure."—Oklahoma Oklahoman.

A man may be measured by his every day life, not by his occasional efforts.

THE MISTAKES IN LIFE.

Judge McCormick of San Francisco says these are the 15 mistakes of life:

1—To attempt to set up your own standard of right and wrong.
2—To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own
3—To expect uniformity of opinions in this world
4—To fail to make allowances for inexperience.
5—To endeavour to mold all dispositions alike
6—Not to yield to unimportant trifles.
7—To look for perfection in our own actions
8—To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.
9—Not to help everybody, wherever, however and whenever we can.
10—To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.
11—To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.
12—Not to make allowance for the weaknesses of others.
13—To estimate by gains outside quality when it is that which makes the man.

THE AWFUL TRAGEDY OF WAR!

Has Paralyzed Industries--Delayed Consignments and Dislocated the Entire Commerce of the World.

Six Days' Sensational Overcoat Sale

The lines at the top tell the story in brief. Long before the war started, Old Country Mills were weaving woolens for us. The war came, and a few months sufficed to paralize industries. The great mills in Britain ceased to operate—thousands of looms were silent—then suddenly, as the sky cleared, the machinery started, and for months now the looms that weave the famous Scotland Woolen Mills fabrics have operated day and night to catch up. The result has been a congestion of materials, woolens we should have had months ago are filling up every vacant space. Not a foot of our warehouse that is not occupied. Now we have thousands ot yards—hundreds of huge bales and bolts of cloth that comprise the best overcoatings ever woven. Beautiful blending of color-effects—superior qualities. The very charm of materials. Overcoatings that cannot be duplicated under $30 and $35 are here for you now at only $15.

Editorial

We ask all our friends and new customers to come and bring their friends and neighbors to this opening of what we fully expect, will be one of our greatest merchandizing efforts. We invite your judgment, and you will find that everything will be just as represented, or, if you have a single complaint, I would like to personally interest myself. We know that most people would rather do business with a concern where the spirit of service rules. And that is what we aim to cultivate here. Wishing all a prosperous New Year.

Gideon Miller

On Monday morning, then, we start the most Sensational Overcoating-to-Measure Sale this city has ever seen. It will last for just six days, no longer, no less. During those six days you can come in and pick from any pattern, any weave, and there will be but the one price, FIFTEEN DOLLARS.

PETERBORO'S MAYOR FOR 1916

A PROPHECY

Ex-Alderman GREEN is making New Friends every Day. He says :---

"When I see our strength growing day by day, when I see the effect of the indisputable explanations that are being made regarding my Public Acts, when I see the strain that is put upon our opponents growing in like manner, I can without venturing on dogmatic prophecy, say that I look forward with serene confidence to my Election as Mayor of Peterborough for 1916."

To My Critics

Men who have never done much, of course, can't be criticised very much.

Men who have done but little will only attract little attention.

But men who have done a good deal, who are resourceful and cannot be swayed by self-seekers, never fail to attract a host of critics.

I thank you, Gentlemen, for your attentions.

Canada's Overseas Army To Be Increased

Desperate Fighting On The Eastern Front

Canada's Overseas Army Will Be Increased To Half A Million Men

Important Announcement Made By Sir Robert Borden In a Message To The Canadian People---Austrian Warships Damaged By The Allied Fleet---Heavy Fighting Reported From The Eastern Front---Battle of Strategic Importance is Being Fought.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—As a fitting New Year's announcement to the Canadian people and to the British Empire, the Prime Minister gave out the statement that the authorized Canadian force for overseas service is raised from a quarter million to a half million men. The army of 250,000 hitherto authorized is now within sight. The latest figures of recruiting show a total of 212,000 men, exclusive of officers, called to the colours since the war began, and for the past month recruits have been coming in at the rate of nearly one thousand per day. Now, "as a token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause with victory and an abiding peace," the Government has formally authorized a Canadian army of 500,000, or twice the number previously pledged to the Empire's fight.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—German aeroplanes again visited Salonika camp but did not damage. Two machines were hit by gunfire from British warships. One bomb dropped in the Greek camp.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—General Townsend reports granting of a four-hour armistice to the Turks near Kuet-El-Amara to enable them to bury a large number of dead after an attack on Christmas Day. The British casualties were light.

ROME, Jan. 3.—Besides sinking the two Austrian destroyers reported, the Allied fleet damaged four other Austrian warships making for Cattaro.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 3.—Continued heavy fighting is reported from Pripet southward, and in Galicia, but no details are available. A battle of great strategic importance is being fought.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Sweden has recalled all naval and military officers on leave.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Discussing recent peace feelers, Baron Mumm, of the Foreign Office, to-day denied that Germany was seeking peace or desired it at present.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Despite all neutral protests British ships are stopping and examining all neutral mail both ways.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 3.—Russians have concentrated two hundred guns and sixty thousand men on three miles of the Bessarabian front. Twenty-two assaults made against Austrians in desperate fighting.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Allies are making strong defences from Salonika to Orphano Gulf. One hundred and ninety thousand Allied troops are in Greece. Bulgar losses too great to assume offensive.

British Liner "Persia" Sunk In Mediterranean Many Lives Are Lost

Victim of Submarine on Thursday Lost---American Consul on Board Among The 300 Lives Reported Lost.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The British liner "Persia" was sunk in the Mediterranean by a submarine on Thursday. Only four boat loads of passengers cleared the liner. Many lives are thought to have been lost. The "Persia" is the largest British liner sunk excepting the Lusitania and the Arabic.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Noon reports yesterday to Lloyds say 153 survivors of the "Persia" were landed at Alexandria, Egypt. No information as to the fate of United States Consul Robert McNeely.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Latest figures are about three hundred victims in the sinking of the "Persia." Two boat loads were drawn down when the steamer sank.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—United States Consul R. M. McNeely and other Americans were aboard the sunken "Persia," and President Wilson regards the United States again actually affected by the affair.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Advices to the State Department from United States Consul at Alexandria, Egypt, indicates that Robert McNeely, United States Consul at Aden, Arabia, was lost when the "Persia" was sunk. He was last seen in the water after the vessel had sunk.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Cairo despatches say the "Persia" was torpedoed without warning, sinking in five minutes.

BLOODY RACE WAR IN STATE OF GEORGIA

Two White Men Hurt and Seven Negroes Shot To Death

BLAKELEY, Ga., Jan. 3.—Excitement, caused throughout this section by clashes between white men and negroes near here last night, in which seven negroes were killed and two whites seriously hurt, had not entirely died down to-day. Influential white citizens who were busy until an early hour this morning in efforts to prevent further possible outbreaks, expressed the belief, however, that there would be no more trouble.

Five of the negroes were shot and killed and two others were burned to death, according to reports here, as a result of three pitched battles between the negroes and various bands of whites seeking to capture Grandison Goodsby, a negro farmer, and his two sons, accused of assassinating Henry J. Villipigue, an overseer, who had threashed one of the younger Goodsbys. Villipigue was shot in the back Wednesday night.

Seized Position of German Lines

Southeast of Armentieres — Two Lines of Trenches Captured on Riga Front

LONDON, Jan. 3. — British commanding officer in Egypt reports a British force has been sent from Madras to round up Harun's camp. It was found he had retired in haste, leaving one onth's supplies.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Included in the New Year's honour list are: Sir Thos. Shaughnessy, K.C., Major General Gwatkin, Major-General John Carson, Lieut. Col. Grassett, Surgeon-Gen. Carleton Jones, Brig.-Gen. J. C. McDougall, Wm. Brymer, Matron M. K. MacDonald of the Royal Red Cross.

Silent Are The Halls and Rooms Of Old College

Only Few Alien and Colonial Students Now Attending Cambridge

NOW HAS FOREIGN AIR

Some of Great Dining Halls Have Been Closed Until End of War.

CAMBRIDGE, Eng., Jan. 3.—Cambridge has practically ceased to be a domestic institution, and its academic life is sustained almost entirely by alien and colonial students. This resemblance to a foreign university, planted in the classic confines of the ancient seat of learning, is intensified by the presence here of the faculty and some of the student body of the University of Louvain.

With the exception of the medical school, none of the colleges has more than a handful of British students. Perhaps the greatest sufferer from the war has been Corpus Christi College, which does not admit men of coloured races to its rolls. This college has seven undergraduates in residence, and since most of its sons are either with the military forces or doing government work of some sort, the great hall is closed, and the students and their instructors dine in their own quarters.

A Baronial Hall.

Each college has a great hall of baronial appearance and capacity, where its members dine in state, the master with his dons at tables on a dais, while below on the main floor the undergraduates gather about long tables. Most of these halls, formerly centres of traditional English good cheer, are now places of gloom, where by dim candle light, enforced on account of the Zeppelin peril, a few of the elderly faculty members gather with their alien and crippled student body in a pathetic effort to keep alive a glorious tradition.

Trinity, with its normal enrollment of 600 students, does not show the ravages of war as much as the other colleges, but this does not mean that it has not been as patriotic as the others, but on account of its enrollment, far in the lead of any of its rivals, and the furter fact that it numbers many aliens among its undergraduates, the college can still muster a hundred men. Headed by Dr. Butler, the venerable and venerated master of the college, who is assisted by Vice-Master Henry Jackson, O.M., one of the greatest of Cambridge teachers, the faculty and men of Trinity gather in the great hall in a brave effort to uphold the continuity of Cambridge's royal college. But a fear of a lapse in the continuity necessary to carry on the precious traditions of the university is in every heart, and sometimes finds expression in grim determination to hold on at any cost to save any step which would prevent Cambridge men from doing their duty to their country.

MADE IT WORSE.

The young son of the family who had been out to luncheon at a little friend's house, was asked by his mother on his return whether he had been a good boy. He hesitated a moment, then answered "Yes."

"You don't seem to be very sure about the matter," said his mother. "What did you do?"

"Oh, I just spilled my chop in my lap," he replied.

"Did you apologise to Mrs. Brown?"

"Yes," he nodded.

"Tell mother what you said when you apologised".

"Oh," came the quick response, "I said, 'Excuse me, but that's what always happens to tough meat.'"

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE.

Let us be gone—the place is sad and strange—
How far, far off, these happy times appear:
All that I have to live I'd gladly change
For one such month as I have wasted here—
To draw long dreams of beauty, love and power
From founts of hope that never will outrun,
And drink all life's quintessence in an hour,
Give me the days when I was twenty-one.

BIG MERCHANTMAN "GLENGYLE" HAS BEEN TORPEDOED AND SUNK

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The big Glasgow steamer Glengyle, excepting the Lusitania and Arabic, the largest British merchantman submarine victim of the war, has been torpedoed and sunk, it was announced to-day. The first despatches received here said that about 100 survivors have been picked up. The Glengyle displaced nine thousand tons, and presumably carried a large crew. It is believed that lives have been lost. News of the sinking of the big Glasgow steamer reached here while the Admiralty was bending every effort to learn more of the details of the sinking of the British liner Persia, with a loss of about 250 lives. A moment later came word that the Japanese steamer Kenkon Maru, 3,000 tons, owned by Inui Gomei Kaisha Shipping Co., had been torpedoed. The crew, it was stated, was saved. The Glengyle was a new steamer. She was built in 1914. She was 500 feet long, and had a sixty-two foot beam.

SINKING OF "PERSIA" CAUSES ANXIETY AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3. — With most anxious forebodings, official Washington to-day still awaited further information regarding the sinking of the British liner Persia. The worst fears were practically realized in the death of American Consul Robert N. McNealy, and the news that the attack was without warning. But the United States was not yet in a position to act. State Department officials declared it entirely probable Austria or Germany will anticipate an American protest or ultimatum, by voluntary disavowing the Persia's attack, and giving iron-bound guarantees for future observance of international law.

President Wilson was kept closely advised of developments to-day. It is probable no important action will be taken until he returns and confers with his cabinet, discussions by Congress, which re-convenes to-morrow, is considered certain.

Million Francs Daily For French Hospitals

PARIS, Dec. 31.—There are 500,000 beds in the military and auxiliary hospitals of France The cost of their maintainance is 1,000,000 francs daily. This figure, however, gives no idea of the expenditure per patient, for the number varies constantly and a considerable proportion of the beds are always empty.

About 80,000,000 francs has been spent in France thus far by three Red Cross societies. At present they are maintaining 115,000 beds in 1,300 hospitals at an outlay of between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 francs manthly.

The Society for the Aid of Wounded Soldiers, the principal Red Cross organization, started with 7,000,000 francs at the beginning of the war. The remainder of its expenditure and those of the other two societies have been made by charitable contributions.

It is estimated that not more than 1,000,000 wounded have been cared for thus far in France.

Pessimism is putting a high value on your own opinion, and a low value on business conditions.

Greece Protests Action of French Against Consuls

Arrests of Agents of Germany Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey Resented

LONDON, Jan. 3—Greece has protested against the arrest of the consuls of the Central Powers and their allies at Salonica, which it terms a violation of Greece's sovereign rights says Reuter's Athens correspondent.

The consuls — German, Austrian Turkish and Bulgarian—were arrested on orders given by General Sarrail, the French Commander, and were the outgrowth of a German aeroplane attack upon the city which was considered an attack of belligerency according to a despatch to the Evening News from Salonica.

British and French troops surrounded the consulates, arrested all the members of their staffs and seized the archives, the despatch states.

Another despatch to Reuter's says: "A Taube aeroplane which flew over Salonica at midday was driven off by gunfire. The air raids of this week constitute the first overt acts of the enemy since December 12, when the Entente Allies recrossed the frontier. Bombs were dropped this morning on the British lines and encampments, but they did no damage.

"The Greek camp just outside the town apparently was mistaken for Entente Allied quarters. A bomb was dropped there and exploded near the Divisional General's headquarters killing one shepherd and four sheep.

"The scenes during the air raids have been reminiscent of the Zeppelin visits to London, except that they have occurred in the daytime. The movements of the raiders were closely followed by the populace. As the shells seemed to be getting nearer to them, the aviators swerved their machines or dodged or altered their directions. Throughout the aircraft remained at high altitudes, some of them at nine thousand feet. The crowds gathered in the streets cheered when shells burst close to the machines. It is reported that two of the aircraft were hit during the first raid.

EVERY THREE MINUTES ONE DIES IN THE U. S.

The Anti-Tuberculosis Society illustrates the frightful toll of consumption by extinguishing a light every three minutes, and shows that it is the man or woman, girl or boy, who neglects colds, whose blood is impure, who feels weak and languid, who is the very one to contract tuberculosis—and none are immune.

During changing seasons, or after sickness, blood-quality is most important, and if you and your family will take Scott's Emulsion after meals it will charge your blood with health-sustaining richness, quicken circulation, and strengthen both lungs and throat.

OUR SERIAL STORY

I.—FIRING MISS COHEN

[Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.]

"THERE'S no use talking, Abe," Morris Perlmutter declared to his partner, Abe Potash, as they sat in the sample room of their spacious cloak and suit establishment. "We got a system of bookkeeping that would disgrace a peanut stand. Here's a statement from the Hamsuckett Mills, and it shows a debit balance of $1,150 what we owe them. Miss Cohen's figures is $1,142."

"That's in our favor already," Abe replied. "The Hamsuckett people must be wrong, Mawruss."

"No, they ain't, Abe," Morris said. "It's Miss Cohen's mistake."

"Mistake!" Abe exclaimed. "When it's in our favor, Mawruss, it ain't no mistake!"

"It's a mistake anyhow, no matter in whose favor it is," said Morris. "Miss Cohen's footing was wrong. She gets carelesser every day."

"I'm surprised to hear you that you should talk that way, Mawruss," Abe rejoined. "Miss Cohen's been with us for five years, and we ain't lost nothing by her, neither. You know as well as I do, Mawruss, her uncle, Max Cohen, is a good customer of ours. Only last week he bought of us a big bill of goods, Mawruss."

"Just the same, Abe," Morris went on, "if we got a bright young man in there instead of Miss Cohen it would be a big improvement. We ought to get some one in there what can manage a double entry and can run a card index for our credits."

Abe puffed vigorously at his cigar.

"I suppose, Mawruss, if we got a card index and we sell a crook a bill of goods," he commented, "and the crook busts up on us, Mawruss, that card index is going to stop him from sticking us—what? Well, Mawruss, if you want to get in a young feller and fire Miss Cohen go ahead—I'm satisfied."

As if to clinch the matter before his partner could retract this somewhat grudging consent, Morris Perlmutter stalked out of the sample room and made resolutely for the glass inclosed office, where Miss Cohen was busy writing in a ledger. She looked up as he entered, and surveyed him calmly with her large black eyes.

"Oh, Mr. Perlmutter!" she said when he came within earshot, "Uncle Max was round to the house last night, and he wants you should duplicate them forty-twenty-twos in his last order and ship at once."

Morris stopped short. This was something he had not foreseen, and all his well formulated plans for the firing of Miss Cohen were shattered at once.

"Oh!" he said lamely. "Thank you, Miss Cohen. I'll make a memorandum of it."

He went over to the commercial agency book and scanned three or four pages with an unseeing eye. Then he repaired to the sample room, where Abe sat finishing his cigar.

"Well, Mawruss," said Abe, his face wreathed in a malicious grin, "you made a quick job of it."

Morris scowled.

"I ain't spoken to her yet," he grunted. "I got a little gumption, Abe—a little consideration and common sense I don't throw out my dirty water until I get in clean."

Abe puffed slowly before replying.

"I seen some people, Mawruss," he said, "what sometimes throws out perfectly clean water and gets some dirty water in exchange, Mawruss." He threw away the stump of his cigar

"When it's in our favor, Mawruss, it ain't no mistake!"

"Sometimes, Mawruss," he concluded solemnly, "they gets a good, big souse, Mawruss, where they least expects it."

II.

Ike Feinsilver, city salesman for the Hamsuckett mills—Goldner & Plotkin, proprietors—was obviously his own ideal of a well dressed man. His shirts and waistcoats represented a taste as original as it was not subdued, but it was in the selection of his neckties that he really excelled. Abe and Morris fairly blinked as they surveyed his latest acquisition in cravats when he entered the door of their store that afternoon, smiling a pleasant greeting at his prospective customers.

He presented so brilliant a picture that Miss Cohen was drawn from her desk in the glass inclosed office toward the trio in the sample room as inevitably as the moth to the candle flame. She took up some cutting slips from a table by way of excuse for her intrusion, but the blush and smile with which she acknowledged Ike's rather perfunctory nod betrayed her. Abe was fingering the Hamsuckett swatches, but Miss Cohen's embarrassment did not escape Morris Perlmutter. He marked it with an inward start and immediately conceived a brilliant idea.

"Ike," he said when Abe had completed the giving of a small order and had left them alone together, "a young feller like you ought to get married."

Ike was noncommittal.

"Sure, Mawruss," he replied. "Every young feller ought to get married."

"I'm glad you look at it so sensible, Ike," Morris went on. "Getting married right, Ike, has been the making of many a young feller. Where d'ye suppose Goldner & Plotkin would be today if they hadn't got married right? They'd be selling goods for somebody else, Ike. But Goldner, he married Bella Fraxinsky, with a couple of thousand dollars maybe, and Plotkin, he goes to work and gets Garfunkel's sister. She was pretty old, Ike, but if she ain't got a fine complexion, Ike, she got a couple of thousand dollars, too, ain't it? Well, Plotkin, with his $2,000, and Goldner, with his $2,000, they start in together as new beginners. They gets the selling agency for the Hamsuckett people, and then they makes big money and buys them out. Today Goldner & Plotkin is rich men and all because they got married right."

Feinsilver listened with parted lips.

"And now, Ike," Morris continued, the good seed sown, "we talked enough, ain't it? Come on to the office. I want to show you some little mistakes in the Hamsuckett statement."

He conducted Ike to the glass enclosed office, where Miss Cohen bent low over her ledger. The blush with which she had received Ike's greeting had not entirely disappeared, and, as she glanced up, her large black eyes looked like those of a frightened deer.

"Ah, Miss Cohen," Ike said, "ain't it a fine weather?"

A pleased smile spread itself over Morris' face.

"I think I hear the telephone in the sample room," he broke in hurriedly. "Excuse me for a moment."

When he returned, Ike and Miss Cohen were chatting gayly.

"What do you think of that?" Morris cried. "My Minnie just rang me up and says she got tickets for the theayter tomorrow night—two tickets. We can't use 'em, because we're going to a—a wedding. Would you two young folks like to go, maybe?"

"Why, sure," Ike said. "Sure we would. Wouldn't we, Miss Cohen?"

Miss Cohen assented bashfully.

"Well, then," said Morris, "I'll get 'em for you—I mean I'll send 'em you by mail tonight, Ike."

Ike was profuse in his thanks; and then and there arranged to call for Miss Cohen at 7:30 sharp, the following evening.

"How about that mistake in the statement?" Ike asked.

"Some other time," said Morris walking with Ike toward the store door. Then he sank his voice to a confidential whisper. "That's a fine girl, Miss Cohen," he went on. "Comes of fine family too. She's Max Cohen's niece. You know Max Cohen. He's the Beacon Credit Outfitting company. He's a millionaire, Ike. If he's worth a cent he's worth a hundred thousand dollars."

Ike turned on him an awed yet searching look as they clasped hands again in parting.

"I give you my word, Ike, she's his favorite niece," Morris concluded, "and he ain't got no children of his own."

III.

The ensuing week was a busy one, but Miss Cohen and Feinsilver had been busiest of all, for in less than six days after their visit to the theater a solitaire diamond ring sparkled on the third finger of the lady's left hand.

"Well, Mawruss," Abe said ten days later, "I suppose you fired Miss Cohen?"

"Me fire Miss Cohen!" Morris exclaimed. "I'm surprised to hear you that you should talk that way. Abe. What for should I fire Miss Cohen?"

"Look out, that's all."

"Why, last week you said you was going to fire her, ain't it?"

"Last week," Morris replied, "was another day. If I ain't got no more sense than that I should go to a fine young lady like Miss Cohen and say, 'Miss Cohen, you're fired,' after she worked for us five years, and her uncle also a good customer, I should be sorry, Abe."

"Then, we're going to keep her, after all—what?" Abe said.

"No, we ain't going to keep her," said Morris. "We're going to lose her."

"Lose her! What d'ye mean?"

Morris smiled in a superior way.

"Abe," he said, "you ain't got no eyes in your head. Ain't you noticed that ring on Miss Cohen's left hand?"

Abe stared in astonishment.

"It's a beauty, Abe," Morris went on. "A bright young feller like Ike Feinsilver don't get stuck, no matter what he buys. He got it through Plotkin's cousin down on Maiden lane."

Abe sat down to ponder over the news.

"You mean?" he said at length, "that Ike Feinsilver, of the Hamsuckett mills, is going to marry Miss Cohen?"

"You guessed it right, Abe," Morris replied.

"And who fixed it up?" said Abe.

Morris slapped his chest proudly.

"I did," he replied.

Abe smoked on in silence.

"You done a smart piece of work, Mawruss, I must say," he admitted. "Ike's a good feller, and Miss Cohen'll make him a good wife, even if she ain't a good bookkeeper. Also, we done a good turn to Max Cohen. I bet he's pleased. I wonder he ain't been around yet."

Hardly had the words issued from Mr. Potash's mouth, when the store door opened to admit a short, thickset person and then closed again with a bang that threatened every pane of glass in the vicinity.

"Mr. Cohen," Abe cried, "what a pleasure this is! I congradulate you."

Mr. Cohen withdrew his hand from Abe's cordial grasp.

"You congradulate me, hey?" he said, with slow and ironic emphasis. "Mawruss Perlmutter also congradulates me—what?" He fixed the unhappy Morris with a terrible glare. "Don't congradulate me," he went on. "Congradulate Ike Feinsilver and Beckie Cohen." He gathered force as he proceeded. "Fools," he continued in a rapid crescendo. "Meddlers. You spill my blood. You ruin me. I'm a millionaire, you tell Feinsilver. I've got nothing to do with my money but that I should throw it away."

"Mister Cohen," Morris protested, "you'll make yourself sick."

"I'll make you sick," Cohen rejoined. "I'll make for you a blue eye too. Five thousand dollars I got to give her."

Abe whistled involuntarily.

"I should think $2,000 would be plenty," he suggested.

Max Cohen turned on him with another glare.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

When men place women on a higher plane than themselves they expect loftier ideals.

Why "Anuric" is an INSURANCE Against Sudden Death.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism and gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; channels often get sore and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. This is the time you should consult some physician of wide experience—such as Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of his new discovery, "Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of urine for test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid, as hot water melts sugar; besides being absolutely harmless it is endowed with other properties, for it preserves the kidneys in a healthy condition by thoroughly cleansing them. Being so many times more active than lithia, it clears the heart valves of any sandy substances which may clog them and checks the degeneration of the blood-vessels, as well as regulating blood pressure. "Anuric" is a regular insurance and life-saver for all big meat eaters and those who deposit lime-salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric" put up by Dr. Pierce, in 50-cent packages.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY

Come with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This is a blood cleanser and alterative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart, nerves, brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and strenuous instead of tired, weak and faint.

Macaroni and Cheese.

Break half a pound of macaroni into pieces an inch or two long; cook it in boiling water, enough to cover well; put in a good teaspoonful of salt; let it boil about 20 minutes. Drain it well and then put a layer in the bottom of a well-buttered dish, upon this some grated cheese and small pieces of butter; a little salt and more macaroni, and so on, filling the dish. Sprinkle the top thickly with cracker crumbs. Pour over the whole a teacupful of cream or milk. Set in the oven and bake half an hour. It should be nicely browned on top. Serve in the dish in which it was baked with a clean napkin pinned about it.

EARTH'S BETTER DAY IS DRAWING NEAR

The Divinely Appointed Remedy for Unrest of the World.

The Opening of the Year Suggests the Dawning of the New Age—The Change of Dispensation Manifest to All, but Understood by Few—The King of Glory Soon to Come In—The Great Struggle in the Spiritual Heavens — "The Strong Man" About to Be Bound —The Lord Is Judging His People—The Faithful Soon to Be Rewarded.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York City Jan. 3. — Pastor Russell gave a very impressive discourse tonight at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway. His text was "He that sat upon the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new." (Revelation 21:5.) He spoke as follows:

The opening of a New Year is like the opening of a new ledger. It is a favorable time for determining what should be disposed of in the profit and loss account, for putting into effect good resolutions governing the New Year. Those who make no resolutions make very little progress in character-building. Poor fallen human nature needs all the braces and supports which a well-directed will can give it. We are not advocating hasty, and sometimes unreasonable vows, resolutions, and pledges, thoughtlessly taken and soon broken. What we have in mind is a thoughtful, rational consideration of the matter, a full determination to pursue the way which deliberate judgment tells one is the proper course. In general, the New Year is a time of preparation for a fresh start in life.

On the other hand, the close of the old year is the time for taking stock and for estimating the profits and losses of the year. In other words, it is a time of judgment, or decision. It is a time for issuing dividends, or wise investments. It is a time for the meeting of directors and for the election of officers and servants for the incoming year. So at the close of this Gospel Age, its affairs are being wound up. The Lord is judging His people, and is about to reward the faithful in glory. Meantime, the world must be set in order for the inauguration of the New Order, the Messianic Kingdom.

The Real Cause of Present Conditions

According to the Bible, earth is the one province of the Universe which is in rebellion against the Creator and at variance with His wise and beneficent Laws. Man, the King of the earth, was created in the image and likeness of God, with the Divine Law written in his heart, and only "a little lower than the angels." (Psalm 8:5.) But this earthly king, Adam, rebelled against his Over-Lord, Jehovah, disobeyed His Laws and brought himself under a sentence of death—"Dying, thou shalt die."—Genesis 2:17; Romans 5:12.

The laws of heredity have so operated that to-day the children of Adam find the average of life only 35 years, and but few individuals pass the century mark. But Adam in his perfection, although less favorably circumstanced, was nine hundred and thirty years in dying. The dying experiences of the race are manifested in mental and moral degradation, as well as in physical degeneracy. With all our knowledge and medical skill the race continue to weaken and the ratio of the insane to increase.

Once Bible students would have stated that God is upon the throne of earth and delights in the present order, which the Bible declares to be a reign of Sin and Death. Once Bible students would have declared that, not satisfied with present conditions, appalling as they are, the Creator has arranged that at death all humanity except the Elect Church shall be turned over fully to the control of demons, who by Divine foreordination will be empowered to torture everlastingly the poor unfortunates of Adam's family beyond the power of human tongue to tell.

These same Bible students would have resented the suggestion that God is NOT reigning over the earth; and that, instead, the world is under the domination of Satan, "the Prince of this world." (John 14:30.) But with facilities for Bible study far superior to anything which our forefathers enjoyed, Bible students are finding that Christian people have overlooked many features of the Divine Record. As the eyes of their understanding gradually open wider and wider, they are seeing lengths, breadths, heights, and depths of God's Wisdom, Love, Justice, and Power of which they never before dreamed.

We are finding that the horrible teachings of the past, which have caused so generally a spiritual nausea, came not from the Bible, but are "doctrines of demons," promulgated during the Dark Ages. St. Paul tells us that the present blindness and ignorance, which hinder mankind from seeing and appreciating the real character of God and the Divine Plan for human salvation, are deceptions by Satan, "the god of this world."—1 Timothy 4:1; 2 Corinthians 4:4.

A Pertinent Query.

Now, properly enough, comes the query, "If Satan is ruling amongst mankind as a god, or prince of this world, where did he get his authority and power? Did God turn the control of mankind over to demons?"

The Bible answers all our queries. God did not give the dominion of earth to Satan, but to man. In proportion as man lost his perfection and became weak in mind and in body, he became the slave of Satan and Sin. Satan and the fallen angels have exercised—especially during the last forty centuries—all their power and ingenuity for the ensnarement and degradation of man. Their influence would have been all powerful for man's overthrow, had not the Almighty provided humanity with will power and to a large extent forced the evil spirits to respect it.

As a result, we see that human depravity has made much less rapid progress than it might have done. To some extent man still possesses the image of God, in which he was created. Many still possess a natural appreciation of truth and righteousness, which under God's arrangement the fallen angels are not able to overcome. If mankind realized the true situation, undoubtedly the human will would be more persistently than ever exercised in opposition to the wiles of the Devil. As it is, these evil spirits hide their identity, and through spirit mediums personate the dead, who according to the Bible, "know not anything," being asleep in death until the Resurrection Morning.—Ecclesiastes 9:5,6,10; Psalm 146:4; Job 14:20-22; Genesis 3:19; John 5:28,29.

"I Make All Things New."

By the Heavenly Father's appointment, the Redeemer of men is to be the great King of Glory, who will reign for a thousand years and "make all things new." Repeatedly He tells us that the first work of the New Dispensation will be the binding of Satan. Not only is this referred to in Revelation 20:1-3, but also in our Lord's parables.

Jesus declared that when the appointed time should come His Second Advent would take place. He likened it to the coming of a thief in the night, when men in general would be off guard, not expectant of a change in the rulership of earth. He intimated that His loyal saints will first be taken, while mankind will be in ignorance of the fact that the time has come for the Reign of Righteousness. Next the Son of Man will "bind the strong man, and then He will spoil his house"—overthrow present arrangements. (Matthew 12:22-29; 24:42-44.) This picture implies a struggle; for the strong man, Satan, has had a great host serving him, ignorant of the fact that he is a usurper and that many of his laws are unjust.

Many of them have never understood that He who redeemed the world by the sacrifice of Himself holds a Divine appointment to be the King of Earth, to quell the rebellion and to bring back into harmony with God all the willing and obedient. Many do not know that this Messianic Kingdom will be God's answer to the Redeemer's prayer, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in Heaven." Many therefore do not know that all things are to be made new; and that the time appointed by the Father for this great work is a period of one thousand years, now chronologically due to begin.

Not knowing these things, many will be found fighting against God, thinking that in supporting the institutions of the Prince of this world they are doing God service. The Redeemer intimated most distinctly that some of these ignorant ones will be prominent in the ministry of His own Church. They will be surprised, when the honors of the Kingdom are distributed, that they will receive none; but will suffer humiliation and tribulation as unfaithful servants. The Masters words respecting this class are, "Many will say unto Me in that Day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied [preached] in Thy name? in Thy name have cast out devils? and in Thy name done many wonderful works?"

But the New King will say to them, "Depart from Me"—come not near to share in My Kingdom. Instead of working righteousness, you have been workers of iniquity. Instead of serving Me as ambassadors for My Kingdom and properly representing Me before men, you have done the reverse. You have upheld unrighteousness. You have promulgated doctrines of demons, and have been My adversaries, not My servants. Depart with weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth, expressive of your disappointment, to be sharers with the world in its great Time of Trouble, from which My faithful Bride class shall be delivered.

Whatever reformation your share in that tribulation shall effect will determine what I may do for you or with you in the future, in harmony with the Divine arrangements. But I cannot recognize you as in any sense worthy of the glory, honor, and immortality which shall be accorded to the Bride class.—Paraphrase on Matthew 7:22,23; 13:40-43; 25:30; Luke 13:25-28; 13:45-48.

Two Parallel Ages.

Looking at the time of the change from the Jewish Age to the Gospel Age, we perceive that during a period of forty years God dealt especially with Fleshly Israel—from the beginning of the ministry of Jesus until the destruction of Jerusalem by the army of Titus. That forty-year period the Master styled the Harvest of that Age. The gathering of the wheat class progressed close down to the consummation of that Harvest—the separating of the chaff class meanwhile taking place.—John 4:35-38; Matthew 3:11,12.

Finally, when the wheat had all been gathered into the garner of the New Dispensation, by the begetting of the Holy Spirit, the chaff was consumed in a time of trouble which utterly destroyed the Jewish polity. The destruction of the chaff did not signify the annihilation of unbelieving Jews nor the eternal torture. It represented parabolically the complete destruction of their Jewish hopes. Those hopes have lain buried for eighteen centuries, and are only now reviving—in the form of Zionism.

The parable of the Wheat and the Tares (Matthew 13:24-30) pictures the Lord's work during the Gospel Age. The Master and His Apostles sowed only good seed, the pure Message of the Messianic Kingdom, to which a saintly few would attain and which ultimately would bless all the families of the earth. But Satan, through his various agencies—many of whom were the livery of Christ), oversowed the wheat-field with tare seed—false doctrines, "doctrines of demons."

From this unauthorized sowing by the Adversary—as a result of these false doctrines which he caused to be promulgated throughout Christendom—many nominally came into the Church of Christ. These never really professed to be wheat, never had the begetting of the Holy Spirit, never were disciples in the only sense that Christ acknowledges any to be His followers.

As tares resemble wheat, so these deceived people, the progeny of false doctrines, think themselves to be Christians. They greatly outnumber the true Christians, just as the chaff of the Jewish nation outnumbered the "Israelites indeed." As God then gathered the wheat, the "Israelites indeed," in the spiritual House of Sons by the begetting of the Holy Spirit, so now He will gather the faithful ones of this Gospel Age into the Heavenly Garner by the change of the First Resurrection. As the prospects and the hopes of the nominal Israelites, the chaff class, were consumed in the great time of trouble which closed that Age, so the hopes and the prospects of the tare class will perish in the great fire, or Time of Trouble, with which this Gospel Age is closing.

"The Old Order Passeth."

The dispensational change near at hand will be much greater than that of eighteen centuries ago. There, our Lord Jesus merely went forth the Message for the calling out of His Church. But here, the Church, having been completed, is to be glorified; and the Kingdom of Messiah is to overthrow completely the kingdom of Satan. In illustrating the radical change which is to take place in the near future, the Scriptures refer to the Deluge, which completely overthrew the systems of wickedness and unrighteousness then prevailing.—Matthew 24:37-39; Luke 17:26-30.

The Apostle Peter tells us that in the end of this Age the overthrow of present institutions will be as complete as in the days of the Deluge. He declares that the present earthly elements—Capital and Labor, aristocracy and common people, plutocracy and socialists—will be engaged in a terrible strife, which can be properly symbolized only by a consuming fire. More than this, St. Peter declares that the heavens also will take fire—ecclesiasticism will become involved in the strife and will pass away with a great commotion.—2 Peter 3:1-13.

But let us remember that it is neither the physical earth nor the Heaven of God's habitation that will burn up. It will be merely the social and religious institutions which, under the supervision of the Prince of this world, are styled "the present evil world," or imperfect arrangement.

As St. Peter also points out, the present order will be superseded by a New Order, which the Apostle calls "new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." The new heavens will be the Church in glory, in Kingdom power. The new earth will be the new social arrangements instituted, guided, directed by the new heavens—Messiah's Kingdom. The New Kingdom will enforce its laws as with a rod of iron—inflexibly. No longer will it be true that whosoever will live godly shall suffer persecution, and have all manner of evil said against him falsely, as a reward of faithfulness to Christ and the Truth. On the contrary, in the Day of Messiah's Kingdom, the righteous shall flourish, and all willful evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death.—Psalm 72:7; 37:9.

The Work of the Kingdom.

Through the Prophet the Lord calls attention to this new condition, saying, "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." (Isaiah 65:17.) Our context tells us of this same "new heavens and new earth" condition as taking the place of the present order of things. Then it describes the Church under the symbolism of "the New Jerusalem," the capital of Messiah's Kingdom, and the centre from which authority will go forth for mankind's assistance out of the fallen conditions of sin and death.

We also read that through those blessed provisions, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things [the present evil world] are passed away." The work of renewing will require the entire thousand years of Messiah's Kingdom, and will be successful to the highest degree.

Let all whose eyes of understanding have been opened to see these things rejoice, and tell abroad the glorious story that the period of the reign of Sin and Death is expiring; and that the new period of the Reign of Righteousness is near at hand, bringing life everlasting to every one who will be obedient. With this thought before our minds, the New Year before us will bring us joyful suggestions, helpful in all the experiences of life—especially to those who have become followers of Jesus. Those who are seeking to walk in His steps, willing to suffer with Him for the sake of the Truth, shall in due time be glorified together with Him, as members of His Elect Bride class.

KIDNEY DISEASE WAS KILLING HIM

Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives" The Great Kidney Remedy

HAGERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 29th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. Having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their action was mild, and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever."

SERGEANT OZANNE—Of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, victim of a mysterious murder in a British training camp. He was found stabbed to death in a stable. Lieut. CHECK PARIS FOOD PRICES.

Authorities Issue Lists for Public—Threaten Sugar Exchange.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The authorities here have begun a campaign against the high prices of commodities, which average 20 to 35 per cent. dearer than before the war. Two of the chief causes—high freight and reduced transportation facilities—are due to the war and scarcely curable, but commissions have been appointed to suggest possible remedies.

A third cause—deliberate inflation by speculators—will be met unflinchingly. Commerce Minister Clementel yesterday informed President Moutard of the Sugar Exchange that the Government considered the wholesale rate of 82 francs per 100 kilos of No. 3 white sugar exactly seven francs too high and ordered the exchange to forbid dealing there until the price was lowered or adequate reasons for its present level were given. M. Clementel met M. Moutard's protestations by a threat to put on the market large stocks of this sugar, which the Government holds, at a price of 75 francs. The press comments on his action favorably and expects it to be effective.

To prevent overcharging by retailers the police have instituted a system of weekly lists of currant wholesale and retail prices which grocers and butchers must exhibit prominently on their premises. The scheme permits the public to judge whether a fair price is being asked, but small tradesmen are not forced to adhere absolutely to the list rates when doing so would involve loss.

The police to-day announce their intention to extend the scheme as regards butchers by issuing different colored lists of the various qualitites of meat—green for the best, then yellow, and then red—to protect the public against the evasion of the old list prices by the statement, "They refer to the cheaper qualities, but I charge more because I sell better meat."

The public generally regards the increased cost of living as an unavoidable consequence of the war. Grumblers are often silenced by the remark, "Anyhow, things are much worse in Germany," which quickly restores good humor.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

FIGHTING THE BARBED WIRE

Ingenious Methods Used to Destroy Entanglements.

To destroy barbed wire entanglements successfully has become one of the chief problems of the war, and many and ingenious are the expedients that have been devised to that end.

Thus, in the fighting around Warsaw last January, the Germans rolled barrels of clay down the slopes against the lines held by the Russians on the Bzura. These moved by their own weight, tore through the barbed wire, and the Germans, of course followed close behind.

Several times the Italians have sacrificed entire herds of their semi-wild mountain cattle by stampeding them down hill against the Austrian entanglements—a dodge reminiscent of the latter stages of the Boer War, when De Wet's burghers adopted a similar plan, and with like results.

Our Australians and Canadians have used the lasso more than once, tearing up posts and entanglements and yanking them back into their own lines. Upon one occasion, too, a strong-armed cowboy overshot the marke, his lariat landed in a German trench and over the head and shoulders of one of the occupants, who was forthwith dragged, struggling and kicking, out from among his astonished companions and into our opposing trench some thirty yards distant.

Von Hindenburg's men, again, are reported to be in possession of huge expanding plier, weighing some hundredweights, that are capable of cutting entanglements to pieces at a distance of forty yards, being protected, apparently, from the German trenches across the "dead ground," and worked by machinery at the base.

Once, too, this some yersatile commander destroyed a section of entanglements by sending a traction engine at full speed against it,—a very effective, if somewhat costly, expedient.—"Pearson's."

Take a piece of paper about two (2) inches longer than it is wide. Fold the paper in the shape of a triangle, leaving the two inches of space extending beyond the triangle, then fold this triangle into another triangle, half the size of the original one, still leaving the two inch margin, then fold this in half, running from the point of the triangle to the bottom, then fold the remaining portion in exactly half, then cut folded part exactly in half, lengthwise. Result, a cross, and the complete letters, H-E-L-L. There will be surplus pieces of paper remaining.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Twenty-four Hour Romance.

It is only the solemn truth to write that Miss Sarah Bingham was thirty-seven years old and unmarried and that she had romance in her soul, but it would be ungallant to add that she was in the matrimonial market and had been ever since she arrived at the age of twenty. She had simply waited. She could afford to wait and persisted in giving her age as twenty-five right along and making herself believe that time was standing still on her account.

Miss Sarah was feeling in this serene and optimistic mood when she was invited by friends to be their guest at a summer hotel on the banks of a lake. They didn't consult her romance as much as their own interest. They had two children and a dog, and they figured on making the old maid work for her board and lodgings. She fell into the trap, but not to her detriment. One of the male guests of the hotel, who might not have noticed her in any other walk, saw her as nurse and dog guardian and made advances. This guest was darkly supposed to be an actor—an actor who played great parts and made a great success of his job, but who was there incog. and wished to remain so. The other guests were respecting this wish, but following him about with bated breath.

Actors sometimes get queer notions into their heads, and Mr. Melsotte got one into his. It was that Miss Sarah would make the greatest Juliet he ever saw on the stage. She had the form, the voice, the eyes, the nose, the chin and the toes. All that was lacking were cash and a manager and the removal of just one tiny doubt—a doubt no larger than the head of a brass pin. Did she have the necessary romance? If she did, then all was well; if she didn't, then alas! It has been stated that Miss Sarah did have romance and doted on it, but the next thing was to prove it to the actor. She took two days to cogitate and then went ahead. The hotel was surrounded by woods on three sides. One morning Miss Sarah left the whimpering dog and the howling children behind and started for the green wood and was soon lost to sight. She would be missed, searched for, found and be talked of as romantic.

Miss Sarah was missed. The idea was that she had been drowned. More than half the guests turned out to drag the bottom of the lake. The actor was not one of them. Coincident with the alarm he had been told by a fat woman that Miss Sarah hadn't a dollar to her name.

One woman asserted her belief that the missing female had eloped with a tin peddler that had been seen driving past the hotel at an early morning hour, and in her excitement another woman said that any young lady that would leave a dog and two children to weep and wail by themselves should be severely dealt with on her return, dead or alive. These opinions were expressed to the actor for the purpose of drawing him out, but he refused to be drawn. He had just sat down to a mint julep with two straws in it, and why worry?

Miss Sarah had entered the wood with her heart aflame with romance She hustled her way along for half a mile and then halted for the actor to arrive at the head of a rescuing party. He didn't arrive. She waited for an hour and then started to walk back. Her feelings were hurt, and she lost the points of the compass and became lost for good. When she discovered this fact she called and screamed, but only the chipmunks and the woodpeckers answered. She ran this way and stumbled over roots. She ran that way and went splashing into a creek. There was romance in the greenwood, but it was farther on. All that long, long day Miss Sarah was lost in the depths.

It was almost sundown when her good genius finally guided her to a clearing with a log cabin in the midst of it. Seated at the door of the cabin was a middle aged man in homespun. He rose up and addressed her as "marm" and wanted to know all about it. When he had been told he declared that it was the romanticist thing he had ever heard of. In her wanderings she had walked seven miles. She had escaped bears and "injuns" and wildcats, and if she wasn't what they called a heroine then he didn't know a turnip from a "tater bug."

Miss Sarah was tired, and she rested. She was hungry, and he fed her on pudding and milk. She wanted to get back to the hotel and enjoy her triumph, and he yoked up his oxen to the lumber wagon and drove her there through the moonlight. The guests saw her coming and got ready to receive her. There was icy frigidity. There was a general attitude of doubt and suspicion. There were sneers at romance. When the humiliated and disarranged maiden looked at the actor in an appealing way he turned his head aside and made it very plain that she would never prance around behind the footlights with his connivance. The farmer had waited for the heroics, and he saw that there were none coming to her. He saw her crushed instead, and he stepped for ward and touched her on the arm and said:

"Say, gal, they don't 'pear to appreciate heroines here. Come and be my heroine. I'll drive over ag'in tomorrow for your answer."

And he did, and he got it, and then the guests were all jealous because a romantic young lady had struck a good thing instead of drowning herself in the lake or starving to death in the wood.

About a thousand years ago Sadi wrote:

"A man had sore eyes. He went to a horse doctor, who applied to his eyes what he used for his horses. The man became blind. He took the case before the judge, who said: 'No damages. If this fellow were not an ass he would not have gone to a farrier.'"

GREAT OFFENSIVES EXPECTED ON WEST FRONT IN SPRING

France Looks for Decision of Some Sort in Fall, Says Writer in Forecast

PARIS, Dec. 30.—Five significant events punctuated the year just drawing to a close as seen from the French point of view: The Battle of Champagne, the Balkan muddle, the change of governments, the creation of an Inter-Ally War Council, and the nomination of General Joffre as Commander-in-Chief of all the French armies, whatever the theatre of operations.

On the whole France regards the past year as one without brilliance so far as she or the Allies are concerned. Her victories have been rather negative. While her enemy has been making some great runs around the ends, she and those fighting with her have succeeded in keeping the ball pretty well in the middle of the field. The first half of the game seems about over, the Teutons have the ball, but there have been no touchdowns. That is about the way the common Frenchman sizes up the situation at the close of 1915.

The Battle of Champagne was important because it was the very first battle to be fought under present trench-perfect conditions; it gave the French soldier a proper measure of the enemy and a proper measure of himself. Though no important strategic point was gained by this victory, undoubtedly it will have its effect on 1916 operations because it settled several important points.

Look for Results.

The Inter-Ally War Council leads Frenchmen to believe that the mistakes of the past are not likely to be repeated; from now on they have determined that the war plans of the Allies will dovetail and that the coming year will register some real results.

The Balkan muddle has given France more anxiety, perhaps, than any other war phase during 1915. Frenchmen openly admit failure there both diplomatically and military. Greece three times offered to join the Allies, once even before the Battle of the Marne, in 1914, but each time she was refused admission. Then, when the Allies had fallen down at the Dardanelles and in Bulgaria and asked her to come in, she had changed her mind. It is admitted in certain circles, that had France and the Allies acted in concert and at the proper time, there is not the slightest doubt that Greece would have led the dance, that Bulgaria and Roumania would to-day be fighting on the Allies' side and that the multi-coloured flags of Germany's opponents would to-day be floating over the minarets of Constantinople.

The resignation of Theophile Delcasse, considered one of the greatest of Frenchmen, from the office of Minister of Foreign Affairs, was due uniquely to the Balkan developments. Some say he opposed the sending of troops to Salonika; others declare he long ago advocated Big Stick methods in the Near East, and that because his diplomacy there was not strongly enough backed up. King Ferdinand joined hands with the Kaiser instead of with the Allies. Take your choice. Whatever his reasons for resigning, his departure was the occasion of a complete reorganization of the government, Premier Rene Viviani resigning to make way for M. Aristide Briand. The presence of M. Briand as Prime Minister is significant. He is known as a man of action, of initiative and strong measures.

Has Supreme Command.

The nomination of General Joffre as supreme Generalissimo of all the French troops means two things: First that Joffre will have absolute authority in disposing his armies and planning campaigns; second, the French hope that the British will take the hint and agree to a full and complete co-ordination of all available forces. Competent authorities agree that the German successes have been the result of a central control of effectives, permitting rapid decisions quickly put into effect, whereas the Allies have not acted properly in concert, and when at last, after long delays they did get together, the measures they agreed upon were slowly put into operation. The Inter-Ally War Council, composed of men who have the power to act, as it is said, Joffre will have from now on, ought to show results during the coming year.

Summed up, France's last year has been largely one of preparation. She hopes the coming year will be one of execution. People here call the new Cabinet the Cabinet of Victory just as they call the new French loan of about 20 billion francs, the Loan of Victory.

The Frenchman hopes for peace during 1916. He considers the American peace talk the greatest puzzle of the year, because peace now could mean but one thing, Defeat of the Allies.

Joffre's Policy.

The elevation of Joffre to his new position is an official commendation of his war policy, summed up by the experts as wearing the enemy down by "attrition," which Joffre calls "nibbling." Naturally this policy will be in force so long as Joffre is in the saddle. France made three heavy drives at the Germans during 1915—in March, May, and September, but these drives were all feelers, I am told, to test the strength of the German line. The French soldier will tell you that French Man-power will outlast German Man-power, thanks to Joffre's nibbling; that sooner or later the German wall of steel will prove to be imitation; and, following a feeler the real drive will tour through the hole thus made, and end the row.

A Berlin interview quotes General Von Kluck as forecasting a drive towards Paris next spring. A French general told me that he hoped Von Kluck was right, as in that case the slaughter of Germans would be on such a vast scale that the whole world would gasp, used as it is to baths in blood. Those who have inspected the some 50-mile width of American barbed wire between Paris and the Front, while not doubting that another attempt is possible, or even probable, fail to see how it can succeed.

Here, then, is the forecast for 1916.

Comparative quiet along the Western front until spring; then general offensives, both French and German; operations probable throughout; the summer, with a decision of some sort in the fall.

This is a guess, but it is as good as any, whether from a general or a private. Of only one thing can one be certain: All the Expert dope is wrong.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duscios, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand—along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. TWO MOTHERS TELL

How Their Sickly Children Were Made Strong and Well.

"For six years our little girl suffered from a bronchial trouble, she had no appetite, could not sleep and was so nervous we had to keep her out of school. The doctors said nothing but a change of climate would help her. We were discouraged, when one day a friend asked us to try Vinol, and after taking six bottles she does not look like the same child. She has a fine appetite, is lively, healthy and well, and Vinol did it all."—Mrs. F. E. Hufford, Iola, Kas.

Another child made strong:—

"The measles left my little girl thin and delicate, and the doctor's medicine did not seem to build her up. I read about Vinol and got a bottle, and her improvement was rapid, her strength returned and she is now as well as ever."—Mrs. E. Linot, Pittsburg, Pa.

We ask every Peterborough mother of a frail, sickly, ailing child to try Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it does not restore her child's normal health. McDermid & Jury, Druggists; E. L. Payne, Druggist, Peterborough, Ont.

Russia, With a Tremendous Army, Is Ready to Strike

Traveller Compares Empire to Great Armory—Mr. Robert Bacon, Back to Report on American Ambulance, Says Allies Are Working in Absolute Unity.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.— Among the American liner New Yorks' cabin passengers was Mr. Robert Bacon, formerly Ambassador to France. He is going to Washington and soon will present a detailed report of the activities of the American Ambulance in France.

"Regardless of all reports to the contrary," Mr. Bacon said, "there is nothing but absolute unity among the allied nations. Their co-operation and the effective manner in which they are carrying forward their joint movements are simply marvellous. They may have their little isolated internal discussions, but these do not affect the situation in any way."

American Ambulance Indispensable.

Concerning the American Ambulance report which he has brought from France with him, Mr. Bacon said:

"The report is very satisfactory indeed. The work at present is costing about $1,000 a day and has now reached such a stage of importance in the eyes of humanity that it would be criminal even to interrupt it. It is for the people of the United States to carry it on.

"The expense incurred by the work is not so great as it was some time ago, while the efficiency has improved enormously. The work has been improved systematically and recently the Ambulance obtained an additional number of beds, several hundred of them, which considerably increases the facilities for the work. These beds obtained by removing patients who did not require constant attention to other places where the American surgeons visit them and treat their injuries."

Mr. Harold N. McMahon, representative of the Submarine Signal Company, of Boston, returned on board the New York after several months in Russia and other belligerent countries.

"I was in the vicinity of Riga about eight weeks ago," said Mr. McMahon, "and the defence lines there are such that the entire German army could not penetrate them. Upon all sides were apparent the preparations being made by Russia for a great offensive movement, and almost any day we may expect to hear of the commencement of a great drive.

"Russia is drilling every available man of military age in the country. All public buildings have been converted into armouries and drill halls, and the work is going on steadily. I learned that Russia now is able to arm and equip for the field an enormous force of men. They have an ample supply of arms and munitions, mostly from the United States and Japan. The quantity is astonishing. Much of the supplies that were supposed to have been shipped to France and Great Britain have been sent free to the eastern front.

Freeing Mediterranean of Submarines.

"Seven weeks ago I was in the Crimea and say twelve transports laden with first line troops leave for a destination which was not revealed. Every one supposed, however, that the troops were destined to make a landing at Varna, and from there commence the projected invasion of Bulgaria from the coast. The transports were convoyed by a strong naval escort."

In the matter of submarine development, Mr. McMahon said Italy is making great strides. All of the latest devices in the perfecting of subsurface craft the Italian experts are utilizing to the utmost and soon will have a powerful fleet in commission. Mr. McMahon regards the submarine activities of the so-called Austrian vessels in the Mediterranean as being destined to end soon. The Mediterranean, like the waters around the British Isles, he said, is being guarded by gun carrying hydroplanes that proved deadly to the German warfare in the North Sea.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

The plain shirt waist is the one which is enjoying greatest popularity at the present moment. It is the garment of utility and is an excellent help in making a one piece dress of a shirt waist combination, for it may be made of the same materials as the dress, and will thus appear to be really a part of it, or else it may be of something entirely different and form part of a tailored suit.

The model shown in the accompanying illustration is quite regulation and in excellent style. The neck may be finished in either of two ways. It may have a high stock collar, with tiny overhanging points, or it may be made open and trimmed with a wide Quaker collar. Both styles are provided for in this pattern.

The waist is full in front, gathered along the shoulders, and in the back it is provided with a small straight yoke, below which the fabric is gathered, and is quite full. The closing in the centre of the front may be made with visible buttons, singly or in groups, or with snap fasteners, the bottoms serving merely as a trimming.

The sleeves are plain and regulation. They are fitted at the shoulder, but have some fulness at the wrist, and here they are finished with a straight band. If a short sleeve be preferred a turnback cuff is generally used.

For separate use such waists are made of voile, crepe de Chine, net, lace and the like, and also of taffetas, silk and messaline. When worn as part of a costume they are of the same material as the skirt.

The waist pattern, No. 7330, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36 inch material.

For separate use such waists are made

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number of pattern required, and age of a child.

WILL OUST OSBORNE FROM SING SING

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 31—Thomas Mott Osborne must resign to-morrow from the Wardenship of Sing Sing or he will be summarily removed. This decision was reached by Governor Whitman. It followed conferences, between the Governor, John B. Riley, Superintendent of Prisons, and Prof. George W. Kirchwey of Columbia University.

Opportunity was given Mr. Osborne to-night to resign, but he refused.

"If I am to get out," he said, "they will have to kick me out. I shall not resign. I am innocent of all these charges."

The Governor's attitude was defined to-night as follows:

"It is impossible for Mr. Osborne to remain Warden of Sing Sing while he is being tried for charges of gross mismanagement and personal immorality.

"Whatever may be the truth of these allegations, his continuance in office at this time would be highly improper."

KEEP LIVER ACTIVE AND BOWELS CLEAN WITH "CASCARETS"

Best When Bilious, Sick, Headachy, Constipated or for Bad Breath or Sour Stomach

Be cheerful! Clean up inside to-night and feel fine. Take Cascarets to liven your liver and clean the bowels and stop headaches, a bad cold, biliousness, offensive breath, coated tongue, sallowness, sour stomach, and gases. To-night take Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. Wake up feeling grand—Everybody's doing it. Cascarets best laxative for children also.

G. K. CHESTERTON SEES KAISER BILL KEEPER OF "PUB"

Famous Writer has Other Suggestions for Post-Bellum Arrangements

LONDON, Dec. 31.—"What shall we do with the kaiser?" is a question which greatly preoccupies G. K. Chesterton in an interesting booklet just issued entitled "The Crimes of England." The title is explained by Mr. Chesterton by giving an amusing list of the past political and military sins of Great Britain.

"On many occasions we have been very wrong indeed," says Mr. Chesterton in a foreward to the German professors. Those occasions were "when we took part in preventing Europe from putting a term to the impious piracies of Frederick the Great; when we allowed the triumph over Napoleon to be soiled with the mire and blood of Blucher's sullen savages; when we allowed the peaceful king of Denmark to be robbed in broad daylight by a brigand named Bismarck, and when we allowed the Prussian swashbucklers to enslave and silence the French province which they could neither govern nor persuade."

As to the fate of the German emperor, Mr. Chesterton says:

"Our more feminine advisers incline to the view that he should be shot. This is to make a mistake about the very nature of hereditary monarchy. Assuredly the emperor William at his worst would be entitled to say to his amiable Crown Prince what Charles II. said when his brother warned him of the plots of assassins: 'They will never kill me to make you king.' Others of greater monstrosity of mind have suggested that he should be sent to St. Helena. So far as an estimate of his historical importance goes, he might as well be sent to Mount Calvary."

"G. C. K. C." in telling what he thinks really ought to be done with the kaiser, recalls those old public houses, sometimes to be seen in the south of England, with the sign "The King of Prussia." These inn signs, generally a dark and faded portrait in a cocked hat, are believed to commemorate the visit of the allies after Waterloo.

"Whether the placing of the present German emperor in charge of one of these wayside public houses would be a jest after his own heart possibly remains to be seen. But it would be much more melodious and fitting and than any of the sublime enthusiasts which his enemies provide for him. The old sign, creaking above him as he sat on the bench outside his home of exile would be a much more genuine memory of the real greatness of his race than the modern and almost gimcrack stars and garters that were puffed down in Windsor chapel."

The author frames three rules for German controversalists:

"Stick to one excuse.

"When telling lies necessary for German international standing don't tell the lies to the people who know the truth.

"Don't perpetually boast that you are cultured in language, which proves that you are not."

LAWYER'S SUDDEN DEMISE

S. J. Young, American Consul at Trenton Dies on Way Home.

TRENTON, Dec. 31.—Stephen J. Young, a leading lawyer and one of the most respected citizens of Trenton, died suddenly on the way home from his office at noon. He had a severe sickness last spring from which he never really recovered, and had resumed his office work only a few weeks. He had an extensive office practice, was American Consul, and took an active interest in the School Board, having been its Chairman for several years. He was a man of quiet habits, very upright and trustworthy in all his dealings. He leaves a wife, one son, Alfred, Accountant in the Bank of Montreal, here, and two daughters, Mrs. Wright of Louisville, Ky., and Lucy at home.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Color, Gloss, and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractive ness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

United States Worried Over Latest Disaster

RUSSIANS MAKE PROGRESS IN BUKOWINA

Fresh Submarine Horrors Have Caused Excitement In America

President Wilson Cancels His Vacation and Returns to Washington to Watch The Situation---Sinking of Persia and Glengyle Makes The Severing of Diplomatic Relations With Central Powers Look Probable---Berlin Claims Successful Blasting Operations in West.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The seriousness of the international situation caused by the news of the sinking of the British steamer Glengyle, following close on the sinking of the Persia, caused President Wilson to-day to determine to cut short his vacation and return to Washington as soon as possible. He is expected to reach the White House early to-morrow morning. Reports gained circulation that the President would call a meeting of the Cabinet immediately upon his return to take up the international situation. He has been in close touch with officials both at the White House and at the State Department for the last 48 hours. It was said to-day in both these circles that "no effort should be made to minimize the seriousness of the situation." It was strongly intimated that an understanding with all Central Powers on the submarine situation will be demanded at once by this Government.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—According to a cable from Paris to-day three hundred Americans who sailed on the liner Lafayette from Havre New Year's Day received messages wishing them a happy New Year, but warning them that the vessel would meet the same fate as the Lusitania. Several cancelled passages and left the steamer before she cast off from the docks.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The presence aboard the liner Persia of a 4.7 inch gun and a number of British officers on the way to Egypt as reported to the State Department here is not regarded of importance, as it is not considered that such a condition would make it a troopship or armed for defence purposes.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Glengyle was sunk in the Mediterranean while en route from the Far East to Italian ports.

The Glengyle left Singapore on December 6th bound for London with a cargo of butter and eggs.

TOKIO, Jan. 3.—The announcement is made by the Jiji Shimpo that a squadron of Japanese warships will sail for the Suez Canal presumably to protect Japanese shipping. It is said the armoured cruisers Kasuga, Tokiwa and Chitose have been assigned for this service.

COPENHAGEN, Jan. 3.—Germany has granted permission for the Ford peace party to cross German soil en route to The Hague from Copenhagen it was announced to-day. No opportunity will be offered for spreading peace propaganda on Teuton soil. It is understood that none of the members of the party will be permitted to leave the train while within the borders of Germany. The neutral peace conference at The Hague will last only a few days.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Henry Ford to-day, pale and haggard looking, leaned against the wall of his peace headquarters here and reiterated his belief that the cruise of the peace delegates to Europe will eventually prove successful. "The American movement will have good effect upon the people of the warring countries," said Ford, "because it will open their eyes to the attitude of the outside world." Dropping for the time being his role of world pacifier, Ford to-day resumed his less romantic character of auto manufacturer and visited the auto show. He will leave for Detroit late this evening intending to rest up for a long time.

BERLIN'S CLAIMS.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The War Office announced to-day: "North of the road from LaBassee to Bethune our blasting operations met with complete success. The enemy's fighting and reserve trenches were buried. The survivors were cut down by German rifles and machine guns.

"In combination with the blasting operations there was a general artillery attack on a broad front surprising the occupants of the enemy trenches."

T.A.S. Anniversary On Sunday Next

Other Notes From The Catholic Churches of The City

Next Sunday St. Peter's T.A.S. will celebrate its 16th anniversary. It is expected that all the members in the city will attend communion on that day. The members of the Society from Bishop O'Brien down are determined that this shall be a year of progress in membership. Sixteen years of total abstinence have proved its value to the spiritual and temporal welfare of the people. An endeavour will be made to bring in fifty new members for the next meeting of St. Peter's branch.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Sunday morning preached a strong temperance sermon, and on New Year's Day presented a foreword for the guidance of the congregation throughout the year. Among the points touched upon was that of honest dealing, the payment of bills and meeting similar obligations.

Sunday evening Rev. Father McAuley of the Sacred Heart church, preached on "The Holy Name," making an eloquent appeal for honouring the name of God.

In keeping with the proclamation issued by the Lieutenant-Governor, special prayers were offered up yesterday in the Catholic churches of the city and diocese of Peterborough for the cause the Empire and her Allies have undertaken, and "for a speedy and favourable peace."

Thursday, January 6th, the feast of the Epiphany, is a holiday, and will be observed by special masses in the three churches.

Destructive Fire On Charlotte St.

The gent.'s furnishing store of E. G. Wellwood, Charlotte Street, was badly gutted by fire on Saturday afternoon. The alarm was rung in at 6.20 o'clock, and it was nearly an hour later before the fire was finally extinguished. The cause of the fire is unknown. The damage will be considerable, and will be partly covered by insurance.

31 Applications For Divorce Made

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—Thirty-three applications for divorce are scheduled for the coming session of Parliament, including that of Major Gault of the Princess Pats regiment. Of cities mentioned, Toronto heads the list with 11 applications. There are 21 altogether from Ontario, including May P. Leather of Kingston.

MAYORALTY VOTE A TOSS UP SAYS MAN ON STREET

Very Clean Contest Is All Over But The Counting and Most People Profess Doubts as to What The Figures Will Show—Aldermanic Affair Quiet

MONAGHAN HAS REAL FIGHT

The mayoralty contest is being so keenly fought to-day that there is scarcely a mention of the other elections. The general feeling on the street is that it is anybody's game, that the vote will be fairly large and decidedly close. Each of the mayoralty candidates was confident of victory, but the street produced few prophecies as to which way the balloting would swing.

Getting out the voters is always the big task of election day and vehicles of all kinds were early and active on the streets. The little old Fords ambled right along over the crust-crowned streets, and apparently the most of them were manned by Duffus workers. Whatever returns the adding machines total to-night, this election will go down as one of the closest, cleanest and most interesting mayoralty elections the city has ever seen. The figures may not be as close as expected, but whoever leads the procession to-night will appreciate the fact that he has been through a real contest.

The results will be bulletined at the Examiner office to-night as soon as they are received, and by eight o'clock the citizens should know who is "to save" them during 1916.

Some woman called up at one o'clock asking for the standing of the candidates at that hour.

Down in Monaghan they say there is a real hot contest waging with "Billy" Howden storming the McIntosh trenches all along the line. Bright and early there were farm sleighs in the city for township, voters and quite a contingent was drawn from the armouries.

Nothing definite has been heard from Smith, but the battle in that section doubtless has a few interesting features of its own. Mr. R. Scott is in the field against Fred McKee, reeve during the past year.

Trains To Lakefield Delayed as a Result

The trains to and from Lakefield this morning were delayed for some hours owing to an accident to the train proceeding north at seven o'clock. At the Water street crossing a quantity of snow had piled on the track, causing the engine to derail at this point. At noon the engine had not been righted. The engineer, Wm. Pilling suffered a strained back as a result of the accident, but no other injuries are reported.

RUMOUR CONTRADICTED

A paragraph appeared in The Daily Examiner of last week, to the effect that it was rumoured that the Oriental Hotel would close its doors at the beginning of the New Year. We have been authorized to state that such is not the case, and to ask the public to await particulars.

Brock Street Rink Skating To-night

Owing to the favourable change in the weather there will be good skating at Brock street rink again to-night. After the hockey match New Year's eve some 600 skaters used the ice. The evening was a most pleasant one. The Kitchener Club sold sandwiches and coffee.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS MEN ARE NEEDED FOR ARMY

Major General Sir Sam Hughes Asks For Applications From Men of That Type Who Are Needed For Officers For Canada's New Forces---Sergeants' Mess of 93rd Entertain at Supper---Officers Back From Holiday Leave---To-day's Military News.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—In connection with the New Year's announcement that Canada's fighting force will be increased to half a million men, Major Gen. Sir Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, said this morning: "We want strong business and professional men to perfect their military training. As in the case of Clive Nicholson and other famous soldiers, the best men for command are successful barristers, contractors, engineers and prominent business men. With thorough military training such men far surpass professional soldiers. We want applications from such men."

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

By Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.:

Headquarters, Peterborough,
Jan. 3rd, 1916.

The following men have been transferred from "B" Company to the staff as Signallers, from the 1st inst.; Pte. A. B. Burrows, C. C. Furgusson, P. L. Wiley, A. E. Thompson, E. D. Woods, W. C. McFaul.

Command.—

Lieuts. W. G. Worth and G. Quackenbush will be shown on command from the 1st instant in order to recruit at Havelock and Norwood.

Pte. J. W. Divine "B" Company, having reported from off command will resume his duties from the 3rd January, 1916.

Postings.—

Lieut. Carter will be posted to the Apsley Detachment of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., from the 1st inst.

Lieut. Thompson will be posted to the Norwood detachment until further orders, from January 1st, 1916.

Late Passes—

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to allow Theatre checks as late passes for the 3rd inst.:

KEITH G. LECH,
Captain,
Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Lieut. Walker Fair, of the 136th Battalion, Port Hope, was a visitor to the Armouries yesterday.

Nearly all the officers of the 93rd Battalion who have been on leave have returned to duty at the Armouries. The majority of the men who had New Year's leave will be back to-night or to-morrow, so that the battalion will soon be able to get down to business as usual.

The Armouries was a favourite spot for representatives of the different candidates to-day. Many of the men of the 93rd have votes in the city and a number of others in the surrounding townships. Nearly all got a chance to cast their vote.

Lieuts. Quackenbush and Worth left for Havelock to-day on duty in connection with the 93rd Battalion.

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—Gen. Sir Sam Hughes returned to Ottawa to-night from his home in Lindsay, where he spent New Year's Day. He goes to Toronto to-morrow night, returning here probably on Wednesday.

The Minister is besieged with applications from clergymen of all denominations who are eager to go to the front as chaplains of the new battalions which are being raised or which are to be organized this winter. Sir Sam suggested to-night that these applicants might get together and organize into a fighting unit.

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—The Government's decision to double the authorized total of Canada's force for overseas service has been welcomed with enthusiasm in every part of the Dominion, and generally throughout the Empire. Telegrams by the score are pouring in to the Prime Minister's office congratulating the Government on the step which is being taken, and expressing confidence in the ability and readiness of Canadian manhood to respond to the splendid call with which the Prime Minister marks the opening of another year. Sir Robert Borden is still confined to his home, and will probably be absent from his office for part of this week.

Ottawa, Jan. 2.—It is officially announced, through the chief press censor's office that the troopship Missanabie, which sailed from Canada on December 18th, has arrived safely in England.

She had on board the following troops: No. 3 siege battery, 6 officers, 214 men. Drafts: Horse Artillery, two officers, 100 men; Field Artillery, 14 officers, 603 men; Winnipeg Highlanders, 6 officers, 249 men; infantry from Edmonton, 1 officer, 44 men; Cyclists, 2 officers, 60 men; Army Service Corps, 5 officers, 200 men; Army Medical Corps, 10 officers, 30 men; Dental Corps, 20 officers, 30 men; civilian practitioners for regular army, 5 officers; naval ratings, 2 officers, 92 men; details, 4 officers, 6 men.

Lieut. E. D. Huycke, Lieut. Beresford Hamilton, of Peterborough, and a large number of Peterborough artillerymen were on board the Missanabie.

Pay-Sergeant Abraham of the 93rd Battalion has received an interesting letter from his nephew, Pte. W. E. Abraham, British Expeditionary Force. Pte. Abraham writes: "I am glad that Earnie, Reggie and your self are serving in the Canadian Forces and going to do your bit for the dear old country. Only fancy three of you serving there and Jimmy serving in England. That is all of you doing your bit.

We were all in that big advance a little while ago and all came through all right, and I have just come out of the trenches for a rest. It is pretty cold here, as there is a lot of water in the trenches; but still we keep on smiling and when the shells come over we shout 'What, ho! she bumps.'

If some of the young men were to see what has been done out here they would not stop to think, but would enlist at once.

The Sergeants of the 93rd Battalion were the hosts of a delightful supper in the mess rooms on New Year's Eve. A most enjoyable repast was served and the evening was a most successful one. Among the guests were Lt.-Col. Johnston, Major Watt, and Captain Lech of the 93rd. An or-

CZERNOWITZ THREATENED BY RUSSIAN FORCES

Bukowina Heights Captured By Czar's Men—Battle Has Been Raging Around Capital For Three Days With Russians Having Advantage.

PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The battle in the Galician Crown lands of Bukowina, which has been foreshadowed for some days by the concentration of heavy Russian and Teutonic forces, has begun in earnest, and, according to an official statement issued in Petrograd to-night, the Russians thus far have the upper hand. Czernowitz, the Crown lands capital, already has become the centre of the fighting. The Russians report they stormed the heights before the city and took 900 prisoners, including 15 officers. The city's population is said to be held ready for evacuation.

Czernowitz was taken by the Russians in the first Galician drive, and was retaken by the Austrians exactly a year later. Since then it has been firmly held by the Teutons. The Austro-German forces in Galicia are estimated at 1,500,000 men, and the Czar is believed to have an army of almost equal numerical strength, including the strong forces recently withdrawn from Bessarabia. The new battle around Czernowitz began three days ago, and a decisive result is eagerly awaited here.

Capture Bukowina Heights.

The Russians have captured the heights north-east of Czernowitz, Bukowina, according to a despath to Reuter's Telegram Company from Petrograd. Eight hundred and seventy prisoners fell into the hands of the Russians.

Some London observers, speculating on the meaning of the Bessarabia move, hail it as one of the most ambitious strategic plans since the beginning of hostilities, and predict that it will prove a colossal attempt to break the backbone of the Germanic allies' whole line across the Balkans. Thus one critic says: "The plan is that Russia and the other allies, moving from different sides, shall meet in the Balkans and gain complete mastery of that peninsula. If they succeed, Turkey will be subdued and the vitals of Austria-Hungary menaced."

The Russians, according to the latest official report issued at Petrograd, crossed the Styr between the Kovel and the Sarny railway and the village of Czartorysk. Strong German attempts to drive them back to the right bank of the river failed. Other local successes are claimed by the Russians.

The Kovel-Sarny sector of the Warsaw-Kieff railway, run due north of the Volhynian fortress triangle formed by Dubno, Lutsk and Rovno. Of these, Rovno is the only one still held by the Russians. By crossing the Styr in the region north of the Volhynian line the Russians have pushed the Austro-Germans farther to the north and reduced the menace to Rovno, which is the principal aim of the Teutons.

A great battle, or series of linked battles, is proceeding on the south-western front. The Austro-German armies under Field Marshal von Mackensen and Gen. Pflanger, which are engaged from the Pripet River to the Roumanian frontier, are estimated at 1,500,000 men. Only fragmentary news of the fighting has been received, but it is stated authoritatively that the Austro-German forces have made progress nowhere, that the Russians have retired nowhere, and that such changes as have occurred on this front have been to the advantage of the Russians.

CAPT. EVERETT BIROSALL IS IN A CRITICAL CONDITION

As a Result of an Operation Recently Performed--Seriously Wounded Two Weeks Ago.

CABLE RECEIVED TO-DAY

Col. R. E. Birdsall, Birdsall's Station, has received a cable from England, informing him that his son, Capt. Everett Birdsall, of the Second Battalion, had undergone an operation yesterday, and while it was successful, the young officer is in a critical condition. Col. Birdsall is in Ottawa to-day, securing passports, in order that he and his wife may sail immediately to join their son. Capt. Birdsall was a fortnight ago reported seriously wounded, and the nature of his injuries has no doubt rendered an operation necessary. He was in the same battalion with the late Capt. Bennett and the other Peterborough boys who fought in the battle of St. Julien. His numerous friends in this city will hope for the best, and trust that this gallant young officer will safely come through this critical stage of his illness.

Three Days Special Meetings At The Temple

Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben conducted a very special series of meetings on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Temple.

The welcome meeting at 8 o'clock on Friday night broke the ice, and they got right into the hearts of the people.

At 11 o'clock the watchnight service was one of the best ever held in Peterborough.

Saturday night the visitors had tea with the comrades of the Temple Corps, and Mayor Buller welcomed the new officers to Peterborough. It was his last public appearance as Mayor, and his chairmanship was much appreciated by the crowd that gathered to hear the lecture.

Sunday was a day of special service, and enjoyed by all.

Brigadier and Mrs. Moreben returned to Montreal by the midnight.

"Trail Hitter" Kills Mother

Special to the Examiner.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Jan. 3.—Ed. G. H. Buchanan, 28, a prominent Syracusan, battered and killed his mother, aged 60, this morning, while suffering from a fit of religious mania. He was a Billy Sunday "trail hitter," and said he sent his mother to heaven where she wouldn't have to work hard at the wash tub.

Yesterday At St. John's Church

The service at St. John's church yesterday morning was of an impressive nature, carrying out the plan of national intercession. The hymns were of a special nature. Before the service proper a special litany was said after the congregation had stood for a few moments in silence. This was followed by the office for Holy Communion. In his sermon Rev. Canon Davidson called attention to the article on prayer which appeared in Friday's Examiner.

In the evening Rev. Canon Davidson exchanged pulpits with Rev. R. E. Grobb of All Saints'.

GERMANS DO NOT RESPECT THE AMBULANCE CORPS

KINGSTON, Jan. 3.—As an evidence that the Germans do not respect ambulance corps, it is learned that 25 per cent. of the members of the Pipe Band of the 21st Battalion, who acted as stretcher-bearers at the front, appeared in the casualty lists. These men are shot down while in the act of picking up wounded soldiers.

MONDAY, JAN. 3, 1916

AN UNITED STATES VIEW.

If reports hailing the latest note from Austria-Hungary as "a great diplomatic victory for the United States" are officially inspired, then somebody at Washington is desperately anxious to accept shadow for substance, says the New York Herald. There is nothing in the cabled report to justify assumption that the American demands have been met in spirit or in letter.

There is a fine flow of the language of diplomacy, hidden away in which is some indication that Austria- Hungary is ashamed of the attitude it took in its first note. Beyond this what is there in it save a palpable effort to pave the way for dragging along the Ancona controversy, as has been done with that involving the Lusitania?

The Austro-Hungary government uses politer language than in its first reply to the demands of the United States. Perhaps Vienna has cut the leading strings binding it to Berlin. We know from the debates in the Hungarian Parliament that the first note was dictated by Germany — a fact deeply resented by Hungarian leaders. Perhaps their influence has been exercised in the general direction of independence and decency, with the result of temporary abandonment of the truculence so much in evidence in the first note. But in what other material particular does this second note differ from the first? And where is there any meeting of the demands of the United States?

So far as is discoverable, the Austro-Hungarian reply contains no assurance that the illegal indefensible methods of warfare against merchantmen is to cease. Honeyed words about "humanity" make a poor substitute, especially in the light of the sinking without warning of the Yasaka Maru and the Cille de la Ciotat in the same waters and at the very time this note was being formulated in Vienna. Of what value is evasive talk of the commander responsible for the Ancona murders "having been punished" in the light of those later outrages and of the Austro-Hungarian government's previous announcement that even if the Ancona case were as presented by the United States "it does not in any way sufficiently warrant attaching blame to the commander of the war vessel" or the Imperial and Royal Government"?

In the same breath that it talks of "punishment" the Vienna government advances a new explanation of the circumstances of the sinking of the Ancona for the obvious purpose of defending the commander who has been "punished." After telling of his firing sixteen shots at the Ancona, "Three of which were observed to hit," it is explained that he "torpedoed the vessel in such a manner that it would remain afloat as long as possible to enable the passengers to disembark." The Austro-Hungarian government would have us believe that the marksmanship displayed with the submarine's gun—miserably poor, by its own record—warranted the commander in believing that with his vessel submerged he could fire a torpedo with such marvellous accuracy as to strike the doomed merchantman at such less vital spot as he chose!

Here at least Vienna has stuck to Berlin's teaching. Germany, it will be recalled, said its purpose was to sink the Lusitania, "but sink it slowly." The one excuse, as the other, is an insult to American intelligence.

A NEW YEAR: A NEW WORLD.

The old year is dead, says the Toronto Globe. The old world, in the sorrow and horror of a world-war, is agonizing in the travail-pangs of being born again.

The re-born world may not emerge this twelvemonth or next. But when it comes it will be new. That hope alone saves us from despair. The past never can come back. History will not repeat itself. The world has toiled up to the crammed hour of Destiny. Up to the summit, and all the streams ran backward to the unreturning Past. Over the water-shed, and life's currents steer for the unchartered Future. Here we stand at the Great Divide. Now is the transition time. Fronting a new year we front, through the shadows, a new world. Hark over the din and tragedy of the hour a voice: "Behold! I make all things new."

No man is well fitted for the new year who is not himself renewed in the spirit of his mind, and ready to readjust his own thinking to meet new facts and strange conditions in a new world. Not much of the impediments of the past will fit into the world of the future.

(.) In the new world the distinctive markings on the map will be, not physical, but moral.

In the past the dividing lines were the arbitrary boundaries of nations—oceans between continents, lakes and rivers between countries, imaginary lines drawn here or there by the exigencies of international politics. Over these crude divisions of geography despots and war-lords contended for the mastery. To test the strength or the meaning of such surface markings on a scrap of paper all Europe to-day is wading in blood.

But a day is coming when the map of civilization will be marked off and coloured, not by the accidents of physical geography, but by moral sympathies and moral antipathies; not by the bloods of the races, but by their beliefs; not by the colour either of their skin or of their flags, but by the quality of their freedom and the life-character of their citizenship. The things that will then divide will be deeper than differences in ancestral background. The things that will unite will be stronger than common blood and a common language. When the map of moral character is drawn the Rockies and the St. Lawrence, the Rhine and the Himalayas will be, not the disputed boundaries of territories, but the moral achievements of peoples.

(2) The new world will be organized in obedience to law; not on the basis and at the behest of brute force. The outbreak of national jealousies and the resort to national armaments has proved, and, by the greater desolation yet to follow, will prove up to the hilt, the absolute necessity for civilized nations to build up an adequate body of international law, and to sustain that law, as Elihu Root said in Washington the other day, "by the power of collective civilization outside of the offending State."

Force has broken down, utterly and irreparably, as an instrument in the hands of isolated nations with which the safety and freedom of all the nations may be secured or preserved. Force is necessary now, and will be necessary so long as nations are half-civilized in their life and ideals, and so long as there is no international law, or no power to enforce it or to punish its violation.

A beginning at world-law had been made, but only a beginning. In the new world a fresh start must be made. Out of the consensus of national opinion on questions of national conduct the forms ad requirements of international law must be codified. A competent court of international jurisdiction must be set up, and the requisite international police force must be organized to enforce, where necessary, the judgments of the international court.

(3) The nations of the new world-order will think internationally. Behind law must stand informed public opinion. There can be no security for the world's peace after the war unless and until international public opinion stigmatizes a breach of international treaty as a crime, and a crime, too, against not one victim nation alone, but against all nations. With the emphasis of perhaps the foremost American authority, Mr. Root spoke words like these on Tuesday last:

"Up to this time breaches of international law have been treated as we treat wrongs under civil procedure, as if they concerned nobody except the particular nation upon whom the injury was inflicted and the nation inflicting it. . . . Such violations must be treated by analogy to criminal law. They must be deemed a violation of the right of every civilized nation to have the law maintained. . . . Every State has a direct interest in preventing those violations. Wherever in the world the laws which should protect the independence of truth, the inviolability of their territory, the lives and property of their citizens, are violated, all other nations have a right to protest."

And such protest carries the right of cutting off diplomatic and commercial relations, and also the right to join forces with other nations to compel the law-breaker into obedience. When Germany violated an international treaty and invaded Belgium's territory, not only was Britain under obligation to interfere, but, had Root's view then prevailed, the United States and every other neutral nation had the right to protest to the full measure required by the principles of justice and humanity. "I think," says Root, "there is ground for hope that from the horror of violated law a stronger law may come." A stronger world-law, backed by a clearer world-opinion, commending a league to enforce peace, and inspired by the higher spirit of world-service, will mean a new world, a world born again.

(4) One thing more. A new world will be a world of Peoples, not of Powers. The awful doom of Europe to-day is the damnation of its despots and war-lords. In a free world they can have no place. And again Elihu Root—who plainly is not in line with President Wilson's policy of compromise over the Teuton crimes against humanity—gives voice to the true New Year's sentiment for the New World:

"Some of us believe that the hope of the world's progress lies in the spread and perfection of democratic self-government. It may be that out of the wrack and welter of the great world-conflict may arise a general consciousness that it is the people who are to be considered, their rights and liberties to govern themselves, rather than rulers' ambitions and policies of aggrandizement. If that is so, our hopes will be realised, for autocracy can protect itself by arbitrary power, but the people can protect themselves only by the rule of law."

The assurance of that hope is the present promise of the world this New Year's Day. In that Vision of the world each year as it comes is new, and the larger hopes of liberty and democracy will not be dishonoured. Browning's dictum will not be dishonoured: "All's Love, yet all's Law." And in the coming of that reign of Law Tennyson will prove himself the true prophet of the new world-age:

"Love took up the harp of Life, and smot on all its chords with might;
Smote the chord of Self, that, trembling, passed in music out of sight."

Words of Contemplation For The New Year

Written for The Examiner by Frank Russell

1916! Yes, that is it's name for us. We date our years from Him whose coming made all the difference. Yet a glance at an almanac shows us that there are other ways of reckoning. Everyone does not count the years as we count them. The Jew, the Moslem, just like the ancient Greek or the ancient Roman, have a point of time which is not ours, from which he starts.

The Year of the World.

What figure or endless number of figures can express that? We can no longer be contented with the simple addition sum which adds 4004 to 1916 and makes this year 5920. For the world is older, incalculably older, than that. One must think of the years in millions rather than in thousands and then, probably you will not have got at "the beginning," when the Almighty Architect of the Universe first formed out of chaos this oblate spheroid which we term the world. One may hold in the hand a piece of rock which has taken possibly, millions of years to make, or many look back over growths and developments which have taken ages upon ages to produce.

The Year of Our Lord.

But we reckon our years as Anno Domini; in the year of our Lord. Right in the heart of time came One, whose coming demanded that we really start afresh and begin to reckon over again.

In Year of Grace.

Here is another name often used, though less familiar than the term in the year of Our Lord.

I don't know how it is with my readers in the "Examiner", but the common good will, the moral saturation,

A Happy New Year

Sometimes to my mind raises a spirit of contradiction. Does that word "new" really mean what it says. What newness is there in the year which has such a big carry over from the old. We talk of "turning over a new leaf;" is it really "new", or is it like those bargains in motor cars, or sealskin coats, "practically new", "as good as new", "only slightly worn", which disappoint so grievously their buyers when they realize the strained frames or their spots, their traces of hard wear and tear.

A New Year.

It is of no use trying to guess what the New Year may have in store for us. It may break the record. It may bring us success beyond our utmost hopes; it may bring us a joy we never dreamed of; it may brng us a sorrow fit to break our hearts and which may carry over from year to year; or, it may bring us a failure almost ludicrous in its completeness. And yet for all it may be a "year of grace", a year in which it may be proved, up to the hilt, that all things work together for good for those who place their trust in Providence.

And last!

There is wast Follows.

"Anno Domini" on the tombstones and the coffin lids—in the year of Our Lord 1916, and the year of his age—What?

Why the year of the deceased's age. If 1916 finds you still young, try to lead an unblemished life. If like me, you are middle-aged, remember, that there are not too many of those priceless years of full vigour and efficiency. If you are old, Ah, how soon the night!

Here, I do not think it inappropriate to quote three verses of

A Hymn Well Known

To many of my readers:

"When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsunned spaces blown
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

"Be near me when all else is from me drifting—
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to mine own uplifting,
The love that answers mine.

"Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy unbounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

This hymn, which, in its entirety, consists of seven verses, may be found in "The Book of Common Praise," being the Hymn Book of the Church of England in Canada, (No. 684). It was written in 1862 by J. G. Whittier, and is, to my mind, a charming piece of composition.

CHARACTERISTICS OF VARIOUS MONTHS

A Collection of Old Jingles

The following quaint strains, culled from various sources, show what were looked upon as favourable—or otherwise—characteristics of the various months of the year. F. R.

January.

If grass grows in Janiveer,
It grows the worse for all the year."

February.

All the months of the year
Fear a fair Februeer.

March.

The rougher March
The fairer May.

April.

A cold April
The barn will fill

April.

It's a long way to April,
It's a long way to go,
It's along way 'till the spring time
Drives away the ice and snow.

May.

Whoever is ill in the month of May
For the rest of the year will be healthy and gay.

June.

Calm weather in June
Sets the corn in tune.

July.

If the first of July be rainy weather,
'Twill rain more or less for four weeks together.

August.

Dry August and warm
Does the harvest no harm.

September.

September blow soft
'Till the fruit's in the loft.

October.

'Twas Spring, 'twas Summer, always joy,
Now autumn lends a cloudy brow.

November.

November's sky is chill and drear,
November's leaf is red and sear.

December.

December like poor pilgrim old,
Strokes his silver beard with cold.

Hope is misery's tonic, and despair's medicine.

Hope may not mend all things, but it often repairs

Repentance is often regret for our failures.

Once Bitten—Twice Shy.

Advertising may make a poor article sell for a while, but the most persistent advertising would not induce you to make a second purchase of a thing that turned out to be fraudulent, and the profit on the first sale would never pay for the advertising.

Do you not think the advertisers know this? They fully realize that the very first essential of success is to have something worthy, something that people want and will keep on buying.

If you see a thing advertised regularly week after week, year after year, it is safe to conclude that it possesses actual merit and is well worth its cost.

The Electric Intermediates And Juniors Win Exhibition Games

Intermediates Beat Brampton Here 11 to 6 on Friday Night While Juniors Won Away-From-Home Game With Campbellford Intermediates on New Year's Afternoon.

KIDS WON 5 TO 3

The Electrics Junior O.H.A. team opened the season auspiciously on New Year's afternoon when they invaded Campbellford and defeated the town team by 5 goals to 3, in a hard-fought exhibition game. The feat is a praiseworthy one for the light Peterborough youngsters, inasmuch as their opponents were not juniors, but Campbellford's Intermediate O. H. A. team, with a line-up on that was admittedly twenty-five per cent. stronger than that which represented Campbellford in their Intermediate O.H.A. game with Cobourg last week. The Campbellford team included the veteran Pat Shannon, and the almost equally well-known "Tacks" Clements, while Dave Thomas, a big Indian player, also occupied a position on the forward line. In size and weight the Campbellford squide made the light Electric kids look like a pub lic school team, and their bulk was all the more prominent on the soft, sticky ice. They were not any too clean in their methods either, and, assisted by a lenient referee, hooked, held and bodied the tack-weight Petes all the way down the rink. The Electric youngsters, however, took their bumps, and came back for more while they showed so much speed that they had the big fellows' tongues hanging out, back-checking them all the way. The result was a victory by a comfortable margin, and on hard ice, where their speed and stick-handling superiority would have been of greater advantage, the visitors would have won by a larger score.

Both teams tried out a number of candidates, the Petes using altogether nine players. In goal they had Claude Montgomery, and the youngster gave a good account of himself, the only goals scored on him being registered in scrimmages, where he hadn't a chance to make a stop. On the defence, Lowes of last year's George Street Church League team, and Legros, goalkeeper of last year's Junior O.H.A. team, all had a chance. Lowes played the whole game and did fine work on the defence, while his rink-length rush for a goal, in the last period, was one of the feautres. Montgomery checked well in the first period, and Legros, who played the last two periods, was steady and effective.

On the forward line Lornie Rose was the only one of last year's advance guard left and he promises to have a great season this year, judging by his work at Campbellford, Saturday. He scored two goals and tore off some dazzling rushes. On the other side of the ice, Percy Hamilton, although he got more abuse than any man on the line, never let up for a moment, and did some fine rushing, as well as some great back checking. The Electrics, in Rose and Hamilton, have a fine pair of wings. In centre ice, Fred Graham, formerly of the Boston Exploits, City League Champions, was consistently good all the way through at rover, while Cherritt and Bartley, Church League graduates, both did good work in the centre position.

For Campbellford, Cross, the youngster in goal, did some fine blocking and clearing. He had little chance with those that beat him as all five were scored at close range. Shannon, although not as good as he used to be worked hard on the defense. On the forward line the Campbellford crowd expected a lot from Christenson, the former Gravenhurst intermediate, but he was too busy trying to look after Hamilton, to show anything on his own account. Clements was the best of the forwards, although the big Indian, Thomas, was the most prominent on account of his vigorous methods. Nearly all of the Petes are carrying souvenirs of the manner in which he used his war club, but they kept on going just the same.

Campbellford took the lead early in the game. From the face-off they rushed the rubber down to the Petes' end of the rink and, from a scrimmage, Thomas slammed a counter into the nets, the rubber carroming in off Frank Montgomery's stick. Nothing daunted, the Electric Juniors settled down to work and their speed and stick-handling soon began to tell. Cross was called upon to stop half a dozen close-range shots. Finally Rose raked the puck from behind the Campbellford nets, after a shot by Graham, and bringing the rubber out in front slid it past Cross for the tying goal. It was 1—1 at the end of the period.

In the second period the Petes continued to set the pace, although the soft ice and the tactics of the home team made it hard going. Cross saved three or four goals by clever stops but the Electrics were not to be denied, Rose putting them ahead by scoring from a scrimmage. The period ended with the Petes ahead, 2 to 1.

In the last twenty minutes the Campbellford team tried hard to pull the game out of the fire, but their efforts were unavailing. Early in the period Hamilton took a pass from the side and tore in on top of Cross for goal number three. Then Clements scored for Campbellford, and the home team woke up and tried hard to tie up the score. Lowes, however cinched the game for the Petes when he went through the Campbellford team on a lone rush and scooped a beauty past Cross. Rose followed with another dazzling rush, when he stick-handled through the Campbellford defence. Cross came out and met deflecting the puck, but Rose passed out to Hamilton, who slammed in goal No. 5. Campbellford scored their final goal shortly before the game ended in a mix-up around the Peterborough nets.

FRIDAY NIGHTS' GAME.

Friday night's exhibition game between the Brampton Intermediates and the Electrics, which the latter won by 11 to 6, gave the good-sized crowd present an interesting evening's entertainment. Brampton, although always behind, tried hard all the way and the good work of their defence pair, Beecham and Ingleby, particularly that of the former, kept the Electrics from running away with the game. The score by periods was: Peterborough 5, Brampton 1; Peterborough 7, Brampton 3; Peterborough 11, Brampton 8; and the figures are a criterion of the play.

Both teams played individual hockey for the greater part, with the result that the fans saw plenty of pretty one-man dashes that were more spectacular than effective. The Electrics showed plenty of speed and stick-handling ability, but their team work, except in occasional streaks, was conspicuous by its absence.

Although all the forwards showed good form, Baillie, by his neat stick-handling and deadly shooting, and Montgomery, by his speedy skating and good back-checking, were most often in the limelight. Jackson and Evans, who alternated at rover, did good work, while Briden had lots of speed when he wanted to use it. Jerry Coughlin and Long of last years' Juniors, were the defence pair, the former showing his old-time cleverness in stick-handling.

Beecham was the best of the visitors. The big defence man checked hard, and the same fine rushing, his single-handed rush the length of the rink for a goal, in the second period, being the best play of the night. Ingleby gave him good support. Robertson was the best of the forwards.

Leo Derocher refereed the game in good style.

The line-up was as follows:

Brampton	Electrics
Goal
McLure	Tobin
Defence.
Beecham	Long
Ingleby	Coughlin
Rover.
Dale	Evans (Jackson)
Centre.
Duler	Baillie
Right Wing
Robertson	B. Montgomery
Left Wing.
Davis	Briden

Summary:

1st Period—
1—Peterborough, Montgomery.
2—Peterborough, Baillie.
3—Peterborough, Baillie.
4—Peterborough, Baillie.
5—Brampton, Beecham.
6—Peterborough, Baillie.

2nd Period—
7—Peterborough, Jackson.
8—Brampton, Davis.

CERTIFICATES REFUSED TO LOCAL INTERMEDIATES

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—Three Kingston junior players and Messrs. George Ban Horne and E. O. Silter, representing the interests of the Frontenacs and Kingston Collegiate Institute, interviewed the O. H. A. sub-committee yesterday for the straightening out of the difficulty caused by two of the boys signing playing certificates for both teams. After hearing the statements, which went to show that there had been no misrepresentations, though some of the boys had been under misapprehensions as to which team their chums were intending to play with, the committee decided that the certificates as originally signed should hold. This leaves Wilfrid Gratton and R. H. Ferguson with K.C.I. and Jas. Walsh with the Frontenacs. A settlement of the dispute had been made between the two clubs, but one side repudiated it, and the matter eventually came to the O.H.A. for final adjudication as stated.

An inquiry from the American Hockey League as to the standing of Frank Heffernan will be replied to with the information that he is under suspension with the O.H.A. as a member of last year's Victorias. Heffernan is now living in New York and is desirous of playing with a team there.

H. H. Mercer was declared qualified with the 147th Battalion, whose headquarters are in Owen Sound. Applications for the qualifications of a Stratford player named Nunns could not be granted, as he had been playing with the Western Ontario Baseball League.

Markham Club, not being able to put an intermediate team on the ice, will receive their entrance fee back, and will play only junior.

O. Kennealey of Peterboro who was on the Peterboro team before the appearance of Tetrault, but did not play afterwards, was accepted as qualified for the O.H.A. this season and Fred Kelly of London is also on the qualified list.

Certificates applied for from Peterboro Electric for the following players were not granted:—W. J. Tobin, L. Baillie, Jerry Coughlin and B. J. R. Montgomery. All have come from the north country.

Manager Art Sixsmith of the Pittsburg Winter Garden interviewed the committee as to the status of his team as competitors with the O.H.A. teams, and was informed that the inclusion of several professional players made the Pittsburg combinations one that could not be recognized. Also that players who went to Pittsburg to get jobs and play hockey were in the same category, even if they did not receive cash directly for playing. If the Duquesne Garden team is made up in this way. It will be catalogued with the Winter Garden combination. Manager Sixsmith said that he had apolied to the Amateur Athletic Union authorities in the States for a ruling and had been told that, though the Skating Association's regulations provided that a man who had been six years out of professional sport was requalified, that would not entitle him to play under A.A.U. rules.

MORAN SMILES AT WILLARD'S OFFER

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Public opinion slammed the crusher on the proposed scrap between Fred Fulton and Jess Willard at New Orleans. Therefore it behooved the promoters to try and obtain a worthy substitue. They went so far as to offer Frank Moran $7,500 to go into the southern city and battle with the champion. Moran won't box Willard for $7,500.

Moran is anxious to battle Willard for the title, but he desires a suitable sum, for his trouble. He is convinced also that he is the logical man to box the title-holder, and therefore intends to be amply recompensed. If the New Orleans promoters came forth with a respectable offer with a percentage for the winner and loser they will get a hearing from Moran.

THE PRESENT MONTH, JANUARY

The First Month of The Year. Some of its History and Some of its Characteristics

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

"First, January charged with hope and fear,
Flings open wide the portals of the year."

"If grass grows in January,
It grows the worse for all the year."
—Old Rhymes.

We have now entered the first month of the modern calendar—January—a month containing thirty-one days. January may be considered the open gate of the year, open now to let in the lengthening daylight.

* * * *

The name (Latin Januarius) is derived from the two-faced Roman God, Janus, to which this month was dedicated. As doorkeeper of heaven, as looking both into the past and future, and as being essentially the deity who busied himself with the beginning of all enterprises, it was very appropriate that he should be made guardian of the fortunes of the New Year.

The Consecration of the Month

Took place by an offering of meal, salt, wine and frankincense, each of which was new.

Janus, in Roman mythology, was one of the principal deities, and was originally a god of light and day, but, gradually, became the god of the beginning and end of all things.

On the ninth day of the month a festival, termed Angonia, was celebrated in his honour. He was, in preference to any other god, invoked at the commencement of any important undertaking. He was the inventor of agriculture, of civil laws, of religious worship, and of the coining of money. On the oldest coins he is usually represented as having two bearded faces, but this number was increased to four during the time of Hadrian.

By some authorities it is claimed that Janus is the masculine form of Diana (Jana), but others claim that Janus and Jupiter were one and the same.

Historical.

The Anglo-Saxons called this month 'Wulfmonat,' or Wolf-Month, in allusion to the fact that hunger then made wolves bold enough to come into their villages. It was also called by them the Aefter-Yule, that is to say, after Christmas.

Characteristics of the Month.

A walk out into the country, on a fine, bright, frosty January morning, puts a man's blood into good circulation, and makes him wonder why so many prefer to bake in hot close rooms in which the temperature is excessive and all fresh air kept scrupulously out. Of course, during this month plenty of snow may be expected. Snow in the streets is a very different proposition to snow in the country. On the former it no sooner falls than it begins to make more dirt, and is quickly trampled into mud by the passers by on the pavement, while in the roads, it is soon churned up into "slush" by the horses and vehicles. In the country the snow is really white, there is no dirty grey look about it which will be soon seen in town, but it lies on the fields, as Milton says, like 'a wintry veil of maiden white.' January is notedly in our Northern hemisphere the of the year. In the quaint drawings to be found in the illuminated missals of the middle ages, January is frequently represented by the figure of a man clad in white, as the type of the snow usually on the ground at this season, and blowing his fingers as emblematical of cold. He carries a billet of wood under his left arm, while near him stands the figure of the sign Aquarians into which watery emblem of the Zodiac the sun enters of the 19th of the month.

And the Cold Rather Increases than Decreases.

During the course of the month, although the sun has returned from the tropic of Capricorn. An old rhyme has it

'As the day lengthens,
The cold strengthens.'

In the middle of the month the sun is but slightly above the horizon, so there is great liability to severe frost and heavy falls of snow. Vegetation of course, lies dead, and it is frequently sore times for the farmer's stock. Even the birds reduced to great extremities, come nearer the homes of man, in hopes of picking up a little food. A heavy snow fall, however gives a certain degree of protection to the earth and so benefits it for the spring ploughing.

New Year's Day in March.

New Year's Day used to fall "in March and not in January." There was a good deal of sound common sense in this, for, even as the world's first year was supposed to have begun with the sprouting of the leaf and grass, so each New Year's Day was set for the season when nature began to awake after her winter sleep.

New Year's Day.

Of course, New Year's Day is the most popular day in this month. On it are many re-unions, friendships are renewed; in fact, like Christmas, it is, with many, an opportunity for burying old sores and taking up, like 'a new year,' the life of friendship once more. It is, of course, a day on which many resolutions are made—many of them to be soon forgotten—a new leaf is turned over—in some cases a new clean, book may be said to have been begun. But one wonders how long it will last.

The Circumcision.

is an ecclesiastical feast held on New Year's Day. At the Circumcision the earthly parents, Joseph and Mary, of the Infant Christ conformed to the Jewish ecclesiastical law requiring all male children to be circumcised within eight days of their birth.

New Year in Scotland.

Our friends, the Scotch, do not make much observance of Christmas, but it may safely be said that New Year's Day has hitherto been observed in the land of cakes and ale with a heartiness nowhere surpassed. A people generally grave and austere, they seem to break out into a half-mad merriment on this day. Every face appears wreathed in smile, every hand is ready for a grasp of friendship. All stiffness gives way, and in reunion of relatives, generally taking place over the festiveboard, many little family differences are wiped out.

In the Shetland Islands.

A striking scene is that held at Lerwick, the capital of the Shetland Isles, off the north coast of Scotland, when the young men and children go "a-guizing." The children disguise themselves in strange dresses, parade the streets, and invade the houses and shops begging for offerings. At one o'clock in the morning the young men, coarsely clad, drag blazing tar barrels through the town, accompanied by the blowing of horns and cheering. At day break they put off their grimy clothes and dress in fantastic costumes to go in groups to wish the season's compliments to their friends.

A Strange New Year Celebration.

What probably is the strangest New Year's rite, is held in the Cevennes mountains, in Southern France. At the last evening mass of the old year the herds and flocks of the peasants are gathered before the portico of the little stone church high up on the mountain side, and are blessed by the priest and sprinkled with holy water by an acolyte who follows him in order that this, the sole wealth of the countryside may increase and prosper during the year to come. The sight at the holy hour is wonderful. As the church bell tolls above them, the frightened animals commence to bleat and bellow, and try madly to escape. First of all the oxen are blessed, then the cows; next come the sheep and lambs, and, finally, the goats and pigs.

The Epiphany.

The Epiphany, or Manifestation of the Infant Saviour to the Magi, as representing the Gentiles, occurs on the sixth day of the month. This day is also known as Twelfth-day. Until within a comparatively few years back, this day used to be one of great rejoicing, the "Twelfth-cake playing a great part in the proceedings. Space at my disposal will not here admit of a detailed account of this celebration.

The Chief Ecclesiastical Feasts.

For this month are as follows:—

January 1st—Circumcision; January 6th—Epiphany; January 21st St. Agnes; January 25th—Conversion of St. Paul.

On January 30th is commemorated the martyrdom of King Charles the First of England, commonly known as King Charles the Martyr.

The Phases of the Moon.

The moon's phases are as under:

New Moon, January 4th; 1st Quarter, January 11; Full Moon, January 20th; Last Quarter, January 27th.

Leap Year.

This year, too, is Leap Year. This event, as is well known occurrs only once in each four years. It is one day longer than the ordinary year, there being twenty nine days in February. The old rhyme has it:

Thirty days hath September,
April, June and November
February has but twenty-eight alone
Except in Leap Year;
Then's the time that
February's days are twenty-nine.

In leap year it is popularly supposed that the gentler sex have the privilege of making

Matrimonial Proposals.

If a lady proposes to a man and he declines the honor, then old custom has decreed that he present her with a new gown. But then old custom also decrees that she must be wearing a crimson or scarlet petticoat, which must be, more or less visible at the time she makes the offer, otherwise there is no penalty for a refusal.

Christmas 1916.

From the fact of this year being leap year, and consequently having one extra day, Christmas Day, which under ordinary circumstances would have been due to fall on a Sunday, slips over that day, and will be on

HOCKEY

The Electric Juniors will practice at Brock Street Rink to-night at 7 o'clock. Only the players who have been given club tickets are expected out, as follows: C. Montgomery, T. Montgomery, Legros, Lowes, Graham, Cherrett, Bartley, Rose, Hamilton, Kennaley, Smythe.

The first Junior O. H. A. game will be played here on Wednesday night of next week, when the Lindsay Juniors, who reached the semi-final last year, and were put out by the Varsity Juniors, will clash with the Electric Juniors. Fans are asked to keep the date open, as this will be one of the season's best games.

"Stuffy" Mahood's seven were defeated in a fast game on New Year's morning by Stewart's seven, the score being 6—0. The goals were scored as follows: By Byers 3, Wright 1, Theobald 2, Clark 1. The line-ups were:

Sober Seven—Goal, Stewart; defence, Stan. Hopkins and Bill Jackson; forwards, Roy Buyers, Walter Wright, Bill Jackson and Jack Theobald.—6.

Mahood's—Goal, Lewis; defence, Teabean and Simpson; forwards, Bunny Gardner, Stuffy Mahood, Parks and Webster.—0.

CURLING

Lakefield's new curlers are in the local market for stones. Mr. Tanner was down this morning looking over some of those for sale at the rink.

The ice on Saturday was fairly good during the earlier part of the day but it grew slushy in the evening.

It is told of "Bob" Sturgeon that he met his opponent "Billy" Langford in front of the rink on Saturday morning, and after exchanging greetings, said: "Come down and lead for me this afternoon."

"Can't do it to-day," replied William, Jr., but I'll lead for you on Monday evening." Watch the electron screens.

Life In The Trenches On The Western Front During Winter Months

Pte. Pat. Duggan, Formerly of Peterboro Who Is With the Royal Montreal Regiment At The Front Gives An Interesting Description

HAVE HAD LOTS OF RAIN

Mr. Charles Duggan of Peterborough has received the following interesting letter from a relative, Pte. Patrick Duggan, of the 14th Battalion, 3rd Brigade, and formerly of Peterborough:

Friday, Nov. 3, 1915.

Dear Charlie,—Your letter to hand of date, Nov. 14th, which I received two days ago. I was pleased to hear you are still well and in the best of health, the same as myself. As regards my experiences in the trenches during the last few months, they have not been what you might call exciting.

Things have been running pretty smoothly in the way of fighting. Most of our time has been spent in trench-digging, repairing, etc. This kind of work is generally done during the fine weather, but there appears to be more of it this time of the year. It is as much as we can we do at present to keep the trenches in good condition, owing to the wretched weather. It is surprising the quantity of rain that falls here; for the last month or so we have had rain almost every day. Now, I will tell you how this affects the trenches. After a continuous down-pour of rain for a day or two the trenches get pretty well flooded, that is to say, the water in the trenches is, more or less, a foot deep, and the soil, being very soft it doesn't take the water very long to eat its way into the sides of the trench; the result is the upper sides caves in, so that means the work has to be done all over again. In the front line, or fire trench, this does not occur very often, as we are supplied with "trench pumps," and with these we are able to keep the water pretty low. The Huns have to put up with the same thing, so that is one consolation; we know that for a fact. Only a few weeks ago their trench was so bad they started to walk along the top in broad daylight, but they soon jumped in again when our artillery opened up on them. Now that the winter is here we only stay in the trenches four days at a time.

While in the trenches each man is provided with a pair of waders and a change of socks every twenty-four hours. Each man is allowed to take his boots off for one hour each day, and give his feet a good rubbing, to prevent getting them frost-bitten. I presume that is the idea. When off duty in the trenches most of the fellows spend their time improving their dugouts; others wait till they get to the trenches to write to their friends and relatives, so as to have something to do, to pass away the time. As soon as it gets dark, or dusk, we stand to, and then night sentries are posted, as soon as the word "Stand Clear" is passed along. Most of the men are then detained for different duties; so many men from each platoon go and bring up the rations which generally consists of bread meat, bacon, jam and cheese; butter is generally issued twice a week in tins—1 pound in each. As soon as the ration party returns the first thing they are asked by the others "Is there a rum ration to-night fellows?" On these cold, wet mornings, a man looks forward to this ration, to take the cold and chill away, which one feels at 4 a.m. Each man gets about 5 oz. pure rum.

During the night all work is done which cannot be done in the daytime, such as testing and repairing the barbwire and parapet, which gets weakened occasionally by the enemy's shell fire. Patrols and listening posts are also sent out. No man is ever detailed for patrol duty—men volunteer for this kind of work. They go out and get as near to the enemy's lines as possible, and pick up what information they can, taking care to avoid their listening post — unless they are out to try and capture same. If the trenches happen to be fairly close to each other, that is, from 70 to 200 yards apart, the "bombers" have a little fun with the Huns, and make things a little exciting for a while. Where we are situated at present things are pretty quiet; during the night, now and then, you hear the crack of a rifle, or a pip, pip of a machine gun through the stillness of the night. The Huns send up star shells all night long; in fact they send up so many that we have no cause to use our own.

It is a funny thing that when troops come into the trenches for the first time, the questions they ask. Only a few weeks ago we took some into the trenches with us. No sooner were they in when an officer came up to me and asked me where the Germans were. He told me he wanted to go and have a "crack" at one. Of course I couldn't help laughing at this, and he was rather surprised when I told him he might be out here two or three months before he saw one. He thought it very strange, so I told him they keep well under cover, and it is only now and then you get a glimpse of one, who happens to be a bit careless. I have often sat at a sniping wicket for four or five hours at a time without getting a shot at one; another time I might get a shot at one inside of an hour. The best time to catch them moving around is when it is raining hard, or their trenches are being shelled. The first German I ever shot was at Fleur Haix, last March. I happened to be on sentry at the time, and it was raining hard. It was just as I was giving up my usual glance over the parapet to see that all was O.K. when I spotted a German emptying a bucket of water over the front of his trench. It was the first German I had seen out here, and my second or third time in the trenches, so I called to the half-dozen or so, fellows, who happened to be near at the time to come and have a look at him. In the meantime I got a "bead" on him and fired, (as soon as they had a glimpse at him). His bucket went one side of the parapet and he the other. Well, we thought that great fun and had quite a good laugh over it.

I am sorry to say there are only two of those comrades here now; the others have been either wounded or killed.

In your last letter you asked me how many casualties we have had since our arrival in France. I am sorry but we are not allowed to tell the number of casualties until such time as they are published in the papers.

I think I have told you as much as I am allowed to about trench warfare, so I will now conclude. I remain

Belgians Saved By Sunday Schools

Box Collection for Purchasing of Wheat Adopted by Several Montreal Organizations

MONTREAL, Jan. 3.—Not a few Belgian families will be kept from actual starvation this winter through the efforts of a number of Sunday School children in Montreal and suburbs. Ten dollars will see a Belgian family through the winter, will supply them with the Canadian wheat, which is the one source of life to three of the seven millions of the martyred country.

Realizing this, several of the Sunday Schools in this vicinity issued small boxes to the members into which daily contributions have been dropped. These boxes are turned in periodically to the treasurer of the Sunday School and the funds are sent to the Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter street. It is surprising how rapidly these small contributions grow into large one, and how many Belgian families have been provided for by this means alone.

EIGHT MEN KILLED IN OIL EXPLOSION

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—According to the police of South Chicago, eight men were killed and twenty injured in an explosion in the plant of the American Linseed Oil Co. at One Hundred and Tenth street and the Calumet River. The building caught fire following an explosion of a tank of naphtha in the metal room of the plant. The oil let go with a terrific roar that shook buildings within a radius of a mile and broke hundreds of windows. Flames were shooting through the roof of the structure as the employees fled.

Underneath the burning building is a great tank containing 80,000 gallons of naphtha. "If the heat ever reaches it and causes combustion, I shudder to think of the consequences," said Manager Titse.

The police compelled every resident within a radius of two blocks to leave home at once.

The loss so far is estimated at $1,000,000.

New Year's Music On The Chimes

The People's Chimes were played at p.m. and at midnight on New Year's eve and at 11 a.m. New Year's Day. The selections at the passing of the old year were especially appropriate and much appreciated.

"God Save the King."
"Auld Lang Syne."
"A Few More Years Shall Roll."
"Days and Moments Quickly Flying."
"Tenor Bells Tolled Out the Year."
"Winchester Quarters."
"New Year's Peal With All the Bells."
"The Year is Gone Beyond Recall."
"Give Peace, O God, Give Peace Again."
"Holy Father in Thy Mercy."
"Cavillon."
"God Save the King."

The bells were played by Mr. R. J. Devey, (Chimes Master), Mr. John Butcher, Mr. Cyril Devey and Private John Bacon, 93rd Battalion.

Interesting And Impressive Ceremony Took Place Yesterday Morning In The Presence of a Large Congregation—Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., General Superintendent of The Methodist Church, Received The Keys on Behalf of The Denomination

"I desire to thank you on behalf of the Methodist Church of Canada which extends from Bermuda to the Yukon."—Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., LL.D., General Superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada.

Thus did the Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., officially acknowledge the addition of Trinity Methodist Church to that ever-growing "organization known as the Methodist Church of Canada. The formal dedication service was accounted for yesterday morning in the presence of a large congregation. The new edifice which has seating accommodation for nine hundred people, was filled to capacity. The front pews were reserved for members of the City Council and other dignitaries who were present. With the Rev. S. D. Chown, D.D., was the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., pastor of Trinity Church, the Rev. B. Greatrex, pastor of St. James Methodist Church, and Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of George Street Methodist Church.

REV. J. P. WILSON, B.A.,
Pastor of Trinity Methodist Church.

Consecration Service.

The consecration service was brief and impressive. At the appointed moment the Trustee Board foregathered around the altar and W. G. Morrow handed the keys of the new church to the Rev. S. D. Chown. The latter thanked the Board on behalf of the Church of which he is superintendent, and also commended the members as well as the congregation for the success that had attended their efforts to meet the increasing demands that were made upon the old Charlotte Street Church. He expressed the hope that the transition would be a blessing in the history of the church, and that the members of Trinity Church would dedicate their lives to God.

A Supreme Law.

The Rev. S. D. Chown took for his text the ninety-third Psalm, fifth verse—"Thy testimonies are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O Lord, for ever."

"It would be very inconsistent of us if we were to dedicate this church to the service of God and did not dedicate ourselves," said the speaker. "Holiness is a supreme law of a spiritual universe. All God's laws work for our good if we put ourselves in harmony with them. Too many of us try to live a second best life, and as a result we dislocate our proper relations with God. Why should we expend money and blood to destroy Kaiserism and be enslaved in our souls. We must be consistent. All work worth while being done in the world to-day is being done by consecrated men. Such men we have in the British Cabinet. Those men will come through unscratched because the people believe they are consecrated to their task. Among them is Asquith, Balfour, Kitchener and Lloyd George.

"The darkest hour of this war has come to me when I have wondered if we were worthy of victory. Every man who is worthy to live to-day has his soul haunted if he does not recognize his duty to God and man. Men who do not consecrate themselves to God are not worthy to live in the present age," said the speaker in conclusion.

Two French Aviators Make Their Escape

GENEVA, Jan. 3.—(Via Paris.) Two French aviators, Sergt. Georges Madon and Corp. Rene Chatelain, who were interned at Zurich, escaped in a sensational manner to Evian, on the French side of Lake Geneva.

The two aviators obtained permission to take a walk, under guard of a soldier of the Swiss Landsturm named Wuest, in the vicinity of the place where they were interned. Accordingly they started out, accompanied by a fox terrier which later played a part in their escape. The guard, not suspecting any ruse, led them to a quiet place. There, according to a pre-arranged plan, Charles Beck, a French Territorial soldier on sick leave, whose acquaintance the aviators had made, awaited in civilian clothes with an automobile.

Wuest was stunned, bound and muffled into the car. The others jumped to after him and speeded to Ouchy, on Lake Geneva, by way of Berne and Friburg. At Ouchy they embarked in an auto boat previously hired by Beck and sailed off under the eyes of a Swiss gendarme, who made no attempt to stop them, the presence of the fox terrier leading him to believe that the men in the boat were civilians. The trip to French territory was made without incident.

PEACE AND PROSPERITY THREATENING IN MEXICO

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 3.—The Carranza Consul-General, Andres Garcia of this city, gave out the following official statement regarding the present status of the military situation in Northern Mexico:

"For the first time since Ciudad Juarez became a Carranzista possession, General Alvaro Obregon crossed the Rio Grande to-day into Mexican territory. There were absolutely no disorders and the former Villa soldiers greeted their new Chief enthusiastically.

"More than 8,000 Villa troops have voluntarily surrendered their arms to General Trevino at Chihuahua during the past week. Each man was given 100 pesos and mustered into the Carranzista ranks. Ignacio Enrique was installed as Governor of Chihuahua last Wednesday.

"Foreign and Mexican property confiscated by the Villa Government during its reign in Mexico is being returned to its rightful owners. The affairs of the national railways of Mexico have been turned over to its legal officials and more than $500,000 worth of American mines, cattle and other property recently confiscated by Villa have been returned to their owners.

"Trains between El Paso and Torreon will run daily each day with Pullman car service."

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Spencely Celebrate Golden Wedding

With Members of Their Family And Grandchildren on New Year's Eve—Address and Presentation.

FOUR GENERATIONS THERE

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Spencely celebrated on New Year's Eve the golden anniversary of their wedding, at their home, 222 London street. All the members of the family were present with one exception, as follows: Mrs. Geo. Steep of Galt, Mrs. Wm. Lloyd of Toronto, Mr. Geo. Spencely of Lindsay, Mrs. Slight, William, Joseph and Albert of Peterborough. Mrs. A. E. Lucas of Winnipeg, was unable to be present on account of illness. The only guests other than immediate relatives were Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney. Four generations were represented, Mrs. Hodges, 86 years old, mother of Mrs. Mark Spencely, Mrs. Spencely herself, her children, and grandchildren. It was a very happy event and a most enjoyable family gathering.

During the evening the following address on behalf of the family was read by Mr. Albert Spencely, and Mrs. Slight presented her father with a gold headed ebony walking stick, and her mother a tea-set and purse of gold.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mother and Father, — It is with the greatest pleasure that we have all assembled here this evening to celebrate this your golden wedding. We feel it is one of our Heavenly Father's greatest blessings bestowed on us all that you two should be spared to see this occasion, and we must not in our great joy forget to thank Him for it. We wish to express, to you, dear parents, how dearly you are loved by us all; your loving care and watchfulness over us all from childhood has been kindness all the way. You have sacrificed a great deal of your own pleasures for us, but in so doing you have set an example to each of us that we may safely follow.

During the past years we have not failed to notice your unbounding good nature and unfailing love which you have always manifested. You have both shared our joys and sorrows all through life, and the rough spots were often made smooth by your kind words. And we as a family all know Dear Parents that your life has not been all sunshine; there has been many a dark cloud, but with God's help you have been a helpmate to each other, you have borne each other's burdens bravely, and now at this wolden eventide of your life we have gathered here to try in some small way to express our love and gratitude. We ask you, Dear Parents, to accept this small token of love. We can't express our feelings, words sound hollow, but we sincerely hope you may both be spared to us for many years to come, and that you may enjoy health, wealth and happiness. May your remaining years be crowned with blessings that shall not pass away.

Signed on behalf of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencely and Mrs. Hodges made bright replies reminiscent of the long years they had spent in Peterborough.

A feature of the affair was the dinner served late in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Spencely have spent practically their entire lives in Peterborough, and have made a host of friends who will join in felicitating them on attaining their golden wedding day, and will extend every wish that their remaining years will bring them new happiness.

CANADA'S OVERSEAS FORCES ARE TO BE INCREASED TO 500,000

Announcement Made by Sir Robert Borden "In Token of Canada's Unflinching Resolve To Crown The Justice of Our Cause With Victory and Abiding Peace

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—The Dominion of Canada will double its overseas army. An increase of 100 per cent. in the authorized total for overseas service was announced by Sir Robert Borden in a notable New Year message to the Canadian people. "Yesterday," he said, "the authorized forces of Canada numbered 250,000, and the number enlisted was rapidly approaching that limit. To-day, the first day of the New Year, our authorized force will be 500,000. This announcement is made in token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause and an abiding peace."

Only a little over a month ago announcement was made of the Government's authorization of 250,000 men as Canada's total force. Now, almost on its heels ,comes the doubling of this number of fighting men. It will be a big task for the military organization of the Dominion, for it means that what has been done in the way of enlistment since the beginning of the war will have to be duplicated. There is the advantage that experience and organization brings, but, on the other hand, with the raising of the additional quarter of a million men authorized, the Dominion will approach the limit which it is possible to recruit. This is placed at 16 per cent. in any country, even where conscription prevails, experience having shown that this is the largest number of physically fit which can be drafted into the ranks of the fighting men unless the interior economy is to suffer. If 500,000 men are raised in this country, it will mean that between six and seven per cent. of the total population will be rendering military service. In attempting the task, Canada again steps ahead of Australia, which has up to the present authorized only 300,000 soldiers. Net figures of recruiting for overseas service to December 15, 1915, are 197,680 men. There have been recruited since December 15, 15,000 more, making a total of 212,680. Of these, 118,892 have been sent to Europe and 1,200 to Bermuda, and St. Lucia, a total overseas force of 120,128. There have been brought back from Europe 1,841 men. In the firing line in France and Belgium to-day there are upwards of 50,000 Canadians. In the transport of these troops in Canada one soldier was accidentally killed; none have yet been lost by water transport. There are now practically three divisions at the front, with more than three in England for reinforcements.

Sir Robert Borden's Message.

The Premier's message, which was issued from his residence, where he is lying ill, follows:

"More than a twelvemonth ago our Empire consecrated all its powers and its supreme endeavour to a great purpose which concerns the liberties of the world and the destinies of all its nations.

"In the dawn of another year our hearts are more resolute than ever to accomplish that task, however formidable it may prove. By the greatness of the need our future efforts must be measured.

"Nowhere is the Canadian spirit more firm and unwavering than among the men who hold the trenches and those who will shortly stand by their side; nowhere is it more undaunted than in the hospitals and convalescent homes.

"Already we have learned the full meaning of sacrifice. To all Canadian homes that have been saddened, to all Canadian hearts that have been stricken by the tragedy of this war, we pray that Divine blessing may bring consolation and healing.

"Much had to be learned during the past fifteen months because we had not prepared for this war. The strongest assurance of ultimate victory lies in the fact that we were not crushed in learning that hard lesson. Those who forced this war upon us may be assured by the traditions of our past that the lesson will be thoroughly learned to the end that there shall be enduring peace. The very character and greatness of the ideals for which we are fighting forbid us to pause until their triumph is fully assured.

"The Canadian forces at the front have indeed fought a good fight; and they have crowned the name of Canada with undying laurels. To them and to all the overseas forces now under arms and awaiting the opportunity to do their part, we bid Godspeed, in the sure faith that they will never fail in their duty.

"On this the last day of the old year the authorized forces of Canada number 250,000, and the number enlisted is rapidly approaching that limit.

"From to-morrow, the first day of the New Year, our authorized force will be 500,000.

"This announcement is made in token of Canada's unflinching resolve to crown the justice of our cause with victory and an abiding peace."

Sugar Crop Turned Out Satisfactory

This May Result in Easier Prices For The Saccharine Product—The Tea Situation

FLOUR IS UP

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

The interest in the grocery market this week falls in two lines, the future of which is problematical. The first is sugar. New crop Cubans are now being harvested and upon them and the demand for them will devolve the future price of sugar for some time to come. The situation is just this. It looks at present as if the crop is going to be a good one, and, conceding only an ordinary demand, we should see lower levels in sugar than have obtained for some time. The crop is turning out everything that can be expected and unless some unusual factor in the way of demand presents itself we shall doubtless see an easiness and lower prices. However, there may be a joker in the pack in the shape of a revived large demand from both France and England, in which case it seems reasonable to assume that levels will be higher or maintained, instead of lower. The present market affords no clue at all to the future. Trade is pursuing its ordinary steady course, and buying is about average. Nevertheless there has been a certain firmness for the last two or three weeks, as we have pointed out from time to time in these reports and there is a feeling in some quarters that, unless the crop is exceptionally good, the demand will be so heavy that we shall not see very much easiness. One sugar man put it like this last week. "I would hate to sell sort," he said, "for a long time yet." But unless there is something in the way of a big demand, it does not seem reasonable to assume that given a fairly large crop, we shall see some lower prices on sugar.

The Situation.

The tea situation is also interesting, because, after so many months of a continual advance, followed by a month or two of slight easiness, the market at the London auction on both Indians and Ceylons has advanced one penny within two weeks; this has gone by stages of a farthing, a farthing and a halfpenny. Moreover, it is important, that it be noted that these advances apply to all grades of tea. There has been a marked firmness for the last month or so and everything from dust to fine grade teas has had an upward trend. The reason assigned for this in circulars coming over from England, is that bidding is now much more general, and that at the lower levels which proceeded these advances the trade did not get all the teas they wanted. It appears there is now heavy buying on all grades. Even common grades are higher. Possibly another material factor in the situation is the dearth of freights from India and Ceylon to London. These are very, very hard to get, harder, it is said, now than at any time during the war, and that may have considerable influence in firming up the market. Nevertheless the man who argues the other way, points out that there must be huge stocks of tea in London. It looks, although it is foolish to predict anything about such a market as the tea market at present, that we are in for a period of at any rate very firm levels, if not actual advances and we should not be surprised to see the latter.

Manitoba flour went up forty cents during past 10 days and is very firm at the new quotations. Bran and shorts are also up a dollar a ton or so and good flour is also higher. The grain market seems to be in a tense condition and the rise in flour was not unexpected. It was hinted at it in our last issue.

3000 Saloons Close Doors In Seven New Dry States

Many Breweries, Wholesale Houses Distilleries Must Go Out of Business Under Prohibition Law.

SALOON BARGAIN SALES

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Statewide prohibition of the sale and manufacture of intoxicating liquors will become effective in seven states at midnight to-night, putting out of business more than 3,000 saloons, a large number of breweries, wholesale liquor houses and distilleries.

The states which are to enter the dry column are Iowa, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arkansas and South Carolina. Many counties in all of the seven states have prohibited the sale of liquor for a number of years under local option laws.

Arkansas will have its first experience with prohibition when the statewide law passed by the last legislature goes into effect with the coming of the new year. The Arkansas department of the Anti-Saloon league has announced that the league will have workers in the field to see that the law is enforced.

The Iowa "bargain day sales" in the 502 saloons of the state are in progress to-day preparatory to the final closing to-night.

In Oregon the manufacture or sale of any kind of intoxicating liquor is absolutely prohibited by constitutional amendment. Drug stores are not permitted to sell liquor for any purpose with or without a doctor's prescription. Each family may import for personal use either two quarts of spirituous or vineous liquors or 24 quarts of malt liquor in any period of four successive weeks.

In the state of Washington the initiative prohibition law ratified in November, 1913, permits residents to purchase from dealers outside the state two quarts of spirituous liquor or 12 quarters of beer each 20 days.

Idaho will go dry to-night by virtue of statutory prohibition. Most of the state has been dry under local option and only about 150 saloons will be forced out of business. Idaho's prohibition law is said to be the most drastic in the Union. It not only prohibits the manufacture and sale of liquor, but makes possession of any kind of malt or spirituous liquor a crime, excepting wine for sacramental purposes and pure alcohol for medical, scientific and mechanical uses, which is procurable only on an order from the Probate court.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 31.—The South Carolina dispensary system will cease to exist at sundown to-day. Under the new prohibition law individuals may obtain shipment of one gallon of liquor a month for personal use. Certain spirits are permitted for church, arts and sciences, according to an opinion by the attorney-general of the state.

The Procession of The Months

First, JANUARY charged with hope and fear,
Flings open wide the portals of the year;

Then FEBRUARY comes with storm and rain;
Whilst boisterous MARCH goes shouting down the plain;

And then sweet APRIL, smiling through her tears,
Shakes raindrops from her hair and disappears;

MAY comes in singing, and, still singing goes;
Whilst JUNE is glad with nightingale and rose;

JULY grows languid with the summer's heat,
And sits beside the stream and bathes her feet;

Whilst sultry AUGUST sees her harbests grow
And ripen 'till the sickle lays them low;

SEPTEMBER follows later with a hoard
Of fruits to brighten all the Autumn's board;

OCTOBER'S torch, when the cold makes its claim,
Touches the fields and sets the woods aflame;

Then comes NOVEMBER, frosty lance in hand,
And scatters his white mists about the land;

White-cloaked DECEMBER passes, and the door
Closes upon those months for evermore.

Prophecies Of The War's End

Two Years' Struggle is Foretold—Different Prophets Were Agreed That Allies Will Win

The following prophecies about the war are taken from a book printed at Turin in 1858 entitled "A Collection of Some Remarkable Prophecies and Vaticanations."

A Swiss hermit that died at St. Gall, in 1760, predicted that there would be "famine, hunger, devastations and considerable mortality throughout Europe in 1915."

An anonymous French monk wrote toward the end of the eighteenth century that "in 1915 the Turks, Heretics, Schismatics, Catholics, and Idolators of foreign nations will go against each other with anger and fury," adding:

"The first spark of the great war will start from the North. The war will last about two years and the armies of the enemies will not invade the apostate empire, but they will surround and wait until the rebels return to their duty. They (the rebels), however, will not make any act of submission or of repentance but continue their excesses, so that all the Powers of Europe will be allied against them."

The prediction ends with a description of Te Deums and thanksgiving services in all the churches and temples "for the victory of the Allies."

A prophecy made by a Flemish monk in 1793 alludes to two wars against Austria with Russia's participation and continues as follows:

Russia Will Return.

"The Turks who will take part in the struggle will not cross their frontiers, but the foreigners will invade France."

A Capuchin friar of Genazzano, writing in the eighteenth century predicted the war in Italy in the following terms:

"Serious disagreements will arise between the Allied Powers and the two Emperors will be compelled to fight against their ally."

Finally another prophecy by Dr. Cumming, a Protestant minister runs as follows:

"Russia, driven away from her frozen trenches, will again return, crushing every resistance, and she will even reach Palestine. England will defend to the very end God, the Bible, freedom and life until the Pope will crown with his own hands a personage and declare him Emperor of the Romans and there shall be then peace throughout the world."

SCHOOLS RE-OPEN TO-MORROW MORNING

The Normal, Collegiate Institute and Public Schools will re-open to-morrow after the Christmas vacation. Teachers and students were given to-day to allow those residing out of the city to spend New Year's Day and yesterday at their homes. They will return to town to-day, ready to resume their duties to-morrow.

AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH YESTERDAY

The National Day of Prayer was observed at Murray Street Church yesterday. The Communion service in the morning was a specially large gathering. In the evening an opportunity was given after the sermon for men to lead in prayer from the pews. A number took part in supplication for the speedy coming of honourable peace. The proclamation setting apart the second of January as a day of special prayer was read from the pulpit.

Members of Murray Street occupied the pulpits of St. James and Mark Street Methodist Churches in the morning, relieving the ministers who took part in the dedication of the new Trinity Church.

REGULAR MEETING OF W.C.T.U. HELD FRIDAY

The W.C.T.U. held their regular monthly meeting on Friday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. A special collection was taken for the Dominion Alliance.

The members of the Union decided to hold a rummage sale about the third week in January.

After the business of the meeting was concluded, the president, Mrs. Whalley, read a very interesting article on the foundation of Flower Mission work in the W.C.T.U., which was much enjoyed by all.

NEW YEAR'S GREETING TO G.T.R. EMPLOYEES

Sent Out By The General Manager Of The Company

The General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway has made the following New Year's greeting to the employees of the company:

To All Concerned—

At the closing of the old year and the beginning of the new, I desire to extend to all officers and employees of the Company my best wishes for the health and happiness of themselves and families, during the New Year, and to thank them on behalf of myself and the Board of Directors for the loyal and efficient service rendered the company during the past year by all classes of employees, and to solicit the co-operation of every employee in making the Grand Trunk and its service to the public for 1916 the best of any railroad on the Continent.

Customs Receipts Show Big Increase

The Customs receipts for the month of December were $82,300.99, while for December, 1914, they totalled $27,576.13, this year being an increase of $54,822.86 over the previous one.

PRESTATION AT SALEM

On Monday evening, December 27, the young people of the Salem neighborhood gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. E. Sargeant, where they presented Miss Clara Armstrong organist of the Salem Methodist church with a Ladies, companion.

Rev. A. R. Whattam, pastor of the church was present, and read the following address, while Miss Vina Sargeant made the presentation to Miss Clara Armstrong.

Dear Clara:

We your friends and pastor, of Salem Methodist church have taken this opportunity of expressing to you our appreciation of your faithful and untiring services as organist in our church.

It is not the fact that you have performed your duty so efficiently, that we feel indebted to you, but also that you have often-times sacrificed your own pleasure in order that you might be at your post to do that part which is so important in our church services.

As a token of our appreciation we ask you to accept this Ladies Companions as a more tangible evidence of the esteem and regard in which you are held by us.

We all join in wishing you a "Happy New Year" and hope you may be with us to fill your position for many years to come.

Signed on behalf of the Congregation Rev. R. A. Whattam, Anna Johnston, Roy Webster, C. A. Howson, Margaret Johnston.

Miss Armstrong was completely taken by surprise but suitably replied thanking the friends for their kind remembrance.

A short address was given by the Pastor, after which Miss Mabel Johnston read a letter from her brother "iLeut. T. D. Johnston" who is in the trenches requesting her to get the ladies of the neighborhood to knit socks for the men of his company, as sixty-five pairs of socks were needed within the shortest possible time, for the comfort of the men.

A committee was immediately appointed to purchase the wool and a subscription was taken up for the same which amounted to twelve dollars.

The usual choir practice was held, and the remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

A very pleasant day was spent at the Y.M.C.A. building New Year's Day, many friends of the Association taking advantage of the privilege of inspecting the re-arranged building. However, the officers in charge were disappointed in the fact that more of the people of our city did not take advantage of the open house. It was a pleasure, however, to note the interest that the young men and boys showed by their participation in the various events that had been planned. The senior young men and their guests made good use of the free bowling and billiards throughout the day and were the best patrons at the Ladies Auxiliary coffee table, in the afternoon. Mr. Cyril Devey presided at the piano from 3 to 5.30 while refreshments were being served, his music being a very enjoyable feature of the afternoon's programme. The bowling contest between men of the C. G. E. and Mr. Thos. Pratt's picked team was the big event of the evening programme. The results of the games are published elsewhere in this issue. Mr. Galley, a member of Mr. Pratt's team, broke all records for this year by bowling a score of 233. If Mr. Galley will continue this fast pace he will be a much sought after man by this year's bowling teams. The bowling enthusiasts will hold a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. building this (Monday) evening, at eight o'clock and it is hoped that every bowler will be present so that plans for the new league may be perfected. The supper announced to be served the membership workers and the members of the senior gym class to-night will be served to-morrow evening at 6.30 o'clock, after which there will be a rally of the gymnasium class for active work in the gym.

WEDDING BELLS

STEVENS—BLACK.

The marriage of Miss Ada Alberta Black of Bridgenorth, and Mr. Wm. David Stevens of this city, but formerly of Lindsay, was solemnized by Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., at the George street Methodist church on New Year's Day. The young couple were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will reside in the city.

DAVIDSON—CONDON.

The marriage of Miss Mayme Condon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Condon, 218 Perry Street, and Mr. William J. Davidson, son of Mr. George Davidson, Calgary, Alta., was solemnized at the Sacred Heart Church on January 1st by Rev. J. J. O'Brien. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson left on the 12.10 train for Quebec, where they will reside.

JONES—EDWARDS.

The wedding took place at Park Street Church on Christmas morning of Mr. Wm. H. Jones, of Toronto, to Miss Lilian Gwendoline Edwards, third daughter of Mr. James Edwards, of Peterborough. The bride who was given away by her father, looked charming in a bridal gown of cream satin, and veil of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of cream roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Dorothy Edwards and Miss Evelyn Edwards acted as bridesmaids, and wore dresses of blue silk poplin and pink silk poplin, and carried bouquets of cream roses and pink carnations. The groom was attended by Mr. Jas. Whatley, of Peterborough. The happy couple left for Toronto on Monday morning, amidst a shower of good wishes and confetti.

DYER—CASTLE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's Church on New Year's Day, when Miss Edith Kate Castle, formerly of England, was united in marriage to Bandsman Reginald F. Dyer, of the 93rd Battalion and formerly of Tiverton, Eng. The bride, who was given away by Bandsman J. James, was attired in a blue military costume, trimmed with velvet and wore a hat to match.

The bride was attended by Miss Irene May Dyer, sister of the bridegroom, and the groom was supported by his brother, Lance-Corp. Wm. T. Dyer.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Davidson, and the chimes were rung in honour of the event.

Many useful and costly gifts were received, including a handsome set of silverware from the band of the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.

chestra from the 93rd Band rendered enjoyable music. A feature of the evening was the presentation of a very handsome cut glass water set to Machine Gun Sergt. Herb. O'Heron, who is to join the ranks of the Benedicts shortly. The presentation was made by Company Sergeant Major Hartshorn.

A quantity of uniforms and supplies for the Apsley detachment of the 93rd were shipped from the Quartermaster's stores this morning.

Five recruits joined the 93rd Battalion at the Armouries this morning.

Recruiting for the Imperial Mechanical Transport is proceeding rapidly in all the military divisions under the direction of the Canadian authorities. To join the corps a man must be able to drive an automobile and attend to minor road troubles. He must have a sufficient knowledge of the engine to be able to learn more. The work is desirable and pay attractive. Separation allowance is paid. This transport is part of the British Army Service Corps, which is probably the best organized and most efficient part of the British Army. Full particulars can be obtained by writing to the Officer Commanding, Imperial Mechanical Transport Depot, Armouries, Cobourg, Ont. When writing state age, qualifications, address and 'phone number (if any), and, if possible, give some local man as a reference as to character, experience and mechanical qualifications. Also mention the nearest centre where recruiting is proceeding for the local battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Applicants for this Mechanical Transport will be given their medical and mechanical examinations at these centres, or as may be arranged. Men enlisted in Eastern Ontario are mobilising at Cobourg. Pay starts on enlistment.

New Aldermen Elected To The Council

Ald. Duncan Returns to the Council After a Year Out—Mr. Wm. Galbraith a New Member—The School Board Results

The aldermanic contests were in the West and North Wards. Ald. Duncan, with a majority of 130, defeated ex-Ald. Harry Phelan for the two-year term, while for the one-year term in the same ward, Wm. Galbraith was elected over W. C. Austin by a majority of 69.

School Board.

In the election of five members for the Board of Education, Dr. F. C. Neal headed the polls. Four of the five old members of the Board who sought re-election were returned in the following order: J. Crane, Dr. Burnham, Col. Miller, and W. H. Hill. Mr. J. Smith, a former member, was defeated, as was also W. S. Robinson.

The By-laws.

The Exhibition by-law, providing for the purchasing of the Exhibition grounds, at the sum of $30,000, met defeat, while the by-law to exempt the Metal Products Company from taxation, was carried by a good majority.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat; but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating throuhg the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

SINGLE MEN MUST JOIN.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 3.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, who returned to Ottawa from his home here, intimated that all unmarried men in the Canadian Civil Service who are physically fit and of military age, must join the Colours or lose their positions.

Returned soldiers, he intimated, are to be given the preference in the matter of Government positions.

SHE GAINED 26 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and fainting spells, and was in fact, a complete wreck. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 26 pounds in

Duffus Headed Polls After One Of Closest Races In The City's Mayoralty History

All Three Candidates Drew Strong Vote—Ex-Ald. Green Made a Great Race And It Was Anybody's Victory Almost Until Last Poll Was Heard From.

RESUME OF RETURNS

Ald. Jos. J. Duffus was elected Mayor of Peterboro to-day by a majority of 166 over ex-Ald. G. Walter Green and Mr. J. J Hartley who were returned in that order. It was an exciting race all the way and the Duffus majority of 166 was a long time growing even to that figure. But the "little old Ford" drew away in the last lap and moved home with his dust and tail lamp in the eyes of the rest of the field.

The figures of the vote are given in another column and are approximately correct.

The first five returns gave Green a slight majority with the following figures—Duffus, 220; Green, 249; Hartley 195.

Five more polling places put Duffus in the majority and improved Hartley's position, the totals then being—Duffus, 465; Green, 456; Hartley 423.

Most of the polling places were from the North and centre ward.

Sub division No. 12—Babb's Lane was next heard from giving Duffus 102; Green, 105 and Hartley, 16.

This was a blow to Mr. Hartley but it meant very little either way for the two other candidates.

At the half way the standing was Duffus, 567; Green 561; Hartley, 441.

R. C. Braund's store next heard from, split practically even three ways— Duffus getting 48; Green 42; and Hartley 48.

The next five places increased the Duffus majority to 70 over his next opponent. These polls gave Duffus 294; Green 231 and Hartley 206—The totals with five places unheard from were Duffus 904; Green 884; Hartley, 690.

Subdivision No. 11—Increased Duffus' lead the totals there giving Duffus, 996; Green 882; Hartley, 716; four remaining to hear from.

Three of them coming in soon after assured Duffus' election, with one poll still to register, the figures were Duffus, 1142; Green, 1026; Hartley, 628.

After six years' experience as an Alderman, the citizens have honoured Mr. J. J. Duffus with their confidence by giving him the Chief Magistracy of the City.

Foe Lacks Cotton For Explosives

Powder Mills Will Never Buy Another Bale From America, Bremen Official Predicts

BREMEN, Germany, Jan. 4.—Germany's experiments with substitutes for cotton in the manufacture of explosives have been so sucessful, it was announced here to-day, that for eight months no cotton has been used for this purpose. Thi sstatement was made by the President of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce, in an address to a convention of merchants of this city. After referring to the designation of cotton as contraband by Great Britain he said:

"I have had the opportunity to establish officially that for eight months not a kilogram of cotton has been used for making powder. Thanks to the work of German science and industry, we have succeeded in winning from the immeasurable supply of German forests a new cellular material which is cheaper and better suited for powder making than cotton. Even after the war German ammunition factories will not buy another bale of cotton from America.

"The second important ingredient—saltpetre—of the entire Chilean ouput of which we farmers took two-thirds, is now manufactured exclusively in Germany from the air. Our factories already are so advanced that in the comin gspring they will be able to cover the entire requirements for nitrogen, including the amount used in agriculture, and if the war lasts longer they will even be able to export this product."

The speaker also asserted that camphor, which for seven years has been produced synthetically from American turpentine, was now obtained more cheaply and in better quality by chemical means from turpentine. Even after the war he said, there would be no more importation of camphor from Japan or turpentine from America.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—It is expected the Suez Canal will be closed to mercantile traffic as a result of submarine activity.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—A train ran into a burning trestle in Mexico, and twenty were killed, including women and children.

ATHENS, Jan. 4.—The Allies have arrested all Teutonic subjects, and Bulgarians and Turks in Salonika.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Lord Montagu, of the British Diplomatic Service, is among those drowned with the Persia.

ZURICH, Jan. 4.—Emperor Francz Josef has nominated Count Sewis, Governor-General of Serbia.

NO USEFUL MILITARY PURPOSE WILL BE SERVED BY ALLIES' TROOPS IN SALONIKA

So King Constantine Thinks—An Athens Newspaper States Martial Law Will Be Declared January 15th

LONDON, Jan. 4.—An Athens newspaper states that martial law will be declared on January 15 and that the Chamber of Deputies has been summoned to meet on the 17th to ratify the proclamation thereof.

The Athens correspondent of the Daily Chronicle states in a despatch that the King of Greece told him he could not understand what the Entente allies were supposed to be gaining in remaining at Salonika. The correspondent quotes King Constantine as follows:

"I could understand their presence so long as there was a possibility of aiding Serbia, but now that the object of the mission has failed why remain? No useful military purpose is now to be served. It is fairly obvious that if the Anglo-French withdrew and sought a fresh and more profitable field of operations the armies of the Central Powers would withdraw also and the situation would solve itself."

The King added, says the correspondent, that he did not expect an offensive by either side and that therefore a Balkan stalemate might reasonably be expected.

CONSTANTINE'S HONESTY.

The Athens correspondent of the Mail has had an interview with King Constantine, whom he credits with perfect honesty in his desire to serve Hellenic, not German, interests and not to be drawn into the European conflict, while he wishes to avoid a quarrel with Germany, desires to be friendly with the allies and has no secret understanding with Bulgaria. The King, according to the correspondent, said:

TRYING TO AID ALLIES.

"There was never any reason for the suspicion with which we were treated. Unfortunately there were a number of small difficulties with the French and English, but rest assured we will do all possible to bring about a complete understanding with the allies. We have no desire but to accord you every facility. The possible umbrage which I felt at some of your actions has quite passed as a result of the harmony prevailing at Salonika. I desire the closest friendship with Great Britain, but I will not be forced out of my neutrality, which I shall maintain while I am convinced that Greek interests are best served thereby."

CONSULS TO BE FREED.

An Athens despatch to the Mail says that the consuls recently arrested at Salonika will be liberated shortly, either at Piraeus or Marseilles, with safe conducts. The allied legations are awaiting instructions before tendering explanations to the Greek government.

The Bulgarian government has arrested the French Vice-Consul, who had remained at Sofia, in retaliation for the arrest of the Bulgarian Consul at Salonika.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few application all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—A Canadian General representative at the Front cables as follows:

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Thirty Anglo-French transports have disembarked 45,000 troops in the Gulf of Orfano, east of Salonika.

RUSSIAN WARSHIPS SINK TWO GERMAN SUBMARINES

Special to The Examiner.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 3. — Russian warships have sunk two German submarines off the Bulgarian Black Sea port of Varna, according to reports reaching here to-day.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — The Norwegian tank liner Aztec blew up at Robbins Dock, Brooklyn, this afternoon, while fifty men were at work aft.

It is reported that many were killed.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—"The United States faces the profoundest crisis since the Civil War," declared Rev. J. A. MacDonald, editor of the Toronto Globe to-day.

"Nineteen hundred and sixteen will be the most serious year the world has known since the coming of Jesus Christ," he said.

"Jan. 2.—During the period, Dec. 22-31, there has been no material change in the situation at the Front, of the Canadian corps. The weather has shown improvement over the previous weeks. There have been several days of bright sunshine. Christmas Day was the finest day of the month. The Old Year passed out under a cloudless sky. On Christmas Day several small parties of Germans attempted to fraternize with our men, but were dispersed by our rifle fire. The health of our troops remains excellent.

"Inspired by the glorious record of Canadian arms in the past year, and cheered by messages from home, all ranks are welcoming the New Year with unflinching spirits and an unchanged confidence in approaching victory."

We Thank You

WE thank OUR FRIENDS and CUSTOMERS for the Confidence placed in us during the year of 1915.

We solicit a continuance of your kind patronage in the coming year and take this opportunity of wishing all HEALTH and HAPPINESS during 1916.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF KILLING TRAPPER

REGINA, Sask., Jan. 4. — Word reached the city of the arrest of Frank W. Russell at Prince Albert on a charge of murder following the inquest into the death of Jas. Nelson, a trapper who died as a result of a bullet wound received in the head at his camp at Bear Mountain.

Nelson died in his camp on the night of Nov. 18 from a bullet wound in the head. The first report of the occurrence which reached the provincial police was on Nov. 28. Up to Dec. 6 provincial police officer T. M. Clarke worked on the case and traced Russell from one camp to another until he finally arrested him and started on his 12 days journey to Prince Albert. He brought the body of Nelson with him as well as Indian witnesses.

On facing the magistrate after he arrived at Prince Albert, Russell told a story of an accidental discharge of a rifle but following a postmortem examination of the body the police have now laid the capital charge against him.

2,000,000 Belgians Depend on us for Bread!

Since shortly after the German invasion, the Belgians have depended for food entirely on the "Commission for Relief in Belgium". Their own store of food, even if not destroyed or pillaged, would last only three weeks—they have had no chance to raise more—and the ruthless Germans refuse to supply them!

Backed by the

so generously contributed in the British Empire and the United States, the neutral Belgian Relief Commission has imported enough wheat, flour and other foods to feed the whole nation so far. The great majority of the 7,000,000 Belgians left in the country have been able to pay for their daily allowance of bread—but a steadily growing number have no money left.

Unless we are willing to let these hundreds of thousands of women, children and old men starve, they must be fed at the expense of the Belgian Relief Fund. To make this possible someone must contribute nearly $3,000,000 a month—every month—all this winter!

No people under the Allied Flags are as well able to contribute generously as we Canadians! No cause has ever been more deserving of help! In the name of Justice and Humanity—for the sake of our own self-respect—let us give all we can to help our martyred Allies!

OUR SERIAL STORY

"What?" he shrieked. "Am I a beggar? Should I give my niece a miserable $2,000? Ain't I got no pride? I got to make it $5,000." He paused while his imagination dwelt on the magnitude of this colossal sum. "Five thousand dollars," he shrieked again, "and business the way it is!"

Mr. Perlmutter laid a soothing palm on Cohen's shoulder.

"But, Mr. Cohen," he said, "what can we do? Why should you tell us all this?"

Mr. Cohen shook off Morris' caress.

"You're right," he said. "Why should I tell you all this? I didn't come here to tell you this. I come here to tell you something else. I come here to tell you to cancel all orders what I give you; also if you or your salesman come by my place ever again look out, that's all. The way I feel it now I'll murder you." He turned to leave. "And another thing," he concluded, "one thing, you can depend on it. So far what I can help it you don't sell one dollar's worth of goods to any of my friends never no more."

Again the door banged explosively, and Mr. Cohen was gone.

"That's what comes of not minding your own business," said Abe. "We lose a good customer and maybe several good customers. We lose a good bookkeeper, too, Mawruss; one what has been with us for five years, and also we are out a wedding present."

"I meant it good," Morris protested. "I done it for the best. It says in the Talmud, Abe, that we are commanded to promote marriages."

IV.

A month passed and Miss Cohen continued to apply herself to her daily task at Potash & Perlmutter's books.

"I don't understand it, Mawruss," Abe said one morning. "Why don't that girl quit her job? She must have all sorts of things to do—clothes to buy and furniture to pick out, ain't it?"

Perlmutter shrugged his shoulders.

"I spoke to her about it," he replied, "and she says so long as we're so busy here, she guesses she will stay on the job as long as she can. She says her mommer and her sister can do all the shopping for her."

"You see, Mawruss, what a mistake you make," Abe commented with a sigh. "That's a fine girl, that Miss Cohen!"

Morris nodded gloomily. He began to realize that he had made a mistake, after all. Only that morning Mrs. Perlmutter had demanded $20 with which to make over her best frock for Miss Cohen's wedding.

"Sure, she's a fine girl," he agreed, "but you got to admit yourself, Abe, that a growing business like ours needs a hustling young man for a bookkeeper."

"That's all right, too, Mawruss," said Abe, "but you also got to admit that what a growing business like ours needs most of all, Mawruss, is customers, and so far what I see we don't gain any customers by this. Also, my wife has got to have a new dress for the wedding. She told me so this morning."

At length the wedding day arrived. Miss [illegible] left Potash & Perlmutter's at 4 o'clock, for the ceremony was set for 7:30 in the evening. Her parting with her employers was an embarrassing one for all three. Abe handed her a check for $25, with the firm's blessing, and Morris shook her hand in comparative silence. He had done and suffered much for that moment of leave taking, and further than wishing her a long and happy married life, he said nothing. As for Abe, the squandering of $25, without hope of return, temporarily exhausted his capacity for emotion.

"Good luck to you, Miss Cohen," he said. "Hope we see you again soon."

"Oh, sure!" Miss Cohen replied cheerfully. "You'll be at the wedding tonight?"

Abe nodded—they all nodded—and then, with a final handshake all around, Miss Cohen departed.

It must be confessed that the wedding reception that evening was a very enjoyable occasion for all the guests, with the possible exception of Max Cohen. The wine flowed like French champagne at $4 a quart, while, as Morris Perlmutter at once deduced from the careful way in which the waiters disguised the label with a napkin, it was really domestic champagne of an inferior quality. Nevertheless Abe Potash drank more than his share in a rather futile attempt to get back in kind part of the twelve and a half dollars he had contributed toward Miss Cohen's wedding present, to say nothing of the cost of his wife's gown.

Consequently on the morning after the festivities he entered his place of business in no very pleasant frame of mind. He found that Morris had already arrived.

"Well, Mawruss," he said in greeting, "everything went off splendid—for Feinsilver. Max Cohen came down with a certified check for $5,000, you and me got rid of about over a hundred, counting the wedding present and our wives' dresses, and Miss Cohen got a husband and a lot of cut glass, while me—I got a headache!"

Morris grunted.

"Did you put an 'ad.' in the papers, Mawruss?"

"No, I ain't," Morris snapped.

"Ain't you going to?"

"What for?" Morris growled. "We don't need no bookkeeper."

"Why not?" Abe cried.

Morris nodded in the direction of the office.

"Because we got one," he replied.

Abe turned toward the little glass inclosure. He gasped in amazement and nearly swallowed the stump of his cigar, for at the old stand, industriously applying herself to the books of Potash & Perlmutter, sat Mrs. Isaac Feinsilver, nee Cohen.

A moment later the door opened, and Isaac Feinsilver entered immaculately clothed in a suit of zebra-like design. He proceeded to the bookkeeper's office and kissed the blushing bride; then he repaired to the sample room.

"Good morning, Mawruss! Good morning, Abe!" he said briskly. "Ain't it a fine weather?" He threw a bundle of swatches upon a sample table. "My partners, Goldner & Plotkin, and me"—here he paused to note the effect—"is putting out a fine line of spring goods, and I want to show you some."

Abe and Morris looked over Ike's line in dazed astonishment, and before they were really cognizant of what was going on Ike had booked a generous order.

"That ain't so bad," he said, "for a honeymoon order."

Then he turned and strode toward the bookkeeper's office. Once more he saluted the lips of his assiduous spouse, and a moment later he was walking rapidly down the street. Abe looked after him and expelled a huge breath.

"You find it in the Talmud that we are commanded to promote marriages, ain't it, Mawruss?" he said. "But one thing's sure, Mawruss; you can't run a cloak and suit business according to the Talmud." There was a short silence. "Did you ask her why she comes back, Mawruss?" he said.

Morris took the end off a particularly black cigar with one vicious bite.

"I didn't have to ask her. She told me," he said bitterly. "She says a smart girl can get a husband any day, she says, but a good job is hard to find, and when you get one you should stick to it."

True to the Pole.

The needle of the compass does not always point directly north. It is subject to daily and yearly variations, as well as those which require centuries to complete. The needle is, however, "true to the pole," although it shifts thus every hour in the day. It does so only in obedience to the laws which control its action. Variations which are constantly taking place in the terrestrial magnetism produce corresponding changes in the needle.

Mercury's Accident.

"What's the matter with your office boy?"

"He hurt himself while running when I sent him on an errand the other day."

"Come off! You don't mean to say"—

"I do. He never did the errand, but he found out why a horse had fallen down in the street."

Can This Be True?

"Why is it that you never hear of any female after dinner speakers?" asked the old fogy.

"I suppose it's because a woman tells all she knows before dinner is half over," replied the grouch.

Pursuing an Elephant.

Any one who has once followed a traveling elephant will not show any undue haste to repeat the amusement, said a man who has hunted big game in Africa. The elephants trail along at an average pace of six miles an hour, regardless of the country, and stop for a bath or a short siesta perhaps once every three days. Anything more exasperating than following very fresh spoor at a dog trot hour after hour in a blazing sun, only to find at a late hour in the afternoon that one was forty miles from camp, with no food or water anywhere in sight and that the elephant had increased his lead from one mile to ten, it would be difficult to imagine.—Exchange.

Shall Woman Propose?

Of course women should propose. It is women who change their entire lives by matrimony; it is women who take on colossal responsibility by matrimony. The woman should surely be allowed to choose the man for whom she feels herself able to work and give.

Men propose; men have had it all in their own hands up to now, and if they have married the wrong woman they have only themselves to blame for it.—Women of the World.

Nutmegs no Medicine.

A drowsy state after meals is what we should welcome, for it is the most favorable condition for good digestion. Nutmegs may produce it because their effect is to increase the flow of gastric juice. The nutmeg is much used by doctors as a remedy in weak digestion. If one has a keen appetite he does not need nutmeg, for appetite is the most powerful stimulant of the flow of gastric juice. If the appetite is not good the digestion will be feeble, and then the addition of a little nutmeg will be found of benefit.—London Answers.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Fortune Hunters.

(Original.)

Raymond Riggs, a rich bachelor, finding the weather oppressive in the city, concluded to run down to the seashore. He found there a bevy of girls, the most of whom, having worn themselves out during the gay social season in town, were endeavoring to put the roses back into their cheeks under the influence of ocean breezes. Nevertheless there was not one of them but could spare the time to secure "an establishment."

Raymond Riggs was a key to the wealth he possessed. All a girl had to do to unlock the door to it was to snare him. He had fought off a regiment of them during the previous season and had hoped for a rest at the seashore. He was doomed to disappointment. They attacked him by platoons and companies. To get rid of them he went off one day several miles up the beach and sat down on the sand. The waves rolled lazily in, broke on a bar and slid up on the sand with an effervescing sound. The sky was blue and cloudless. The ships out at sea sailed on as silently as if they were painted instead of real. It was all very restful and in marked contrast with being hunted down by a flock of—women, he should have said, but he preferred the word harpies.

A glass bottle was thrown up by the waves, rolled about on the sand and carried out. When it came up again Raymond noticed that it was corked. He seized it, took out the cork and with the blade of his knife managed to extricate through the narrow neck a card. On it was written in pale ink, "Aline Eliot." The address was given at a town a hundred miles down the coast, then followed, "Dear finder, I am lonely."

"For heaven's sake," exclaimed Raymond, "are all the women in the world hunting lovers? I escape from a flock of them back on the shore only to be met by an advance from the ocean."

But as he gazed at this singular contrivance for mating, as he regarded it, it seemed far different to him from the advances he had received from the fortune hunters. He fancied the writer to be some innocent girl who craved only to obey the instincts mother nature had planted in her pure bosom. Perhaps she had sat alone by the ocean as he was sitting, yielding to a natural inclination to mate, and had sent out her message with blind confidence that it would fall into the hands of the man who was destined to be all in all to her. Was this the explanation, or was she, too, hunting for a fortune? He would open a correspondence with her. In this way he could find out what he wished to know.

He inclosed the card with his own name and address and the words, "I, too, am lonely." In a few days he received a letter. There was nothing in it about love or marriage. It was an unsophisticated epistle from a young girl about nothing. Raymond read between the lines, "Perhaps you are he for whom I intended my message." But it did not say, "You may be some rascal who will take a mean advantage of what I have done." What refreshing innocence! Fancy one of the fortune hunters reposing such confidence in the average man. Raymond was an imaginative fellow and would sit long on the dunes or on the beach mentally contemplating this innocence. If he could see her likeness he could judge of her motive with more certainty.

He thought he would send a picture of some man about his own age and ask hers in return, but the girl's guilelessness had affected him, and he shrank from such deception. Then, confident that he could not be mistaken, he inclosed his photograph. As soon as he had done so the thought occurred to him that he was a fool. The danger of a society fortune hunter was nothing beside one he had never seen possessing letters from him and his photograph.

However, in exchange came a likeness. It was the likeness of one a painter would seize upon as a model for a Madonna. There was innocence personified. A pair of soft eyes looked out from an oval face. The lips were sensitive, and Raymond considered them especially kissable. He thought of the faces of the fortune hunters, restored to their natural appearance by cosmetics. There was none of them who would not consider herself flagrantly immodest to thus advertise for a husband. Yet here was the Madonna-like face looking at him with a modesty that none of these could have assumed.

One day Raymond was missed at the seashore. There was a flutter among the fortune hunters, for though none of them had secured a foothold, every one hoped for herself, not for the others. Had he returned to the city? No. Inquiries elicited the fact that his baggage, like our flag, was "still there." So they waited and watched and hoped. But Raymond did not return. In time he directed that his baggage be sent to the city, and neither the waves nor the gulls nor the ships nor the fortune hunters saw him more—at least not that summer.

But the next summer all these saw him again and saw a very different man. He was no longer pursued by the harpies, for his estate had been pre-empted. A slender, oval faced wife was with him, whose presence kept them all at a distance. They were willing to admit there was a certain placid beauty about her, though she had no style. But there was evidence that her figure was not built out as driven in. Indeed, she was as God got dress, had made her.

LIQUID CATARRH REMEDIES USELESS, ONLY RELIEVE, NEVER CURE

They go direct to the stomach, have very little effect on the lining of the nose and throat, and entirely fail to cure. Only by cleansing the air passages, by relieving the inflammation and killing the germs is cure possible. No combination of antiseptics is so successful as Catarrhozone. In breathing it you send the richest pine balsams right to the seat of the disease. Irritating phlegm is cleared out, hoarseness, coughing and hacking are cured. For a permanent cure for Catarrh, nothing equals Catarrhozone, get it to-day, but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size containing two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size 50c; sample size 25c.

Cleanliness As A Public Duty

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

(The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.)

By one of those curious pendulum swings to which even scientific opinion is subject, a couple of years ago it began to be fashionable in professional sanitary circles to sneer at Clean-Up movements and propaganda.

We were reminded, with a superior air, that after all dirt didn't matter so very much so long as it wasn't infected dirt!

That cleaning up back alleys and sweeping streets and tidying vacant lots was all very well from the City Beautiful point of view, but was a waste of good money from a sanitary standpoint so long as the dirt did not contain germs of known pathogenic qualities and did not get into our drinking water or on to our food.

Surprising Suggestions.

Similarly, in the realm of personal cleanliness, we were condescendingly assured that the daily bath was of no particular hygienic value, because it could not possibly kill or wash off all the germs on the human skin.

One eminent Bostonian authority declared that its value was purely aesthetic from the pleasure and illusive sense of personal purity it gave us, while a high sanitary expert in London declared that it actually favoured the spread of the disease by making cracks in the skin which the germs could penetrate.

A nice, greasy, seldom-washed skin was the best armour against germs, he insisted. All of which merely shows how foolish even great men may become by specializing too narrowly, and the danger of exaggeration which always lurks under the advice of pure experts upon any subject.

The Deadly Fly.

But the pendulum has already swung back again, for it was quickly shown that dirt, whether infected or not, bred flies, and the free delivery fly is a regular aeroplane parcels post for germs from sewer mouths and sick rooms.

While as for personal cleanliness and fastidiousness, three of the deadliest and most widespread plagues which afflict humanity, the Black Death, Hook Worm, and Typhus Fever, are now traced directly and solely to their absence.

The flea is the sole carrier of the Plague, vermin of Typhus, and other household pests are strongly suspected in Leprosy. Keep the back yard and the barnyard clean and there will be no hook worm and no flies.

Keep your house free from vermin and you are safe from Black Death; keep your shirt clean, and there will be no Typhus.

Household Economy

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain syrup. Two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, stirred for 2 minutes gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 54 cents, 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. Splendid for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE TORPEDO TELLS HISTORY OF ITS LIFE

The Wonderful Death-dealing Invention Plays Important Part in Naval Warfare—Travels at Great Speed

Ours is a big—a very big—family. But I can justly claim to be the head of it, though I am not its oldest member. The towing and other torpedoes pre-date my experience in point of age. When, however, the public speak of the torpedo, they mean me, the fish or self-propelled torpedo. And I am undoubtedly of much greater utility in modern naval warfare—thanks largely, I admit, to the submarine—than all the rest of our family put together. I am no less proud to say that I am British. For, though I was long since adopted by every navy in the world, my father was Mr. Whitehead, an English engineer. True, I owe something to Mr. Lupin, of the Austria navy; but the real author of my being was the man whose name I formerly bore. In fact, I am still frequently called the Whitehead torpedo. Though I am still comparatively young—for I was born a little later than 1864—I have, of course, altered a good deal since my early days.

Shaped Like Cigar

Cigar-shaped, and made of steel or phosphor bronze, I am from 14 feet to 19 feet long. My head contains the charge (200 pounds or 300 pounds, according to whether my diameter at the thickest part is 18 inches or 21 inches), which explodes by percussion with fearful force, and behind that is a chamber containing compressed air for driving the engines.

Next comes the balance chamber, in which is the mechanism regulating the depth of my submersion, varying from 5 feet to 20 feet. Then come the engines which propel me. There is then another chamber—the buoyancy chamber—and, beyond that, my tail, which consists of propellers, rudders, etc.

Now, what happens when I am discharged from a tube? Instantly the valve controlling the supply of air to the engine is opened, and, as the engines begin to work, my propellers revolve, driving me through the water. At the same moment, a gyroscope is put into rapid rotation, so as to keep me in my course.

Express Train Outdone

Then! If I am 18 inches in diameter, I can cover 6,000 yards at 20 knots an hour, 2,500 yards at 28 knots, and 1,000 yards at 36 knots. But, good as this is, it is not my best performance. As I am now used in the British navy, I start off at the speed of an express train—to be precise, 45 knots—and have a range of not less than 12,000 yards. Yes, there have been great changes in my time. When I was young, special boats—called, after me, torpedo boats—were constructed to fire me at big vessels, and these produced torpedo boat destroyers which, as their name indicate, were for catching or sinking the waspish craft that carried me. Now, submarines with my aid are preying upon both! Yet the first torpedo boat was built for the British navy so recently as 1877.

IRISH SAMARITAN ONE OF WAR'S THROB TALES

Why Private Simpson Will For Ever be Known as One Who Died That Others Might Live

A hero of Anzac, who is not mentioned in any despatches, but who figures frequently in the home letters of Australasian survivors of the early, fateful days after the Gallipoli landing is a certain stretcher bearer. His real name was Simpson, but for some unaccountable reason he got to be known as "Murphy." Many an Australian lives to bless "Murphy's mules." There were so many wounded to be taken into safety that Murhpy commandeered a pair of mules, and of course connived at the theft when they found what noble work he was doing. He used to leave the animals just under the brow of "Braund's Hill" and dash forward himself into the firing line to save the wounded. "Murphy's voice near them sounded like a voice from Heaven," says the "Manchester Guardian."

Always Cheery

Day after day he climbed the hill smiling and cheery. But one day "Murphy's mules" came not. The wounded cried out to the overworked stretcher bearers, "For God's sake send Murph's mules!" The mules were found grazing contentedly in Shrapnel Valley and Murphy? He had done his last climb to the top of the hill. "Where is Murphy?" asked one of the 1st Battalion. "Murphy is at Heaven's gate," answered a sergeant, "helping the soldiers through."

SAYS GALLIPOLI FRONT IS LOOKED UPON AS WORST

Russell Bar, Son of Famous Novelist, Tells of Dardanelles Fighting

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 31.—Raymond Wyer, director of the Hackley Art gallery, has received an interesting letter, from London, inclosing a missive written at the British fighting front at the Dardanelles from Russell Barr, son of James Barr the writer, and brother of the late Robert Barr, also a novelist, formerly of the Detroit Free Press staff.

James Barr has three sons all of whom are in the British army.

In the letter the father says.

"Russell is fighting at the Dardanelles. The Gallipoli front is looked upon as quite the worst, not only on account of the severe hand to hand fighting continually going on, but because of the fevers and the fact that there are no rest places where troops can obtain quiet to get back strength and nerve.

Every Spot Under Fire.

"Every spot is under fire. Russell was laid out by the second shell fired at his crowd. I'll quote his letter:

"I was fourth file from the front of our platoon at the head of which was Captain Touse and Captain Morris. The Turks had been quite liberal with their shells during the morning and unfortunately, they espied us. Everything was going smoothly until a shell burst with great violence about 30 yards ahead.

"'My friend Barrett, an architect, turned to me, and pointing to a cloud of pale blue smoke said, "That was meant for us.' Hardly had he said this than I found myself sprawled out on the ground, my pack twisted round my neck and throat, strangling me, a strange feeling, as though my stomach had slipped down to my ankles. My eyes, mouth, nose and ears were full of dust.

"'I lay there for a short time, not knowing what had happened. Gradually the fog of brown dust began to disperse. I glanced over cautiously and saw several figures sprawled out. From the left came groans. Five shells came, one after the other, in almost the same place, yet not a single person was killed. This was my baptism of fire. A number of my comrades were seriously wounded, although I was unhurt.'"

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

Look at Tongue! If Coated, Clean Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish full of cold, bad breath, throat sore doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea give a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

An Engineering Problem.

A son of Erin was digging post holes, and the boss came along to size up the job. "How are you making out, Pat?" asked the boss, critically examining the hole.

"Foine as silk," answered Pat, keeping right on with his work, "as yer will notice yersilf."

"The work looks all right, Pat," jokingly responded the boss; "but do you think you will ever be able to get all that dirt back in the hole again?"

"No, sorr," came the reply of Pat, "not as it is now, sorr; but it's me intintion to dig the hole a little daper."

Except in the bottle—No!

You cannot get real Bovril except in the Bovril bottle. Bovril is so strong that it cannot possibly be manufactured in cheap cubes. It takes the beef of an entire ox to make less than two dozen bottles of Bovril. Add Bovril to make your cookery more nourishing and to save butchers' bills. But it must be Bovril.

"A Hissing on The Lips of History"

You Cannot Depend on Germany to Take Care of The Belgians

"Germany as a rehabiliator of Belgium is a mockery and a byeword, and a hissing on the lips of history, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger in editorial comment on the way in which the invaders have assisted the people of Belgium in the parts of the country under occupation.

"A hissing on the lips of history." This stroog langage coming from a neutral paper in a neutral country, should bring more forcibly to Canadians the real state of affairs, Belgium needs rehabilitation. That is evident by the statement of the Germans that they are looking after it, but the manner in which they have done it is, as the Public Ledger says, "mockery."

What Belgium needs is material aid—not the financial or even fancied assistance that Germany says she is giving. What do the Belgians care about the restoration of the Flemish language when there is but one word to them—BREAD? What do they care about the revival of industries for German beauty when their children are crying bitterly with the cold?

Belgium and the world cannot depend upon Germany to attend to the rehabilitation or the care of the Belgians. The friends and the allies of the suffering, heroic, little country must look after that and the need is a dire one. "Give us bread" is the plea of starving Belgium and Canadians must answer the cry and send the wheat to make the flour needed.

Every community in Canada to-day has its Belgian Relief workers and all donations go through the one great channel—the Belgian Relief Commission—which not only guarantees the honest and equitable distribution of the food supply, but sees that the German "rehibilitators" do not get an ounce of the food for the Belgians.

WHEN MARS REIGNED

The Length of Time That Countries Have Striven Against Each Other

Three years, it is stated by some experts, will be the minimum length of the present war, and it is pointed out that if it lasts until the autumn of 1916 it will have been longer than any great war in Europe since the fall of Napoleon.

Each of the two Balkan Wars of 1912-13 was a matter of weeks. So were the Serbo-Bulgarian War of 1885 and the Turco-Greek War of 1897. The Crimean War was a matter of a little more than a year, while the Franco-Prussian War was practically decided in a month, although Paris was holding out three months afterwards.

The Russo-Japanese War lasted about twelve months, as did the Turco-Italian War of 1911-12. The Boer War ran for two and a half years, but that cannot be called a European war. The American Civil War lasted for four years.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

BOMB THROWING COMITADJIS ARE TOUGHEST OF MEN

Correspondent Has Interesting Talk With One of Serbian Breed

MONASTIR, Servia, Dec. 2 (By Mail)—Comitadjis are supposed to be the toughest, killingest men in the Balkans, perhaps in the world. They're the border fighters of the various Balkan states; Texas rangers are gentle alongside them; Northwestern mounted police, gentlemen. At last I've had a talk with a real live comitadji of the Servian breed. One part of his conversation went like this:

"We went up to a house the other night in which there were forty-two Bulgarian comitadjis. They fired at us and refused to surrender so one of us threw a bomb, just like this one—" holding out an iron box the size of a cake of soap—"and blew up the place. It killed twenty-eight and wounded the rest." Another part of his conversation ran:

Tolstoy's Prediction.

"Did you read Tolstoy's prediction of this great war?" He pulled a soiled clipping from his pocket and read what Tolstoy had written in 1912—there would be a great war in Europe and a writing man from the north would arise and hold the world in his grip for the next ten years, after ending the war. "Do you know who I thought this great man might be? Roosevelt. He writes, you know. But 1915 is almost over."

He was a man of contrasts, this Servian comitadji. With his rifle, his revolver, his bag of deadly bombs, each one of which could blow up a house, he talked to me about the dangers of typhus and other Servian diseases.

"I drink all the water that comes my way. It can't hurt me. I don't believe in sickness, you know. I'm a Christian scientist."

"Have you ever been in the United States?"

"Oh, yes. I've traveled everywhere."

He told me about the comitadjis he lived with.

Frontier Guards.

"Comitadjis aren't regular soldiers," he said. "They're volunteers who guard the frontiers. A good many of them are men tired of everything else in life men who are too cowardly to commit suicide. For instance, in our company of twenty men there's a young fellow from Nish. Six years ago he fell in love with a girl there and she told him she would marry him if he would go to the States and bring back some money. So he went to Portland, Oregon, and saved two thousand dollars in five years. That's a little fortune in Servia. He hurried back to Nish. When he reached home he found the girl had married. He spent all his money drinking in the cafes and when he was broke he joined the comitadjis. Fellows like him are tough fighters; they don't care what happens to them."

"What do comitadjis do in the great war?"

"Whatever the army doesn't do. Scouting, patrolling, entering villages before the army, and mountain and forest fighting. We have some good times, too. The other night we'd been on duty all day and when night came on it was raining. We were near a village where some Bulgarian comitadjis were supposed to be so a few of us went into the village while the others remained on the outskirts. Pretty soon we heard about fifty shots then the shooting stopped. We just hustled onto the town. We found that the patrol had killed nothing but one big sheep. That sheep was skinned in ten minutes. The fellows ran around the wood. Where they got it I don't know but before long we had a great big fire going and one of our fellows who used to be cook in a Belgrade cafe stuck a pole through the sheep lengthwise and put it over the fire. In about an hour it was ready and with plenty of pepper and salt and black bread and coffee we had a better meal than I ever bought in New York. Then, about 11 o'clock we stretched out with full stomachs, with our big loaves of bread for pillows and I had the best sleep I've had in my life. Oh, we know how to make ourselves comfortable.

Couldn't Rough It.

"I've seen some of these soldiers from England and France who are just coming to the Balkan pass some terrible nights because they didn't know how to rough it. I was scouting for some English troops the other night. We'd been in the rain all day and late in the evening we had waded a creek up to our waists. Finally we reached the top of the hill and the commander ordered his men to halt. It was nine o'clock.

"'Take off your kits and sleep where you stand'," ordered the officer.

"Comitadjis wouldn't have done that. A comitadji officer would have stopped his men behind the hill, let them build a fire, kill a sheep somewhere and make coffee."

"Does Christian Science help you with the vermin?" I asked. "Well," he said, "I pick them off like all the others do. Want to see a bomb?" He handed out a gunmetal-colored object that looked like a small drinking cup with a screw top. "You unscrew the top," and he did so, "and find this brass tip, which you strike on the butt of your gun. That fires the fuse. You count seven, slowly, then throw the thing."

"Where were you when the war broke out?" I asked. "Pittsburg," said he. "I lived there for 15 years with my wife. Both of us used to write for the Slav papers. My name is Charles Proskewetz. We lived at 604 Chestnut street. The Slavs over there think your Declaration of Independence is the most wonderful thing in the world.

"This is my wife," he said simply, opening a card case and showing me a photograph of a pretty, dark-eyed woman. There were withered flowers across the face of it.

"You left her in Pittsburg?"

"Yes, a year ago in the Slav cemetery there. Then I came over here and joined the comitadjis."

GIRLS! HAVE A MASS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR, SOFT, GLOSSY, WAVY

25 cent bottle destroys dandruff and doubles beauty of your hair

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 2-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment — that's all — you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

FIVE BROTHERS ARE CALLED TO THE WAR

Dr. D. A. Milward, of Greenwich Conn. Hears from One in British Gun Section

INTERESTING LETTER

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 30.—If every family had given as many sons to the war as Julia and Henry Townsend Milward, of Wadsworth, London, England, conscription would have probably never been thought of in Europe. Out of six children, five are involved by the war—three in active service and two waiting to be called to the front at any time. Stanley and Stuart, aged twenty-five and nineteen respectively, enlisted with the British forces in France at the outbreak of the war, and Cyril aged twenty-three, joined the air section of the Navy Flying Aeroplane Department. Frederick and Henry, older brothers, are in England waiting the call to France at any moment.

All are brothers of Dr. Douglas A. Milward, an optometrist, whose offices are at Greenwich, Conn. Albert Morrell, a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Milward, is also under arms. No leave of absence has been granted to the brothers since they went into the trenches. At the present time they are behind the firing line. Stanley is in the Prisons Commission of the House of Government Office, and Stuart is in the employ of the aeroplane works in London. All of the brothers have been promoted on the field excepting Stuart.

Mrs. Milward has not escaped the horrors of war, having been in the Zeppelins' raid. During the Franco-Prussian war in 1871 she nursed the wounded French officers, and to-day history repeats itself, for the family of Peppers, who are her own brothers and sisters, are doing a similar act. Dr. Milward received word a few weeks ago that Eugene Welland, a cousin, had been shot in the thigh while fighting in the trenches. He died a few hours later from lockjaw. Dr. Milward himself served for four years in the medical corps of the Royal army in London.

No. 2677, Pte. S. L. Milward, Machine Gun Section.
15th Battalion London Regiment, British Expeditionary Force.

Dear Douglas:—

Thanks so much for your nice long letter postmarked August 1, which I was very pleased to receive indeed.

You will see that now I am in the Gun Section with Stanley, who by the way is a L' Corporal. Of course there is plenty to learn in this section, but the work is more interesting and one certainly stands a better chance of popping off a few Germans than the ordinary riflemen. Possibly the work may be more dangerous as the last thing one would dream of would be to abandon one's gun to the enemy.

We have been out of the trenches now for a fortnight and I think our division deserves a good rest, for since the beginning of May we have been in the shelling area. None of us know when we are going back again to the trenches. I don't suppose we shall be out of them much longer.

Last Saturday afternoon we had some sports. They were very well arranged indeed, and such events as tug of war, transport driving between posts, etc., and the cleanest wagons figured. Our Brigadier Divisional Generals attended and judged the latter events. The R.A.M.C. cut their band, and it is the best I ever heard out here anyway. Every man played a treat, and apparently had had a good bit of practice. Some Red Cross nurses attended during the afternoon, and they were the first English women we had seen since March 18.

While we were in reserve here (I suppose we are about eight miles behind the firing line), we get plenty of work in the way of drills. The other day we had some firing with machine guns, and, of course enjoyed the same very much. We have now four guns, and until quite recently had only two, which means that the Gun Section is considerably bigger now.

We were inspected by the Brigadier General about a week ago, who complimented us on our appearance. Previous to the inspection we had to clean our equipment and polish up a little the brass bits. It reminded me of you when you used to have to polish up your brass buttons when you were in the R.A.M.C. We are very lucky in one respect, though, we have black buttons and a black cap badge, so no polishing is necessary for them.

The Zeppelins seem very active lately. Cyril wrote me and said they dropped a bomb at Eastchurch and it fell only 200 yards away from him. Luckily he was not hurt and no damage was done. You have probably heard that he gets a week leave every month. I wish I could. There seems no prospect of leave for us out here. The only people who do get leave seem to be the A.S.C. men and others who never see the trenches and never run into any danger.

News from the Russian front seems very bad, don't you think so? But I suppose everything will come out all right one day. My, won't it be grand when peace is declared and this terrible wastage of men and money and everything is put an end to.

I hope you and Grace are perfectly well in health and that your business is prospering. Mother seems very well and always writes cheerful to us out here.

Please give my love to Grace

Your loving brothre,

STUART.

THE ZEPPELIN FAILS

From a Military Point the Giant Gas Bag is Useless

In spite of all that the Germans claimed for Zeppelins the Kaiser's air menace has proved a failure. In the first place, Zeppelins being obliged to manœuvre at a height of several thousand feet and at night, the bomb droppers have been unable to achieve any effective marksmanship. Flying by night, even when there are lights to steer by, is sufficiently difficult, but when a tract of land lies in darkness and a pilot dare not, for fear of hidden guns, descend close enough to earth to reconnoitre, and when, in addition, he is flying above a foreign and unfamiliar country, his difficulties in navigation are very great. The fact, too, that Zeppelins are threatened by hostile aeroplanes as well as high-angle guns has made airships waste bombs over undefended tracts of land.

In regard to attacks from hostile aeroplanes, the Zeppelin is certainly very vulnerable if an aeroplane can get above it, but, if necessary, a Zeppelin can climb at a speed twice as great as that of an aeroplane carrying two persons and a load of bombs. There are, however, certain single seated, powerfully engined aeroplanes specially set aside for airship attack, in which a pilot ascends carrying with him no greater burden than a few incendiary bombs, and which can be made to climb at a speed appreciably greater than any two seated craft which carries a machine gun. It is such machines as this, stripped for speed and vying with Zeppelins in the race for altitude, that the airship pilots have chiefly to fear.

War Snobs

A Welshman, commenting on those people who refuse to allow "common" soldiers into high class refreshment bars, etc., sends a paragraph which should be read by those English ladies who invite wounded soldiers out to tea and then provide that valuable repast in the servant's hall. Here is the story: "A certain pompous lady had a much needed lesson in this respect recently. She invited three wounded Australians to tea, which was partaken of with the servants in the kitchen. The gallant warriors enjoyed themselves and proved highly welcome guests in the servants' hall, and made their farewells promising that their acquaintances of the evening should hear of them again. So they did; each servant receiving a cheque, together with the warriors' cards. One was a banker in Sydney, another was a barrister-at-law from the same city, and the third was a harbor inspector! Each had a banking account capable of being drawn on for six times the lady who invited them was worth!"

War Prisoners' Amusements

A British civilian who had been recently interned at Ruhleben Camp, Germany, brought copies of a magazine written and illustrated by the prisoners. They have concerts, plays, debates, scientific and literary lectures, golf, football and tennis and even elected a member of Parliament. Several professional golfers are in camp.

Steel In Warfare Again

Many French soldiers wear a steel helmet as a protection from shrapnel, and the War Office sent out a supply for the British Tommies in the firing line. The only instances on record of armor being used in the wars of the nineteenth century are the steel-lined vests worn by Confederate troops in the American Civil War of 1861-5.

DRINKING RECORD OF CANADIANS

(From the Montreal Gazette.)

The report of the excise division of the Department of Inland Revenue for the 12 months ending with March 31 last, indicates that in the period covered there was a decline in the consumption of alcoholic beverages in Canada.

There was a decreased production both of spirits and malt liquor, and also a lessened use of wine, which latter, however, is not a serious factor in the records. In the matter of spirits produced in Canada and "taken for consumption," the average for the preceding four years is given as 4,617,847 gallons, and in 1912-13 it was 4,999,937 gallons. Last year, 1914-15, it was only 4,021,060 gallons. In the case of beer and other brewery products the quantity manufactured in Canada was 56,000,000 gallons in 1913-14, and 49,983,000 gallons in 1914-15. The decrease was equal to quite a gallon a head of the population.

It is notable that in Ontario, which is the great distilling as well as the great brewing province, the production of malt liquor fell from 24,193,000 gallons in 1913-14, to 20,829,000 gallons in 1914-15.

In Quebec the decrease was from 14,336,000 gallons to 12,683,000 gallons. The calculation as to the consumption per head of population is also in agreement with the records of production. For five years there had been a fairly steady increase in the consumption per head of spirits. In 1913-14 the figure was 1.061 gallons; last year it was 0.872 of a gallon, the smallest figure since 1900-9. The highest was in 1873-4, when 1.994 gallons was recorded.

While the consumption of spirits per head has in a long period shown a decline, that of beer, and especially since the breweries gave their attention to the production of the lighter varieties, has steadily gained. In 1896-7 it was 3.469 gallons a head; in 1913-14 it was 7.200 gallons; last year it was 6.071 gallons. The records of one year do not go far towards establishing a theory in such a case. So far as they go, however, those of 1914-15 indicate a lessened consumption of alcoholic beverages throughout the country.

Possibly there were a number of causes behind the situation. The period covered by the statistics was one of somewhat marked trade depression in considerable parts of the country. It was also a period during which there was a considerable increase in the area of "dry" territory, and of restricted sale in other districts. It may be that, contrary to some experience, the laws against the trade are having an influence in decreasing sales as well as the opportunities for selling.

Time will be required to form a sure judgment. Meanwhile what is shown maintains the record of the Canadian people are being among the soberest in the world.

STOMACH ACTS FIRE! NO INDIGESTION, GAS, HEARTBURN, ACIDITY

"Pape's Diapepsin" Fixes Sick, Sour, Upset Stomachs in Five Minutes

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Dresses for young girls who are attending high school or college are allowed a little dressiness of effect which is very becoming to the slightness and youthfulness of the figure. Such a frock as the one shown in the accompanying picture is excellent for these purposes, and it will also be suitable for a young lad, who is engaged in business.

The waist is of the shirt waist variety, plain and full, with sleeves extended to the neck edge in raglan style, forming hardly more than a shoulder strap. Both back and front are gathered where attached.

The waist closes in the centre of the front, and it may be made with either high or low neck and with a straight, turnover collar or with one of a wider variety. Both styles are provided in the pattern. The sleeves are quite full and are gathered into a band cuff.

The skirt of this dress is separate from the waist. It is a two piece design and is joined to a wide, flat girdle or belt. It closes at the left side of the front. The lower edge measures 2¾ yards at the hem in the medium size and the model is therefore especially suited to soft materials.

Charmeuse is much used for these dresses and also satin messaline and taffetas. The waist frequently differs in fabric and also in color from the skirt and may be chiffon, of voile or of a similar weave.

The dress pattern, No. 7359, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires for waist 2 yards of 36-inch material, for skirt 2¾ yards of 44 inch, with 3½ yards of silk cord.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FINISHING TOUCHES PUT ON THE CONSCRIPTION BILL

Encouraging News Received From the Russian Front

Russians Are Advancing Along the Kovel-Rovno Railway and Are Threatening the Capture of Kovnil---Berlin Claims Central Powers Have Taken 2,400,000 Prisoners Since the War Began.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.—By heading the Teutonic forces on the line of Vladimir-Volynskyi (south of Kovel), on the Galician frontier while fortifying and pressing forward at some points, the Russians have checked a German attempt to advance from the direction of Kolki and improved their position along the Kovel railway eastward toward Sarny. The enemy is surrendering in large numbers, though unwounded.

The Veryn fact that the Russians are advancing along the Kovel-Rovno railway is held by military men to be of great importance, since it indicates a concentration with a view of taking Kovel, an important point of communication between the German and Austrian front. On the Galician front it is stated in reports received in Petrograd between the rivers Sereth and Strypa, before which the Russian troops has taken up positions, the Moscovites apparently have commenced an offensive and advanced as far as the left bank of the Strypa.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—The armies of the Central Empires have taken about 2,400,000 prisoners since the beginning of the war.

A Zeppelin airship has arrived at Sofia and will proceed to the Bulgarian front, according to advices received here to-day. It will be used in raids on the Allied warships and troop encampments at Salonika.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Despite the figures of the results of the Derby recruiting scheme given out to-day, many newspapers declare that the response was magnificent, when it is considered that between three million and five million men are already under arms and tens of thousands are engaged in making munitions and in other occupations just as essential to the nation's life as is fighting at present.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—President Wilson to-day issued a statement, in which he admitted that the present situation between the United States and Austria is very grave. He added that he was co-operating with Secretary of State Lansing to obtain the full facts, and that as soon as this information is obtained this Government will act promptly.

The officials of the State Department went further and declared that the situation was critical.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Single men between the ages of 23 and 26 inclusive, who enlisted in Lord Derby's recruiting campaign, were to-day called to the Colours to report for service on 8th February.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Premier Asquqith this afternoon confirmed the reports that Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, has resigned from the Cabinet.

The announcement was made in the House of Commons following to-day's session of the Cabinet on the Conscription question.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Mr. Robert McNeilly, the American Consul to Aden, was in his cabin when the explosion rocked the Persia.

The survivors at Alexandria declared that he was one of the last of the passengers to reach the deck. Most of the other passengers were at luncheon.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Cabinet to-day put the finishing touches on the Government's Conscription Bill. Of 5,011,441 men of military age in the United Kingdom, only 2,429,261 enlisted during the Lord Derby recruiting campaign it was announced to-day. Of those who failed to enroll 378,071 are exempted from military service because of various important positions they now hold this leaves 651,160 single men available it is probable that government bill introduced this week will call part or all these men into service.

Of 2,832,210 married men of military age 1,679,261 enrolled under the derby recruiting plan it is understood the government will take no steps for present, to draft these married men for service in the army.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Liner Geelong was sunk in collision with steamer Bonvilston also flying the British flag, dispatches reached here to-day said that all persons aboard the Geelong saved, but did not report damage to the Bonvilston, earlier reports said a Geelong was submarined.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—President Wilson to-day took charge of crisis over submarine operations, He returned from his honeymoon at Hot Springs confronted by most serious and delicate dilemna of the war as it affects the future of United States relations coincident with Presidents return, congress reassembled to-day and promised to take a prominent part in the expected international denouncement from all quarters, the White House, state department and capitol came indications that prompt, decisive and salutory steps to stop illegal submarine warfare were under way.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Secretary of State Lansing has informed ambassador Bernstorff informally that the State Department is considering modifying of its position in regard to the carrying of guns by merchant men as a result of a change in naval warfare created by the submarine and the fact there are no German warships at sea other than submergibles. Austria will likely insist that she had right to sink Persia in view of vessel being armed, and Germany will back her up. United States now regards this fact as no just reason for sinking passenger ships.

GREAT BRITAIN GUARDS AGAINST SHORTAGE

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Government is taking stringent measures to see that the prevailing shortage in ships shall not interfere with the shipment of food and other necessities to ports in the United Kingdom. Vessels are being requisitioned right and left for the shipment of wheat from the Americas, and in shipping circles it is reported that the Admiralty intends to call in the British ships that are now trading between foreign ports. The latter measure is expected to particularly affect British ships trading between South America and the United States. Shippers here predict that such action would have a disastrous effect on this trade.

Australia and New Zealand are the greatest wool-producing countries.

DEPUTY-REEVES WIPED OUT IN COUNTY COUNCIL

List of County Administraters For 1916—Only Three Deputys in List But All Three Have New Men This Year

THE COUNTRY RESULTS

The following is the personnel of the Couty Council for 1916:

Max Brown, Asphodel.

Jas. Ketchen, Belmont and Methuen.

N. Lean, Burleigh and Anstruther.

Fred J. Bullied, Chandos.

C. J. Darling, Dummer.

M. Walsh, Douro.

W. H. Crough, Ennismore.

C. Coben, Galway and Cavendish.

Jas. Ingram, Harvey.

John McIntosh, North Monaghan.

Wm. Robson, deputy-reeve, North Monaghan.

W. A. Anderson, Otonabee.

F. A. Easson, deputy-reeve of Otonabee.

F. McKee, Smith.

Robt. Northey, deputy-reeve of Smith.

B. Squire, Norwood.

H. F. Fitzgerald, Lakefield.

Edward Fennell, Havelock.

Jas. Ketchen's victory over W. E. Griffith of Belmont and Methuen by a majority of ten, removed a bright young man from the County Council. Last year Griffith defeated Ketchen by thirteen votes.

Some reports say the North Monaghan election was a hummer in many ways.

The absentees from the Council this year are: Dr. Kindred, of Havelock, Robt. Shaw, Harvey, W. E. Griffith, Belmont, Herb. Foster, North Monaghan, E. Deyell, Otonabee, A. Jobe, Smith.

The position of deputy-reeve seems to be more precarious than that of reeve. All three deputy-reeves are on the casualty list this year, Otonabee, Monaghan and Smith sending up new men.

93RD BATTALION BAND AT BROCK STREET

A Grand Military Night To-morrow at Brock St.

The Brock Street Rink Management has arranged with the Grand Band of the 93rd Regiment to be at the Brock Street Rink and give a musical programme to-morrow night. Skating right to 10 o'clock. This will be one of the best nights at the Rink and half the total receipts are to go to the credit of the Band Fund.

On Christmas Eve.—"And may I call on Christmas Eve, Miss Jenny?" "Certainly, Mr. Wilkinson, but remember my father turns out the lights at ten o'clock." "All rgiht—I will call just about then."

O. B. WIDDIFIELD,
Lieutenant,
Acting Adjutant for Officer commanding 93rd Overseas Batt., C.E.F.

Mrs. Ross, Peterborough, has received the following letter from her son, Pte. R. Ross, in France with the Mounted Rifles: "We are back having a rest after eight days in the trenches. We have been lucky so far. We have only lost three men and they are wounded. You said it was raining and hailing over there. Well if it was to do so for a month of Sundays it would not be as bad as it is over here. It is worse here than in the trenches."

A Winnipeg contemporary says: Capt. T. L. Arnott, of the Lord Strathcona's Horse, arrived home last night, convalescent. Capt. Arnott was for seven months in the firing line in Flanders, and was taken to the base hospital suffering from appendicitis. He will return to the firing line in the spring.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.— Sergt.-Major W. H. ("Soldier Bill") Grant has received a commission as Captain in the 139th Battalion. He recently returned from the front to recover from wounds. His regiment, the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, suffered heavily in the terrific drive of the Germans in their attempt to get through to Calais.

"Soldier Bill" Grant is a native of Cobourg and will have his headquarters in that town. He is a well known Argonaut oarsman and football player, and is immediate Past President of the Interprovincial Football Union. Since his return from the front he has been an active member of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association.

Some of the staff of the Cressman Company, a short time ago sent some comforts to the Peterborough boys in the 21st Battalion. They have received the following letter of thanks from Lance-Corp. Len Williams and Pte. J. H. Cobb of Peterborough:

Somewhere in Belgium.

To our kind friends of the Cressman staff:

We received your very welcome parcel yesterday and certain appreciate your kindness very much. You can't imagine the pleasure it gives one away out here to get anything from old friends, and I assure you all we are very thankful indeed.

We are having quite a hard time of it out here now. The winter season has come on and the rain falls in torrents incessantly and the mud is in some places knee deep. Some parts are completely flooded and our trenches have been partly washed away. Nevertheless we so far have been lucky and have escaped unhurt, but of course one is taking one long, continued chance and is safe no place, but with all there is a certain amount of fascination in the life that makes us all enjoy it sometimes.

By the time you get this Christmas of course will be over, as it is very close now. We expect to be in the trenches for Christmas with "Mulligan" for dinner by the way.

Well, dear friends, we must close as the candle is about done and we have no more. Thanking you all again and wishing you all a very bright New Year.

We are your sincere friends,
Len Williams. J. H. Cobb.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3. — Preparations are already under way in the Militia Department to meet the increased demand upon its labours and energies consequent upon the New Year's decision of the Government to increase the authorized number of the Canadian troops from a quarter of a million men to half a million men. The task of bringing the Canadian forces up to that large figure, it is realized, is a heavy one, but the Minister of Militia is confident as always that it can be accomplished

The new authorisation if consummated will mean the recruiting of nearly 30 per cent. of all males of military age throughout the Dominion. It will also mean an annual expenditure of $500,000,000 on the basis of $1,000 per man in uniform. This was the estimate made by Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, when the authorized number was 250,000, and when he declared that the expenditure for the coming fiscal year would approximate $250,000,000. It will now far exceed that amount

It is now more than probable that Canada will have two full army corps, consisting of four full divisions on the firing line by the beginning of spring. This will constitute a splendid representation for the Dominion.

Preparations for an extensive recruiting campaign are now under way. New regiments will shortly be authorized, for the various cities towns and rural districts throughout Canada. In addition to these the Minister of Militia declares that he has decided to raise several special regiments including two or more Indian regiments, a Metis regiment, a naturalized Japanese-Canadian regiment, and a coloured regiment. More attention will also be given to specialization in other directions. A new Irish regiment is to be raised in Toronto, which the minister has hinted that the hundreds of clergy who have applied for positions as chaplains be organized into a regiment of fighting parsons for overseas services.

The training of officers throughout the Dominion and in England has been proceeded with on a very satisfactory basis, and there will be good reserve of officers of various ranks in all branches of the service, available for new regiments. The training of efficient officers will be continued along carefully selected lines.

The minister is looking round for the best officers available to organize the new battalions, and some changes are imminent in present battalions.

Schools are to be established for non-comissioned officers and field officers.

The medical and dental branches are to be increased. In connection with the latter district and divisional officers commanding are authorized to take the application of candidates for the work.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Sir John Eaton, Toronto's greatest employer of labour, to-day declined to permit the police to take a military census of his establishment, claiming that recruiting sergeants should first enlist all available men on the streets before attempting to coerce in any way men in his employ. Sir John also stated that the census should be general, all over the Dominion, and backed by the Dominion Government and not local to Toronto or any other city which had already recruited heavily since the war began. The Eaton stores are already carrying on their pay rolls fifteen hundred men who have enlisted in the overseas contingents.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—Live stock receipts fair, trade more active; choice export, $7.40 to $7.75; choice butcher steers $7 to $7.25; good heifers $7 to $7.25; choice veal calves, $9 to $10.50, spring lambs, $9.50 to $11.25; light ewes, $6.25 to $8; hogs, fed and watered, $9.25 to $9.35, f.o.b., $8.75; others, steady.

ONLY TWO NEW FACES ON COUNCIL THIS YEAR

THE PETERBORO' POULTRY SHOW OPENED TO-DAY

List of Entrants is the Second Largest in the History of the Association—Number of New Exhibitors

THE EGG SUPPLY

The annual Poultry Show, held under the auspices of the Peterborough Poultry Association, made its debut to-day. The entry list is the second largest in the history of the Association, and is only exceeded by last year's figures. The show opened to-day with a total of nine hundred and seventy-five entrants, while last year a total of over twelve hundred was reached. The exhibitors are from all parts of Ontario and Quebec. Mr. J. T. C. Lang, Secretary of the Association, states that there are a large number of new exhibitors as well as a substantial increase in the number of local exhibitors. This, Mr. Lang regards as indicative of the ever-growing interest that is being manifested in the poultry industry. The judges are Mr. J. H. Minshall of Brantford.

The latter is a member of the Brantford City Council, and yesterday was reelected by a large majority. He is an expert in matters pertaining to the blue blooded aristocrats of the poultry ring. He recently returned from New York, where he was called upon to act in his official capacity at one of the large shows. To-morrow Mr. Wilson of Brockville will be here and will take part in the judging.

Egg Candling.

One of the feautres of Peterborough Poultry Show, being held this week, which should be of pertinent interest and economic importance to all producers and consumers is the Egg Exhibit and Candling Demonstration, being given by the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The eggs displayed in the exhibit will be graded in accordance with the standards for Canadian eggs, adopted by the Canadian Produce Association at Guelph, in January of last year.

Ontario is the greatest egg-producing centre in the Dominion, and it is, therefore, important that the producers learn how to grade their eggs in order to recive the highest premium for quality; and have their eggs recognised on the best markets by their quality. To help on bringing about this result it has been decided to give producers every opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with the standards.

The egg exhibit shows how a thirty dozen case of ordinary country eggs grades in accordance with the standards and the grades, "Specials," "Extras," "No. 1's" and "No. 2's," which constitute the classification for fresh gathered eggs are clearly defined and demonstrated in the Candling booth provided for that purpose.

A Simple Process.

Candling is a simple process. It is based on the fact that an egg is semi-transparent when held before a light in a darkened room, and permits, when rotated, of even minor defects being seen. A glance is sufficient to indicate the difference between good and bad eggs, and anyone, with practice, can differentiate between

How to Cook Roman Meal Porridge.

Invariably use double boiler, or set boiler in basin of boiling water. Have water boiling in both vessels, that in inner one salted to taste. Slowly stir in one cup Roman Meal to each two cups water. Cover, set in outer vessel, and never stir again even while serving. For early breakfast cook at evening meal and warm in morning, using a little less Roman Meal. It's dark, nutbrown, granular, rich porridge. It nourishes better than meat, prevents indigestion and positively relieves constipation or "money back." Ask your doctor. All grocers, 10 cents and 20 cents.

Ald. Galbraith the Only One Who Has Not Had Previous Service on Aldermanic Board—Mayor-Elect Duffus Thanks the Electors

AFTERMATH OF YESTERDAY

Now that the battle is over and the smoke cleared away, the ratepayers will have a chance to view the result. Few municipal elections of such a strenuous character as the one accounted for yesterday have resulted in such minor changes in the personnel of the Council. Only two new faces appear on the Council Board this year. They are Aldermen G. H. Duncan and William Galbraith. The former is no stranger to the ratepayers, having served in the City Council for several years, only to be defeated one year ago while contesting the mayoralty honours with Mayor Buller. That leaves the present Council with practically one brand new member. The latter, whose baptismal name is William Galbraith, was elected in the West Ward for a one-year term, made possible by the retirement of Ex-Ald. G. W. Green. The latter was defeated in the mayoralty race by J. J. Duffus, who after six years' service in the City Council reaches the topmost rung in the municipal ladder of fame.

The Mayor-Elect.

The mayor-elect was out early this morning and found many waiting to congratulate him upon his success. For the first time in several years the Peterborough City Council will be headed by a Liberal. There was no alternative as all three candidates were of the same political stripe.

To some this may seem a handicap, but there are many who believe that the city will manage to struggle along for at least a year with a change in the political complexion. After the first three returns were in there was little doubt as to the result. Duffus was given a lead at the start, and this he maintained until number one polling sub-division was heard from, which was late in the evening, and long after the other returns were all in. The final results shows a majority of 166 in favour of Duffus. Green ran second with a total of 1,000 votes, and Hartley third, with 873 votes to his credit. The latter was 962 votes behind the winner. Some of the sub-divisions gave him a majority. The total vote polled was light, despite the keen interest that was manifested all week in the mayoralty contest.

Headed the Polls.

Ald. William Langford headed the polls in the aldermanic contests, He romped home with a total of 822 votes or a majority of 295 to his credit. This entitles him to a two-year term in the Council as representative of the North Ward. By that time he may essay to follow in the footsteps of the mayor-elect. In the West Ward G. H. Duncan registered a majority of 180 for the two-year term, while the one-year term was dedicated to William Galbraith.

The School Board.

Four members of the Board of Education were re-elected. Mr. John Crane headed the quartette, while the new member, Dr. F. C. Neal, headed the poll. John Smith of East City failed to get sufficient votes to ensure his re-election. For a time it

MAYOR DUFFUS.

In the election of Mr. Duffus to the Mayor's chair, he brings with him a wide and successful business experience and six years' municipal experience filled with hard work, enthusiasm and industry in the city's interests. He is a young man and came from the country to the city fifteen years ago to work out for himself a business career. He was first engaged in the implement business under the firm name of Drummond and Duffus. With the advent of the automobile in this city and district he foresaw the possibilities and immediately connected himself with the Ford automobile, and his judgment at that time has proved to have been of the best.

He has been uniformly fair in his capacity as a representative of the west ward and has been honest in his convictions. He is a hard worker and will find plenty of it to do in his new position, but he should be equal to the occasion. He has a great deal of originality and forethought and he shou'd take advantage of the opportunity to bring forth any ideas he may think in the city's interests, even if they do not always find favour.

If he carries with him to the Mayor's chair the qualities he has shown in business, civic and private life, the city, to say the least, will be none the worse for having Mayor Duffus as its civic head.

CANADA'S NEW TASKS

Sir George Foster says that a $300,000,000 loan will soon be floated in Canada, and Sir Robert Borden follows with the announcement that the Canadian army is to be increased to 500,000 men. Both engagements are well within our means. They represent, so far as Canada is concerned, that development of the resources of the British Empire which will eventually ensure victory.

It never entered the head of the Kaiser and his clique that Canada alone would furnish an army far larger than that which the United Kingdom had at the opening of the war, and that another army of about the same size would be raised by Australia. The Kaiser regarded ours as an Empire merely on paper. Its potential resources were enormous, its available resources were comparatively small. Every day the available resources are being increased.

The task assigned to Canada is neither small nor beyond our strength. The recruiting of another quarter of a million men will call for energy and improved organization, but there is no doubt that Canada will rise to the occasion.

The doubling of the size of the Canadian army will impose new duties upon the Government. It will have to identify itself with the recruiting movement to a greater extent than it has done. As it is asking the people to make greater efforts, it must show the example. Canada has the men, and it has the will. It is for the Government to take the lead.

FOOLISH EXTRAVAGANCE.

Love your enemies is, no doubt, an excellent maxim, but even the Bible does not command that we feed them upon the choice dainties of the land and in doing so the Canadian Militia Department has gone much farther than necessity or Christianity demanded, says the London Advertiser.

On Christmas Day those alien enemies in Canadian internment camps were to have had turkey dinner, but as they turned up their noses at this fare, they were given goose. Did all deserving Canadians have turkey or goose that day? Did Canadian prisoners of war have any such choice? They did not. Why then, this ultra hospitable treatment of men, many of whom would be delighted to blow up our industries, slay our men and aid in defeating the Empire's cause if opportunity offered?

Just now Canada is being asked to provide for the Belgians, who have given up all for our cause and as a result are threatened with starvation. The comparatively trivial sum of $2.50 will purchase a bag of flour which will sustain a Belgian family for a month. One turkey, providing a dinner for perhaps eight or ten Germans, costs about the same amount. That is to say, the Canadian militia authorities choose rather to give enemies one dinner of entirely unnecessary luxuries than to give them frugal but sufficient food and turn over the difference in cost for the benefit of our friends who made possible the saving of France from the Huns.

It is unfair to our allies. It is unfair to Canada. The people of the Dominion are cheerfully paying heavy war taxes and subscribing to national loans, but they are doing so to assist in the triumph of British arms, not to give dainty dinners to enemies who have absolutely no claims on their generosity.

This great struggle is not a sham battle, in which the soldiers of either side fraternize and "stand treat" to each other when darkness begins to fall. We must realize this and remember that Germans, as a nation, are seeking by fair means and foul to destroy our forces, aye, even our women and children. Those in our power must be treated according to the laws of nations and humanity, but that is all; they are not guests, they are prisoners.

The Christmas spirit of goodwill to men flooded the hearts of the authorities to the exclusion of common sense. If a substantial meal of sausages, potatoes and other such everyday eatables had been given our well treated and over-pampered non-combatant enemies, the ends of justice and humanity would have been served, and just as much gratitude would have been shown by the recipients.

THIRTY PER CENT.

If this business of knighting members of the Canadian government keeps on, it will soon be a distinction for a minister to have no handle to his name. The knighting of Sir William Thomas White, makes five "Sirs" out of a total of fifteen ministers—and still Honorable Robert Rogers, who is reputed to be daddy of them all when it comes to cabinet decisions, remains just plain "Bob."

Thus is the question raised again: Why these distinctions in a new and strictly democratic country? Why are only thirty per cent. of the cabinet ministers "called?" — Ottawa Free Press.

THE BELGIAN ARMY.

It will come as a surprise to many to learn that the Belgian army is today larger, stronger, and better equipped than before the invasion of Belgium. Yet such is declared to be the case by Egbert Hans, a Belgian journalist, who was recently with King Albert's army in Flanders. The Belgian army, he says, has been marvellously reorganized. For every Belgian soldier who fell in battle two others who never dreamed of being soldiers have stepped into the vacant place. Thousands of refugees who had fled to France and England responded to the call of the King.

But that is not all. Belgians have come from all the ends of the earth to take their place in the army. Of those who found themselves under German domination in Belgium, no fewer than 10,000 took the risk of being punished by death by trying to cross the frontier into Holland. About 100 paid for their desire with their lives. Most of the rest succeeded in getting away, and ultimately in finding a place in the Belgian army. The Belgian army is still holding the small part of their country that is left uninvaded, and when the general advance comes, these gallant warriors will no doubt contribute in no small measure to the final overthrow of the Huns. It is a marvellous example of bravery, endurance and ineradicable faith that the Belgians have given the world.—Montreal Herald.

INDIA'S LOYALTY TO BRITAIN.

When at the beginning of the war the British sent a brigade of Indians to the active scene of operations in France, it was current comment that she had brought them there under false pretences, or lured them by specious promises.

The Jeremiahs told us that India was a seething mass of slumbering rebellion. India needed but the slightest excuse to rise in revolt.

But the Indians came and they have proved themselves among the bravest and best-disciplined fighters.

Recently they have been removed to another war zone taking with them the congratulations and grateful thanks of the British king and people, and the admiration of their comrades, the whole allied forces.

And now from India comes a further expression of loyalty in the address of Sir Satyendua Sinhha, the head of the National Congress of India, in which he states that millions in India are waiting to serve under the Union Jack. He declares that throughout India there is a feeling of intense admiration and pride in the mother country for having taken upon herself the burden of this unprecedent struggle.

He points out that India has not been one jot behind any other part of the empire in its readiness to afford assistance to England.

While India is not yet ready for independence, the speaker declared that the aspiration of the country was towards autonomy and that this goal was in nowise grudged it by England.

There seems, therefore, little room for alarm on the part of the British as to India's loyalty and their determination to make common cause with the Allies.—Buffalo News.

MONEY WELL SPENT.

(Hamilton Times.)

Henry Clay Frick played Santa Claus to over 40,000 Pittsburg school children who had their pennies invested in a bank that closed its doors. This cost Mr. Frick $160,000, but he has got his money's worth back in the satisfaction that he has made so many youngsters happy.

TWO VIEWS.

(Victoria Colonist.)

Mr. Bourassa says the Canadians are not bound to fight for Britain. This is quite true, and there is also another thing that Canadians are not bound to do, and that is to put up with Bourassa's seditious speeches, and the sooner he learns it the better.

TAX WAR PROFITS.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Until Sir George Foster can go before the people and say, "We have taxed up to the hilt the profits of the contractors and other beneficiaries of the war," he cannot expect any very great enthusiasm from the bulk of Canadians over the prospect of a general increase in taxation to finance the war.

PURE LIBEL.

(Toronto Star.)

Max Hargen's paper was suppressed, evidently because it libelled the kaiser. It said that he had issued a pardon for Edith Cavell, but the speedy execution made it of no avail. The making of such an accusation as that against the kaiser—suggesting that he is weak enough to feel pity—is a serious matter in Germany.

More to See.—Goeling—"Hullo, old man, how are you? I haven't seen much of you, lately." Maddox—"You have seen more of me than I have of you." Goeling—"How do you make that out?" Maddox—"Well, I'm much bigger than you."

Switzerland's Hospital Cars Are Models of Their Kind

When Switzerland mobilized her army August 1, 1914, special trains which had been placed at the disposal of the sanitary service of the army were also put in readiness. While they have fortunately up to the present not been required by the country's own army, these trains have been made another accessory of the great humanitarian work which Switzerland has undertaken on behalf of her belligerent neighbors. They are being used for the transport into their respective homeland of wounded German and French prisoners of war, those unfortunates who are maimed and injured to such a degree that they will never be able to return to the fighting lines again.

Long before the outbreak of the war Switzerland had seen to it that there was a sufficient number of railway carriages, suitable for the transport of the wounded in times of war. Soon after the Franco-German war, on the occasion of the autumn session of the Swiss council, a motion was passed according to which the Swiss railways were to construct their railroad carriages in such a way that they could easily be converted into military hospital cars. On account of the existing financial crisis in Europe, this practical plan could not be executed until 1870 when the Swiss Federal council made it obligatory for the railways to construct all their third-class railroad carriages according to Dr. Rusch's idea. This law was however suspended on November 17, 1908, when the Swiss Federal railroad declared themselves willing to have 200 third-class passenger carriages of a new type constructed which could be used for the transportation of wounded soldiers in times of war.

Compared with the old type of cars, which only opened front and back, these new carriages have the advantage that they also have a spacious side door on each side which is not visible as long as the seats are there and which permits of an easy transport of the wounded.

Approved by Belligerent.

The trains now used for the transport of the wounded have been approved of by the French and German governments and consist of a number of cars, equipped for those who have to be transported in a lying position, also of a number of first and second-class carriages for those who are able to sit up, and a luggage van. They travel between Lyons and Constance at which points the exchange of the prisoner takes place and cover that distance in about fourteen hours.

The beds in the hospital cars consist of hand-barrows which are placed on both sides of the car, two above each other. Strong belts attach them to the sides of the carriages. The beds, of which there are fourteen in every carriage, are equipped with a mattress, a pillow, sheets and blankets and are said to have received high praise from the wounded. A bag has been placed above each bed to hold those trifles which a wounded man likes to have next to him. A flower vase, even, hangs above every bed and some sympathetic persons see to it that they are duly filled with fresh blossoms for every trip. Under the beds are all the necessary sick-room appliances, glasses, cups, etc. Baskets contain the clean linen and bags are used for the soiled wash. A brightly figured oil-cloth on the floor and prettily colored portieres on the door give the carriages a homelike aspect and spacious windows provide an abundance of light and fresh air. A male and a female nurse are in constant attendance in every carriage.

The upholstering of the first and second-class carriages in use for those who can travel in a sitting position is covered with light, washable material and a white traveling pillow has been provided for every seat.

Physician with Every Train.

The physician, who accompanies the train, as well as the Red Cross women have each a small first-class compartment at their disposal.

The luggage car contains large closets and cupboards with dishes and glasses, wash basins, special receptacles for medicines, etc.

Coffee, milk and lemonade are given to the sufferers during the trip.

In order to avoid any possible annoyance to the travelers, all gifts intended for them have to be handed over to the representative of the Red Cross who then look after the distribution of them. Special little bags of colored texture are filled with these contributions and are given to the soldiers as they leave the train at their destination.

As soon as the train reaches an end station the beds are freshly covered and thus fitted up again with clean things, the carriages receive the wounded prisoners of the other nation to take them back to their native land.

Kind-hearted co-workers of the Red Cross have undertaken to provide many of the extra furnishings and little things which give the cars a cheerful aspect and the cleaning and decorating of the carriages, putting up of beds and looking after the supplies generally is all attended to by voluntary helpers under the supervision of the chief physician of the Swiss Red Cross who has earned special praise for her constant and never-tiring efforts on behalf of the undertaking.

HOW TO MAKE 1916 A HAPPY NEW YEAR

By the Rev. Dr. Robert Watson.
Pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian Church.

Let no day pass without spending some time alone with God.

Begin each day by taking counsel from the Word of God, if but for ten minutes while you are dressing.

Put away all bitter feelings and broodings over slights and wrongs, no matter from whom received.

Have in your heart some person or cause for which you pray daily.

Let no opportunity pass without owning your Saviour before others and modestly urging all to accept His service.

Make it your daily business to speak kind words, do kind deeds and smile upon those you meet.

Do all this, not affectedly, but sincerely, as unto the Lord. "Trust in the Lord with all thy heart and lean not upon thine own understanding."

"Now, our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, and God our Father, who loved us and gave us eternal comfort and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts and establish you in every good word and work."

Put this card where you can see it every morning.

Porto Rican Sent to Jail for Violating Lottery Laws.

For the first time in the history of Porto Rico a man is serving a jail sentence for violating the law prohibiting the importation and sale of lottery tickets. Manuel Cerecedo, whose sentence of two years imprisonment and a fine of 10,000 was recently upheld by the Supreme Court of the United States, has surrendered himself and is now in prison.

Cerecedo was found to be the Porto Rico representative of the Padre Billing Lottery of Santo Domingo and at the time of his arrest two years ago was charged with disposing of 10,000 lottery tickets every other week. Government officials estimated that he was clearing at the rate of $9,000 a month and that the island was spending more than a million and a half dollars a year on lottery tickets.

Since Ceregedo's arrest and conviction it has been more difficult to buy lottery tickets in Porto Rico, although stray lots of them find their way in from Spain, Germany, Cuba and Santo Domingo. Cerecedo is a Spaniard and is one of the leading merchants here.

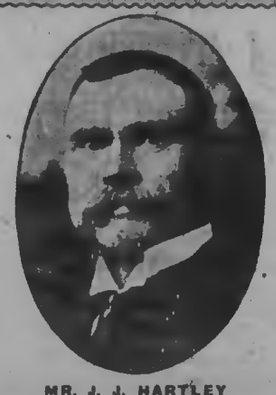
WM. GALBRAITH WAS ELECTED FOR ONE YEAR AS ALDERMAN

Wm. Galbraith's will be a new face in the 1916 council as the result of his defeating W. C. Austin by 431—399 for the vacant one year aldermanic term in the west ward. The figures indicate that this was another warmly contested election. Both men are widly known in their ward, have many friends and splendid reputations. Mr. Galbraith is a young man with valuable business experience to make him a valuable member of the council.

EX-ALD. C. WALTER GREEN
The industrious and efficient chairman of the Board of Works last year, who ran Mayor Duffus a decidedly close race.



MR. J. J. HARTLEY
Mr. Hartley was defeated as the Labour Candidate, but certainly was not dishonoured, as he received a large vote, sufficiently testifying to the public's favourable regard of him.

George Duncan Is Back In Council

Defeated Harry Phelan For Two-Year Term As West Ward Representative

Ex-Ald Geo. Duncan had little difficulty in winning a place in the west ward from his opponent ex-Ald. Harry Phelan. The vote was 502 to 227 and Ald.. Duncan will be welcomed back to the Council Board from which he essayed a majority flight against ex-Mayor Buller a year ago. He has had many years of experience as an alderman and he should make an efficient representative of the west ward.

ALD. GEORGE DUNCAN
Elected to two-year term as Alderman for West Ward. He had a substantial majority of Mr. Harry Phelan.

BROTHER'S VISIT PREVENTS TRAGEDY

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 4—A fatality was narrowly averted, when Henry Colbert broke into the house of his brother, Thomas Colvert, and saved him from death by coal gas. Mr. Colbert was almost unconscious when his brother found him. Dr. Jarvis, who was summoned, worked over Mr. Colbert for over an hour before bringing him around. Mr. Colbert is 73 years old.

Henry Colbert arrived to pay his brother, who lives alone, a visit, and not being able to get into the house, suspected something was wrong, and called on a neighbour, William Kemp, to help him gain an entrance. This they did by breaking into doors with an axe and found Colbert in bed in a semi-conscious condition. His condition to-day was reported as being slightly improved.

AMERICA WILL SHIP 6,000,000 SHELLS MONTHLY TO ALLIES

Preparations Are Being Made for Expeditious Transportation of Projectiles

Midvale Steel Company Will Supply Artillery Ammunition of Special Dimensions.

NEW YORK.—The daily shipment of shells from the United States to ports of the Allies will soon average 200,000 or 6,000,000 shells a month.

These figures are stated by business men engaged in the preparations for a great output of artillery projectiles, and they were prepared in order to gauge properly the exact transportation facilities required for the shipment of the heavy ammunition. In order to make way for a steady flow to be maintained indefinitely, according to men who are thoroughly conversant with the munitions output, all other supplies are being rushed out of the way as speedily as possible.

An illustration of this purpose was seen when the Lapland, of the Red Star Line, was delayed in her clearance from this port for more than four hours so that many heavy motor vehicles could be shipped. These could not be placed in the hold and were lashed to the deck forward. Every vessel clearing for British, French or Italian ports within the next few weeks will be expected to carry more than her regular quota of cargo of this variety, so as to permit the more expeditious transportation of the artillery ammunition later.

Foreign military officers who are engaged in inspecting the output of ammunition here have intimated to the manufacturers and men who are engaged in the shipment of the material that as much as possible should be sent forward before May 1.

According to authorities the ammunition supply from this country has not yet made its appearance upon the Western front to a great extent, and even when the great steady shipment is begun the supply from this country will be but a small fraction of the total amount of munitions at the disposal of the Allies.

Recently the French Government placed an order with the Midvale Steel Company for a considerable quantity of 8.2-inch and 11.4-inch projectiles. The orders for shells of the large calibre are of more recent date and few have yet been filled. Most of the artillery ammunition shipments from this country have consisted of three-inch shrapnel ammunition.

Fall In!

"OFFICER!" said Cissy, looking up from her magazine, "did you say officer? Where?"

The train was sliding into Quebec with the light taut breath of a young runner. The morning air was a shiver of diamonds. The passengers had waked, wondered, breakfasted, and were about to alight.

Cissy was the sort of American who got her hats out of Vogue, her views out of the Smart Set, and her checks out of Dad. The hats were small, the views were broad, but the checks were the loudest plaids you ever saw and still growing.

Cissy had set her heart on a white Christmas, a crinkle-treed, sleigh-belled, buffalo-robed Christmas. Where else were the use of the finest fur coat between here and Madame Polarbear's At Home.

Wherefore Cissy had stamped a thirteen-inch-high-booted foot under the shortest skirt you ever saw, short of the bathing beach, and dad got the light.

He also got the way to the nearest ticket office—or rather the chauffeur did—and the net result was twin tickets for Canada. Dad and Cissy were all there was to it down home, except servants.

Cap Moriarty was a Canadian from Ireland via New York.

"Where?" said Cissy again, flattening her pretty nose against the cool pane, "daddy, I want an officer for Christmas too, please may I?"

As if in answer, the door at the far end of the car opened and the girl in the compartment saw a man stride in. He had hair the color of his khaki suit, and you knew from the set of his mouth that his eyes were grey.

"Two button-tiganges on his arm, daddy," said Miss Inquisitive, as the porter hauled the suit cases down the aisle, "no, three. What make is he?"

"Captain, I think. You you're neutral, Cis, don't you forget it."

"Neutral?" said his daughter, with her first lungful of true north air, "seems to me this climate is going to be kinda hard on neutrality."

As the red-sledded and be-buffaloed conveyance tinkled off down the street, while dad got busy on the French-named shopfronts, Cissy's head came breathlessly round.

"He didn't go away on the train after all, dad—he just went through it. He's in the sleigh behind.

Captain Moriarty was a Canadian—from Ireland, via New York, for adventure. He had spent five hard-riding years in the Northwest Mounted Police. Now he is going home; because no matter how far a Briton travels, he's Briton still. And when it comes to a scrap, your Irishman is the grittiest Briton of them all.

His battalion was wintering in Montreal, but Moriarty himself had leave for Christmas and he had run down to the Chateau Frontenac for a little of the sport on ski, toboggan, skate and sleigh, that he so loved.

Incidentally and unconsciously, he had packed a little arrow in his bag, a strange, gold-headed steelbarbed bit of viciousness unknown to military authorities, the mate of which had been slid into the wardrobe trunk of the girl from New York. He didn't know it. And she didn't know it. But the little French-eyed cupide of Quebec had wired ahead for just that arrangement.

Dad met the captain in the morning—oh yes, such things do happen—and Cissy met him at lunch. It was thrilling to talk to a real soldier. Most of the men she knew had raised a moustache for the Allies—and that was all.

When he proposed tobogganing Cissy hunted up her furriest, fluffiest, fetchingest coat and complied. Incidentally, the French cupid transferred the arrow from the trunk to her eyes—big, dark eyes they were and disastrously eyelashed.

The streets tingled with life. They flowed with color. Everywhere you heard the lilt of Gallic laughter. There were soldiers too, endless groups of them. And every group encountered, when one was on the magic company of an officer, meant a salute. Cissy had been bowed to, cringed to, kneeled to, but saluted by real active-service soldiers—never before. It was thrilling.

Tobogganing is the king of winter sports, the Coney Island climax of speed-daring, swallow-darting adventure. The most popular slide in Quebec starts from under the shadow of the King's Bastion of the Citadel and ends on Dufferin Terrace at the entrance to the Chateau Frontenac tea room. It starts as "pleased-to-meet-you, glad-you-steer", it goes a quarter of a mile in something under thirty seconds; and when it has landed you breathless and well-acquainted at the door of the tea room—why, after half an hour of such glorious fellowship, you just naturally drift in.

White hands over a dainty teapot—warm fragrance of the stbtle Orient in every sip——

"After all, we're one race," said the captain, smiling, "what do you say to snowshoeing to-morrow?"

The day was a perfect pearl, a sun-drenched ecstacy. The crush [illegible] the life out of one. The north pumps it in and uses it up again at top pressure. The long miles melted into memories.

"How can you leave it?" Cissy burst out at last, "this glorious country—how can you go there to the guns and the gas and those awful, awful trenches?"

"How could I stay? The more wonderful it is—child, child, isn't it worth fighting for? But you're neutral. You couldn't understand?"

She touched his arm timidly. He looked so grim.

"Oh, but I do!" she whispered. "My great-great-grandfather fought under Washington. This ain't my country—but if it were, how I would fight!"

The captain was more afraid then than thousands of Germans would have made him. But he charged straight for the guns.

Most of the men she knew had raised a moustache for the allies—I'm glad I let it go at that.

"Would you take a stake in it if it were offered to you very, very humbly? Just one Canadian heart, dear? We have to move quickly these days. There are no long courtships in war time."

There wasn't a sound in all the white world.

"It isn't true. It couldn't be," said Cissy, awed, "and yet I know I love you."

Out of the end of a feathery, snow-draped bough, the little French cupid laughed. And then he sighed. For far away, a bugle at the Citadel had played "fall in."

"And yet I love you"

Rigour of Winter Campaign Lessened By Field Comforts

Two of the most characteristic features of this war as distinguished from former wars, have been trench warfare and winter campaigns.

From time immemorial, winter has been the great pacificist. Those young enough to remember their Caesar will recall the inevitableness with which the Roman General at the first touch of frost, led his troops into snug winter quarters (Hibernia).

When Wellington held the lines of Torres Vedras, winter imposed an involuntary truce. The great Napoleon met with disaster on his winter campaign in Russia.

To-day, however, the winter campaign is perhaps, from the point of view of the soldier, the greatest horror of modern war. Night and day in frost and sleet our soldiers in France, have to mount guard. Winter is to them an even more implacable foe than the German.

Moreover few civilians really understand what a trench is. We talk glibly about the trenches, but we do not realize that a trench is a ditch full of mud and slime—the most unfit of all places for human habitation.

The trench is bad enough in summer, but in winter it surpasses anything that Dante conceived in his inferno. The only way to defeat this infernal combination of winter and trench is to supply the soldier with an abundance of "Field Comforts": socks, mittens, mufflers, wristlets and belts to keep his body warm; and tobacco, mouth-organs, gramophones, books, pipes and hosts of other things to keep up his spirits.

Every time we hear the winter wind whistle in the lanes, we should think of our troops on active service and make a contribution to their welfare.

Every Women's Institute, every branch of the Daughters of the Empire, in short almost every woman's organization in affiliation with the National Service Committee, is a receiving centre for supplies and for money for field comforts.

The comforts are distributed from London to the front line trenches by a very efficient organization, the Canadian War Contingent Association, so do your best to help our troops defeat winter as well as the Germans.

How Our Troops Appreciate Field Comforts.

Selections from letters sent by officers and men in the field to Mr. J. G. Colmer, Secretary of the C.W.C.A.

The 1,000 cigarettes arrived in first-class condition, and I have distributed to the men, who received them with the remark that the Canadian War Contingent Association is the only society that actually send things.

The box of writing paper and envelopes sent us by your Association has arrived in good condition. May I express the Battery's thanks for same. These articles are rather scarce, and I can assure you that the same are much appreciated.—Captain

I wish to thank you for the 36 Cardigans, and to assure you they will be greatly appreciated by the men under my command.—Major.

The packages have been received and distributed. These comforts are greatly appreciated.—Lt.-Col.

The pipes have been a great pleasure to the boys, and all who received them send thanks.—Captain.

EXPERIMENTAL UNION'S ANNUAL MEETING JAN. 11

The 37th annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union will be held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, on the 11th and 12th of January.

The co-operative work amongst the farmers has again been carried on throughout the Province. Upwards of four thousand farmers took part in this work during the past year. The co-operative work now includes the testing of all kinds of farm crops, the application of commercial fertilizers and farm yard manures, the growing of mixed grains, the eradication of weeds, besides work in Forestry and Beekeeping and in connection with the public schools of Ontario.

Besides the presentation of the summary results and the principal conclusions from the co-operative work, subjects of great agricultural value will be discussed at the annual meeting. Amongst the subjects for presentation are the following: "Important Factors in Connection with Ontario Fruit Growing," "Ontario's Supply of Good Seed for 1916," "Business Methods and Farm Accounts," "Thin and Thick Seeding and Mature and Immature Corn," "The Potato Rot as it will affect Potatoes for Seed," "Sweet Clover in Ontario," etc. Amongst the speakers are: Dr. G. C. Creelman, Hon. F. G. Macdiarmid, Mr. C. F. Bailey, Prof. Macoun, Mr. P. E. Angle, Mr. P. W. Hodgetts, Mr. F. M. Clement, Mr. J. B. Fairbairn and several of the Professors of the Ontario Agricultural College.

All sessions of the Experimental Union to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, January 11th and 12th, are open to any person interested in agriculture and everyone is welcome to take part in the meetings. Cheap rates have been arranged on the certificate plan. For further particulars and a copy of the programme apply to C. A. Zavitz, Secretary, Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.

don't you have the good of your family at heart? Don't you want to get for your family the very best? For internal ailments—the best medicine? For sores and skin diseases—the best ointment? If so, get Zam-Buk. Mothers who have used Zam-Buk say there is nothing to equal its soothing, healing power in cases of skin diseases and injuries, and nothing so suitable for sensitive skins.

This is because Zam-Buk is composed entirely of medicinal herbal essences and extracts, and is free from the poisonous coloring matter and harsh minerals found in ordinary ointments.

Children, having once used Zam-Buk, will cry for it when they meet with an accident. They know how quickly it stops the pain, and heals.

Use it for burns, cuts, bruises, skin injuries, piles, eczema, blood-poisons, ulcers, chapped hands and cold sores.

In a Hurry.—A very small boy was taken to a dental establishment to have some of his first teeth pulled. For a second or so, during which time four teeth disappeared, everything was fairly serene, and then came howls of objections. "I didn't want them teeth to come out!" cried the young patient, suddenly recollecting something. "I want them to stay in." "That's all right," consolingly responded the dentist. "They will soon grow in again." "Will they?" quickly rejoined the boy with a brightened face. "Do you think they will grow in time for dinner?"

GERMANS VEXED AT "PUNCH" HIT BACK AT THE FAMOUS PUBLICATION

It is well known that the virile attitude of Mr. Punch on the War has given particular offence in Germany. The leading German newspapers have already solemnly warned the conductors of Punch as to what will befall them when the Germans come to London. Mr. Punch, however, goes on his way undismayed, and continues to deal faithfully and fearlessly with Germany and with the Kaiser.

Some two or three months ago a fine volume of Punch Cartoons was published in New York, comprising some 150 illustrations, the object of which was to bring clearly before the citizens of the United States the arrogant attitude of Germany towards the European Powers from 1860 to 1915.

This collection of cartoons showed the methods of the Teuton in such unflattering colours that Germany became nervous as to the stability of her influence in the United States of America. A counterblast must be issued at once, and a blow struck at Mr. Punch, and, through him, at the hated English.

It was decided to produce a rival to Punch, one that should not only supplant the famous periodical in the favour of the American public, but should be full of the spirit of hostility to Great Britain.

A Rival "Punch" on U. S. Bookstalls.

In pursuance of this plan, two or three weeks ago the bookstalls of the United States were adorned with a plentiful supply of copies of a periodical which resembled Punch very closely, but was not Punch. The front cover was embellished with Doyle's famous design, which has been known in all parts of the world from time immemorial as the cover design of Punch. In size and shape the periodical was identical with Punch, but purchasers who bought copies for the modest price of 10 cents (5d) were surprised to read above the cover design the legend:

"As England sees U.S. shown in Punch," and beneath the design the words:

"Some Famous and Forgotten Cartoons that the present generation of Americans should see."

"Reproduced by The American Truth Society, 1133 Broadway, New York."

The contents of the periodical were fifteen full-page cartoons taken from the issues of Punch from 1842 to 1870. These cartoons, which were mainly of the American Civil War period, when England was not in sympathy with America, had been carefully chosen as being those most likely to make Americans offended with Great Britain. Comments in red ink appeared beneath each cartoon, some of which ran:

"John Bull felt like thrashing us during our Civil War," "John Bull's Bankruptcy was father to the thought during our Civil War,'" "John Bull's new 'Confidence Trick' calls for a billion dollars"; and on the last page, by way of explaining why Punch had been selected for this attack on Britain was printed: "The English mind is always shown in London Punch." That the cartoons had been deliberately selected in such a way as to misrepresent both the attitude of Punch and of Great Britain in relation to the Civil War, and also to represent the feelings of fifty years ago as those of to-day, is only further evidence, if such were needed, of the Germanic origin of publication.

A "Punch" Produced by Germans.

Fortunately, or unfortunately, depending on the point of view, a day or two after this precious publication was placed on the bookstalls, the secretary of Punch arrived in New York. A visit to the publishers, The American Truth Society, proved, as was anticipated, that, despite its name, the society was a German organization run by Germans, and having direct connection with the organisers of the numerous bomb and other outrages in the States.

Its Withdrawal.

Upon threat of legal procedure, these valiant protagonists of Germany promptly undertook to withdraw all copies of the publication from circulation, to hand these copies over to the true Punch authorities, and to enter into a formal undertaking not to re-issue Punch cartoons, at all events, in the misleading form in which they had been issued.

The publication was scathingly reviewed by the New York press, which has since noted with pleasure its disappearance from the bookstalls and with caustic comment on the reason for its withdrawal. The net result of the adventure is the still further discrediting of the German propagandists in America.

Premier's Army Plan Pleases

Increase to Half Million Men is Received With General Satisfaction

Sir Sam Hughes Issues Statement Emphasizing Need of Officers

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—The New Year's announcement of Sir Robert Borden that the Canadian overseas force will be increased to half a million men has been received with general satisfaction. The increase in the force will mean no change in military plans or methods, except that recruiting will be pushed harder than ever, and will be continuous.

For the last month the recruits throughout Canada have averaged a thousand men a day, and up to the present there have been recruited 222,000 men.

At the same rate, in another month there will be 250,000 men under arms. As soon as this number is reached recruiting will begin on the new quarter of a million, and enlisting will be kept up until the force is raised. The increase in force will mean that as soon as possible the number of troops at the front will be increased.

Three Divisions Soon

There will soon be three full divisions in the firing line, and it is expected that a fourth will then be organized. When that reaches Flanders, Canada will have nearly one hundred thousand men in the field. To keep such a force at full strength in the field is regarded as about the limit of Canada's ability.

The big problem the department now faces is to get trained officers. There are few well-qualified officers in Canada now and with new infantry battalions being authorized daily, the problem is continually growing more acute. There are now 179 infantry battalions authorized, while through the draft system in force last fall many regiments have raised to almost double their original number.

Schools for Officers.

General Sir Sam Hughes announced this morning that to meet the problem of good officers new schools would be opened for both commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

"The department," said General Hughes, "is taking steps to obtain the best officers available to organize new battalions. What we especially desire is strong men who have had successful business of professional training. Just as in the cases of Clive, Nicholson and many others, so to-day the best soldiers are men such as engineers, barristers, contractors—large business men with military training. It is found that they far surpass the professional soldier. I want applications from all such men and will train men accustomed to driving through things."

GIRL ACCUSED OF SHOOTING THREE MEN--ONE DEAD

Anna Zakrewski Held on Manslaughter Charge After Resisting Attack on Father's Saloon—Two Wounded

BUFFALO, Jan. 4.—Anna Zakrewski, who, the police say, shot and killed one man and wounded two others, when they made an attack on her father's saloon at Ashley and Mohr Streets, is being held at the police headquarters on a charge of manslaughter.

When the girl opened fire with a revolver upon the gang in which it is said there were twenty young men, Stephan Grablewski, 27 years old who lived at 181 Stanislaus Street, fell with a bullet through his heart, and the other men were wounded in the legs. Their wounds are not serious, according to physicians at the Emergency hospital.

Frank Gorski, 23 years old, of 32 Reed Street, gave himself up at police headquarters, yesterday. Gorski is reputed to be a leader of the gang. Gorski and the Zakrewski girl made statements to the police from which it appears that the gang was thrown out of the saloon the night before when they tried to get drinks.

It is said they went back to the saloon Saturday night, and, drawing revolvers fired indiscriminately. The girl, who was behind the bar, drew a revolver from the cash register and fired into the gang. Three men fell, and the rest of the gang ran away. The girl reloaded the revolver in a back room and went back into the bar-room, but the men were gone.

The two men at the hospital and four others are being held by the police on charges of rioting.

THE WAR IS TO BE SETTLED ON LARGE LINES

The events of the war have led Europe to see that questions regarding the relative culpability for the out break, in 1914, have been lived down and have become chiefly academic. The immense growth of populations industry, and commerce were bringing about a number of inevitable changes. The question was whether these changes could be defined and accepted after a world-wide struggle. If there had been greater strength and wisdom in the diplomatic and governmental machinery of the nations, the needful adjustments might have been made without a wholesale sacrifice of private interest to alleged public necessity. War hardly ever brings to the collective mass any benefits that suffice to compensate the individual members of the mass for their private sacrifices of life and fortune. A common-sense dealing with Balkan problems on the part of the great powers, during the past forty years, and a generous and broad-gauge treatment of the rivalries of growing commercial powers in the matter of colonial empires and oversea trade would have obviated the great war and resulted in benefit to countless millions in their personal capacities, without loss or harm to the collective entities that we call "states" or "nations."—From 'The Progress of the World,' in the American Review of Reviews for January 1916.

CAMBRIDGE NO LONGER DOMESTIC INSTITUTION

Cambridge has practically ceased to be a domestic institution, and its academic life is sustained almost entirely by alien and colonial students. This resemblance to a foreign university, planted in the classic confines of the ancient seat of learning, is intensified by the presence here of the faculty and some of the students body of the University of Louvani.

With the exception of the medical school, none of the colleges has more than a handful of British students. Perhaps the greater sufferer from the war has been Corpus Christi college, which does not admit men of colored race to its rools. This college, has seven undergraduates in residence and since most of its sons are either with the military forces or doing government work of some sort, the great hall is closed and the students and their instructors dine in their own quarters.

Each college has a great ball of baronial appearance and capacity where its members dine in state, the master with his dons at tables on a dais while below on the main floor the undergraduates gather about long tables. Most of these halls, formally centers of traditional English good cheer, are now places of gloom where by dim candle light, enforced on account of the Zeppelin peril, a few of the elderly faculty members gather with their alien and crippled students body in a pathetic effort to keep alive a glorious tradition.

Trinity with its normal enrollment of six hundred students does not show the ravages of war as much as the other colleges, but this does not mean that it has not been as patriotic as the others, but on account of its enrollment, far in the lead of any of its rivals and the further fact that it numbers many aliens among its undergraduates, the college can still muster a hundred men. Headed by Dr. Butler, the venerable and venerable master of the college, who is assisted by vice-master Henry Jackson, O. M., one of the greatest of Cambridge teachers, the faculty and men of Trinity gather in the great hall in a brave effort to uphold the continuity of Cambridge's royal college. But a fear of a lapse in the continuity necessary to carry on the precious traditions of the university is in every heart, and sometimes finds expression in grim determination to hold on at any cost, save any step which would prevent Cambridge men from doing their duty to their country.

It is whispered that next year there will be no freshmen of the type who have made Cambridge, and even should new men come, there will be no old men to instruct them in the fine points of student custom which mean so much to an ancient university. The ray of hope for those who entertain such fear is provided by the great public schools, which are expected to keep alive enough of the Cambridge tradition to provide a basis for the students who will throng its colleges when the war is over.

VERY LIKELY.

Before the war has been ended Austria will receive a reminder of the Yamba Maru incident from a quarter which does not deal in protests unsupported by quick effective action. That quarter is Japan, which never forgives nor forgets.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS FOUND NEARLY STARVED

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The West Triangle lighthouse, in the Gulf of Mexico, 150 miles west of Progresso is so far from the disturbed districts of the revolutionary republic that everybody on and off the firing line in authority forgot about the gallant Mexican lightkeepers and their families, and even the steamships, for whose safety the lighthouse was established, gave merely a passing glance at the beacon at night, and in the day hardly noted the lonely little, reef-like islet's existence.

The first message of the lightkeepers to the outer world, telling of their plight was brought here by the Ward liner Mexico, in from Mexico, Havana and Nassau. Captain O'Keefe happened to turn his binocular on the lighthouse on the afternoon of Dec. 23, and saw distress signals flying from the flagstaff reading: "Want immediate assistance."

Captain O'Keefe changed his course and Second Officer Hassel got a lifeboat provisioned and ready to launch. The surgeon found inhabitants of the island much emaciated, having had nothing to subsist on for three weeks except water and a few fish. The lighthouse keepers said that the supply boat had not been to the forlorn islet for four months and that they had run completely out of food, but still had water, or otherwise would have perished, and ample oil to keep the light burning.

LIGHTING RATES TO BE REDUCED

Some days ago it was stated that Mr. W. H. Moore, of the Peterborough Utilities Commission had intimated that the water rates would be reduced during the present year. It was the electric lighting rates, and not the water rates that Mr. Moore had reference to. Substantial reductions have been made all over Ontario, and it is expected that Peterborough will be similarly favoured at an early date. The reductions in a number of cases amount to twenty per cent.

CONFESSED FORGER PAYING CREDITORS

DETROIT, Jan. 4.—Frank G. Jones, author-forger, completed his first year on parole by disbursing more than $8,000 to his creditors, former stockholders of the American Electric Fuse company, of Muskegon, which went to the wall as the result of his confessed forgeries amounting to many thousands of dollars.

In addition to the money from his writings Jones has earned enough to provide for himself, wife and son.

All the funds furnished by Jones have gone to small stockholders of the fuse company, former employees and widows and orphans who are listed among the creditors.

Claims still held against Jones amount to nearly $1,000,000. Jones is confident that he will be able to repay every cent of the debts outstanding.

To Refuse to Enlist a Sin Says Ottawa Priest to Able-Bodied

Profound Sermon by Rev. Dr. J. J. O'Gorman on the Duty Involved in Voluntary Enlistment—"Can't Serve God Unless You Serve Your Country."

DUTY BOUND TO ENLIST

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Declaring that a young man of military age to shirk what is evident to him as his manifest duty, and through selfishness refuse to enlist, was undoubtedly a sin, and emphasizing that it is a grievous doctrinal error to suppose that under a voluntary system a state is left at the mercy of unrestricted choice on the part of the individual to enlist or not to enlist, Rev. Father J. J. O'Gorman preached an eloquent and intensely compelling recruiting sermon in Blessed Sacrament church yesterday. Dr. O'Gorman took as his text, "Render Unto Caesar the Things that are Caesar's," and his intensely compelling words made a profound impression upon his congregation.

Striking Phrases.

Some of his most striking phrases follow:

"YOU CANNOT SERVE GOD UNLESS YOU SERVE YOUR COUNTRY."

"Our duty is to fight for victory and pray for peace."

"The voluntary system is obligatory in conscience."

"The able-bodied Canadian of military age who has not enlisted for Overseas service is in duty bound to do so unless a more urgent duty keeps him at home."

"For a man to shirk what is evident to him as his manifest duty and through selfishness refuse to enlist, is undoubtedly a sin."

"Our duty is to fight Germans not to hate."

"The whole British Empire must mobilize its every force, if we are to defend what is ours."

"If the price paid be death, the reward gained will be eternal life."

After dealing with the various schools of political thought in regard to the position of Canada in an Empire war and declaring that the Dominion had no choice between participation in the war or cessation from the Empire when war was declared, and emphasizing that the shores of Canada were to-day being defended on the fields of France and Flanders and in the North Sea, Dr. O'Gorman maintained that it was therefore the patent duty of every Canadian of military age to enlist for overseas service. Dealing with the obligation to enlist, he said:

Voluntarism.

"It is supposed by some that when a nation is defending herself, as Canada is to-day by the voluntary system, that it is left to the unrestricted choice of the individual to enlist or not to enlist. This is a most grievous doctrinal error. 'The voluntary system,' to quote from a sermon of the Bishop of Northampton, 'is not a trap to catch the young, the enthusiastic, and the brave, and to screen the shirker, the money-grabber and the coward. The voluntary system means what it says. It is mobilization not of a few, but of the whole nation. It means universal recognition of a universal duty, to dedicate all we have and all that we are at this moment to the country's service.' These words of a distinguished member of the Catholic hierarchy of England applies also to Canada. The voluntary system is obligatory in conscience. Indeed since it is the individual who judges his own case and since it is the individual who enforces the judgment, the individual obligation is greater than under conscription. The Canadian cannot merely passively await orders as under conscription. He must at once if he has not already done so cite himself before the tribunal of his own conscience and judge if the general obligation of enlisting applies to his own individual case. If it does he must enlist. Otherwise he sins.

As to the Germans.

Speaking of the Germans as one who "had enjoyed the hospitality of their country for two years as a student," Dr. O'Gorman said it would be well for Canadians to remember that the British Empire is fighting against "one of the most cultivated and efficient of Christian nations." They are neither neo-pagans nor barbarians. They were conducting the war with courage, patriotism, and intelligence. He quoted from a German paper he had just received and which declared that the longer Germany fought the more she would conquer. In face of these facts the whole British Empire must be mobilized.

Dr. O'Gorman concluded with:

"The words which St. Columbian used some 1,300 years ago, 'he urge himself forward to the spiritual conquest of Germany suit admirably today as a motto for the Canadian recruit:

"Our perils are many, the war awaiting us is severe, and the enemy terrible, but the recompense is glorious, and the freedom of our will is manifest. Without an adversary there is no fight, without a fight there is no crown. Where there is fight, there is courage, vigilance, ardor, endurance, fidelity, wisdom, prudence, firmness. Where there is no fight there is defeat. Let me then advance to the attack; for if you take away liberty, you take away dignity. "Si tollis libertatem tollis dignitatem.'"

POLICEMAN REACHES HIGH D WITH EASE

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Longer than the way to Tipperary is the distance between a seat on one of the city's motorcycles and a place on the operatic stage, but Policeman Howard D. Smith of traffic squad G has high hopes of bridging the gap, thanks to a voice which climbs easily to high D, and the help of Mrs. Archibald White, a society woman of this city.

Believing that he had a fine voice, Smith, six months ago, went to one of the offices of the Metropolitan opera house and asked to have his voice tested. This man was so favourably impressed with the policeman's voice that he sent him to Professor Bossert to have it tried out.

After listening to Smith sing, the man who trained Edmund Burke, Henry Miller and many other noted human songbirds, told him that with proper training he might reach the top of the ladder. He added that lessons would be $20 for each half hour.

Just as the downcast policeman was about to leave the studio, Mrs White, who had been listening to his warbling while waiting to take her own lesson, stepped up and said: "You give him lessons and I'll pay the bills."

When seen in his studio, Dr. Bossert said: "The man has a truly remarkable voice and I expect great things from him in time. His range is tremendous. He reaches high D with ease. The significance of this is best understood when it is known that the highest note sung on the opera stage to-day is high C. Of course he is a little crude yet but he responds readily to training: his voice is sweet and clear and all in all he is one of the most wonderful tenors I have ever listened to."

What Germany Might Consider

The two things most thoroughly demonstrated thus far in the war are: First, that England's sea power cannot be broken, and that the British Empire has neither yet been shaken nor is likely to be disturbed, while the second fact is that Germany's amazing power of organization and unified action, together with her advantages due to operating from an inner position, renders her practically invincible—at least from the defensive standpoint,—in a war on land. England cannot and will not give up the war while Belgium is either directly or indirectly under German control. France cannot and will not give up the war with enemies intrenched upon French soil. The German authorities now understand that they are not to remain in Belgium or France.

As a price of permanent peace, they would probably be willing to make some slight concessions to France on the Alsace-Lorraine frontier. As regards Russia, the most responsible Germans probably no longer have any thought of holding Russian territory as spoils of war. But they would like to create the Kingdom of Poland, chiefly out of Polish Russia, and to have Poland as a buffer state. They would also probably like to see Rumania gain something to the northward by taking back Bessarabia from Russia, in order that the Russians might the more effectively be kept from the Balkans and Constantinople. Germany would undertake to find her own compensation by securing the consent of Europe and the world to undertake the development of the Turkish Empire and to hold a position of recognized leadership,—not of formal rulership,—throughout the southeast of Europe. Thus Germany is taking the Balkan campaign very seriously, and is pushing the uncompleted parts of the Bagdad railroad system with intense energy. — From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for January, 1916.

DISFIGURED FOR LIFE BY HER CAT

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—In an attack upon her last Saturday afternoon by her Angora cat in her home at No. 353 Summer avenue, Newark, Mrs. William Portz was so badly bitten that she probably will be disfigured for life. The cat will be killed, although he has a pedigree and has been highly valued. He has shown no signs of rabies. Mrs. Portz is believed not to be in any danger.

Mrs. Portz had placed the cat on a back porch, attached to a leash, for his daily airing. Later she heard sounds of trouble and found that a stray cat had climbed to her porch and the two felines were engaged in a fight. With a neighbour Mrs. Portz sought to separate the cats by throwing water upon them. When the stray cat had finally been driven away she attempted to unfasten the leash of her pet, and the Angora sprang upon her, fastening his claws in her hair.

Then he bit and scratched her. She called for help, and a neighbour responded. Two physicians worked for two hours cauterizing and stitching up wounds on her head and face.

Ministers and Choirs of City Represented at Trinity Church

Congratulations to Congregation and Pastor of New Church Were Extended Last Night—Fine Musical Programme — Rev. Major Davidson's Remarks.

THE OTHER SPEAKERS

At the conclusion of the congregational supper at Trinity Church last night an unusual and very interesting service was held in the auditorium, to which the visitors repaired. The ensuing meeting provided an illustration of church union and proved a very happy event. Visiting ministers represented the churches of the city and the choirs, also, contributed, through soloists or organists.

Rev. Canon Davidson, representing the Anglican Church, Rev. J. R. Webb the Baptist, Rev. Benj. Greatrix, the Methodist, Rev. (Capt.) Rollins, the Presbyterian; Mr. D. W. Dumble, the parent church, were present.

The idea of neighbours' night, was carried out in the musical programme. Mr. John Allan of St. Paul's Church, played an organ solo, in the absence of Miss Allan, who was to have sung; Miss Ida Sanderson of Murray Street, and Mrs. J. H Renwick of George Street, were heard in vocal solos, with Mr. Renwick at the organ; the solos by Miss Helen McLaren and Mr. P. H. Skitch were accompanied by Mr. John Crane Messrs. Humpage and Smith of Knox Church sang a duet, with Mr. George Kenyon as accompanist; Mr. Allan presided at the organ for Mr. Geo. Chandler of All Saints' Church.

The visiting ministers congratulated the congregation and pastor of Trinity Church upon their beautiful edifice. Rev. Mr. Webb remarked that the work accomplished was not surprising in view of the fact that Methodist people were providing for it, that a Presbyterian, in Mr. Wm. Langford, was the contractor, a Baptist in Mr. Edward Burke of Toronto, was the architect, and a Mr. Webb supervised the stone work. The greatest thing a company of men could do was the permanent establishment of a Christian Church.

Capt. Rollins said that on the occasion of the laying of Trinity's corner stone he had suggested the changing of the name of Rubidge to Church Street, but as near neighbours he felt that Trinity and St. Andrew's would do good work on old Rubidge Street.

Rev. Major Davidson of the 93rd Battalion, while joining gladly in the sentiments of those who had heaped congratulations for their generosity and taste in erecting so big and broad and uplifting a sanctuary, more particularly congratulated them upon him who was their pastor at this momentous time in their history. The gentleness and Christian sweetness and tenderness of Mr. Wilson's character were valuable assets, which should be disseminated widely through our all too rough and crude western life.

Major Davidson had only made it a point in the face of overwhelming difficulty to be present from the nature of Mr. Wilson's invitation, who had urged that he (Major Davidson) seemed to belong to them all. This high compliment really expressed one of his chief ambitions ever since coming to Peterborough, which had been to serve not only one church, but, as far as he was able, the whole community.

On Mr. Wilson's reference Rev. Canon Davidson founded his message to the ministers and congregations of Trinity for the future—that they should aim not only to belong to and serve loyally their congregation, but that they should make an increasing reality of belonging to a bigger church, the whole united Canadian Church of the future, which be briefly sketched in attractive and glowing colours, the Church made up of contributions from all present communions. This Church of the future could alone evolve and wield the big broad and elementary influence which was necessary to make a big, broad and noble nation of our beloved Canada.

In building this big church, then, the present congregation of Trinity might be preparing for the future with an appropriateness which they had not at first contemplated.

In conclusion, Major Davidson congratulated the congregation on the greater inspiration gained by the change of name which might carry them upward in thought from the streets of an earthly city with many imperfections to a higher and more enduring city, where maker and builder was God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the ever blessed Trinity, to whom their name testified.

A Grand Supper.

One of the finest public dinners provided at functions of this kind was the unanimous opinion of the ladies' effort during the earlier evening. The basement was beautifully decorated with evergreens and flags resplendent against the pure white walls. A colour scheme of red was prettily carried out in the table decorations of candles, carnations, etc. It is estimated that seven hundred gathered at the first supper in the spacious recreation room. Rev. Mr. Wilson proved a most hospitable host and he was assisted by his daughter Miss Janet Wilson, Mr. J. R. Kidd, superintendent of the Sunday school, and Mr. R. W. Downey, recording steward, were a reception committee for the visiting ministers and their wives. Rev. Dr. Chown, the guest of honour, was unable to remain for this event. At the table of honour were noticed members of the Building committee, of the Ministerial Association, Mr. D. W. Dumble of George street church, Mr John Crane organist, and Miss Richardson, soprano soloist of the choir, and others. Four ladies, presidents of women's societies of the church, attended at this table; they were, Mrs. M. Lytle of the Ladies' Aid, Mrs. A. F. Bookout of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Mrs. (Dr.) Neal Hon. President of the Mission Band, substituting for Mrs. Parker, Mrs. A. F. Lane of the Mission Band. It was a very enjoyable banquet and the ladies who undertook it overlooked no detail in their preparations.

Dr. Fred. Burnham, Formerly of This City, is Surgeon-in-Chief of a Montenegrin Ambulance Corps

The many friends of Dr. Fred. W. E. Burnham, formerly of this city, will be interested to know that he is Surgeon-in-Chief of a Montenegrin Ambulance Corps, now serving at the Montenegrin front. Dr. Beecham Boucher, son of the late Dr. Boucher, is with a British Army Medical Corps at Salonika.

Black Fox Worth $1,200

Valuable Skin is on Display in the Window of Wm. Lech and Sons

A black fox skin valued at twelve hundred dollars has been received by William Lech and Sons, furriers, 366 George street. The skin was secured in the vicinity of James Bay. It is one of the best of its kind. Everything is intact including the claws. It will be on display in the show window for a few days. A buyer is expected from New York and will probably take the fur back with him.

TWO BOYS DROWN WHEN ICE BREAKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Informed by children that two boys had been drowned in Baisley's Pond, near Rockaway Plank road, Jamaica, L.I. Mr. and Mrs. William Sullivan, left their home at No. 132 Brinkmeyer Avenue, South Ozone Park, and joined the crowd that watched the firemen and policemen grappling for the bodies. Fifteen minutes later they identified the body of one of the victims as that of their son, Joseph, 15 years old, and the other as that of his cousin, William O'Neil, eleven, of No. 45 Elbert Street, Brooklyn.

Wm. O'Neil had spent the day at the Sullivan home, and about three o'clock he and his cousin went to the pond. They were told by other boys there that the ice was thin and that none could venture on it with safety. Placards had been posted warning all to keep off the ice.

Watched by a score of children the boys walked boldly out on to the ice. They had gone about twenty-five feet when there was a crash and both disappeared in the water. The children ran to men in the vicinity, and told them of the accident.

The search for the bodies began about 5 o'clock. Firemen of Hook and Ladder Company No. 142, of Ozone Park, placed long ladders across the holes in the ice and grappled for the bodies. At seven o'clock the bodies were brought to the surface.

So Flat.—Little Boy— "Didn't you get wounded at all?" Soldier—"No, not at all." Little Boy—"Not even a slight wound?" Soldier—"Not even a scratch." Little Boy— "Why, you might just as well have stayed at home."

Fifty Bars Are Closed As A Result of Local Option Contests in Ontario Yesterday

Owen Sound Stays Dry by Sustaining the By-law on the Repeal Vote—Majorities in 13 Places But Ineffective Because of Three-fifths Clause.

Local Option as a temperance measure, is still a considerable force in Ontario as shown by yesterday's vote in 47 municipalities. Out of 36 heard from there were only five straight defeats. In 13 municipalities which gave majorities the vote is ineffective because it lacked the necessary three-fifths required by the act.

Local Option bylaws were carried in 7 towns, 5 villages and 4 townships. Local Option was sustained in repeal contests in Owen Sound, Finch village and North Gower township. Results of the repeal contest in Newboro are yet to come. No city went dry. Contests were held in 8 cities and 3 of them gave straight majorities against the bylaw. The three-fifths clause keeps the others wet. The cities voting were: Belleville, Brantford, Port William, Niagara Falls, Port Arthur, Sarnia, Stratford and Woodstock.

SLOWLY DEMOLISHING TRENCHES

Slowly but steadily the prohibition interests in Ontario are demolishing the trenches of the liquor interests. In 47 cities, towns and villages, and townships throughout the province, in which altogether 269 licenses were at stake, the Dominion Alliance yesterday obtained the decisions of the voters on the prohibition question, and are well pleased with the results. The three-fifths clause defeated the Local Option bylaws in five cities, and in three others the bylaw was defeated by straight majorities. Fifteen wins were recorded in the towns, villages and townships. Four places voted on a repeal and in three cases prohibition was sustained. In Owen Sound the "drys" won by a majority of 309. Newboro' is still to be heard from. Finch and North Gower sustained the bylaw.

So far as the returns had been received last night it was shown that the three-fifths clause beat the bylaw in twelve voting places. Straight majorities against prohibition were registered in five places.

DEAD SET OF PUBLIC OPINION.

In an interview last night, Mr. Ben. H. Spence of the Dominion Alliance, said: "When this campaign started there were 292 places under license and 566 places under prohibition. Nearly all the places under license have voted on prohibition bylaws but this time we tackled only 47 places. This included 8 cities and 39 towns. That we won majorities in 27 out of 47 places heard from is in my mind an overwhelming demonstration that public opinion is dead set against the liquor traffic and a further fact is that out of these 27 places there are 15 places, including the cities of Sarnia, Belleville, Woodstock, Brantford and Port Arthur, where the three-fifths clause held us up. In view of the fact that practically all the dry places are being cursed by the licensed districts, the time has come when there must be a province-wide law for prohibition. The remaining licenses are a matter of general concern and can only be affected by a province-wide law. The soundness of prohibition is being demonstrated every day."

ALTERNATIVES BEFORE GOVERNMENT

During a speech before the small gathering at the office of the Alliance last night Mr. Spence said: "The time has come when the government must do either of two things. It must either give prohibition or give the people the power to make it.

GERMANS USE NO COTTON IN MAKING EXPLOSIVES

BREMEN, Germany, Jan. 4.—Germany's experiments with substitutes for cotton in the manufacture of explosives have been so successful, it was announced here to-day, that for eight months no cotton has been used for this purpose. This statement was made by the President of the Bremen Chamber of Commerce, in an address to a convention of merchants of this city. After referring to the designation of cotton as contraband by Great Britain he said:—

"I have had the opportunity to establish officially that for eight months not a kilogram of cotton has been used for making powder. Thanks to the work of German science and industry, we have succeeded in winning from the immeasurable supply of German forests a new cellular material which is cheaper and better suited for powder making than cotton. Even after the war German ammunition factories will not buy another bale of cotton from America.

"The second important ingredient —saltpetre—of the entire Chilean output of which we formally took two-thirds is now manufactured, exclusively in Germany from the air. Our factories already are so advanced that in the coming Spring they will be able to cover the entire requirements for nitrogen, including the amount used in agriculture, and if the war lasts longer they will even be able to export this product."

The speaker also asserted that camphor, which for seven years has been produced synthetically from American turpentine, was now obtained more cheaply and in better quality by chemical means from turpentine. Even after the war, he said, there would be no more importation of camphor from Japan or turpentine from America.

Her Father—"You've been calling on my daughter for some time, young man. Why don't you come down to business?" Suitor—"Very well, how much are you going to leave her?"

ONLY TWO NEW FACES ON COUNCIL THIS YEAR

was a close race between W. H. Hill and John Smith for fifth place. The last four or five places heard from rolled up substantial majorities for Hill, and the latter's place was taken by Dr. Burnham.

The By-laws.

The by-law exempting from taxation for three years, the Peterborough Metal Products Company carried despite the three-fifths handicap. This firm has established itself in the building formerly occupied by the Canadian Cordage Company, and expect to be in operation by the first of February with a staff of about sixty men to start with.

The by-law relating to the purchase by the city of the Exhibition Grounds failed to get a majority. It went under by about 261 votes.

The Election Parade.

With a parade of honking Fords Mayor Duffus appeared on George street about 8:30, accompanied by the successful aldermen and ex-Mayor Buller. In front of The Examiner Office, where a crowd had gathered to read the bulletins, a halt was made and short addresses were delivered and cordially received. Mayor Duffus thanked the ratepayers for the honour conferred upon him in their generous support at the polls. He also thanked the men who had assisted him, and all others who had in any way contributed to his success.

Ex-Mayor Buller congratulated Mayor Duffus and remarked that it was a regrettable feature of elections that only one could be successful, and that men of valuable experience were defeated. He urged the citizens to give the new Council the same support they had accorded him. Aldermen Galbraith, Weir, Edgar, Langford also spoke briefly, and the Fords continued their tooting progress.

THE EXHIBITION BY-LAW

It is quite evident that the majority of citizens of Ptereborough thought differently from the Exhibition Board about permanently establishing the Exhibition on the present grounds, which will no doubt be used for exhibition purposes for the last time with the next fall show.

The ratepayers do not as yet appreciate the importance and possibilities of a fall fair in Peterborough, and it will not be missed until it is gone for good. It is understood the Exhibition Board will consult with those people who suggested properties for exhibition purposes with a view of securing a suitable and permanent home for the fair but it is doubtful if any of the present board would care to be active in endeavouring to build up a fair on leased grounds. The difficulties are too great. The Exhibition Board had the best interests of this city at heart, and from their experience they still feel that they were correct. An exhibition once down is hard to revive. It may not be generally known that the Peterborough Exhibition had the best prize list outside of Toronto, Ottawa and London. However, whether the exhibition is a thing of the past or not the Board feels it has done its duty to the city and district and knows that if the annual fall fair is lost to this city that Lindsay will be greatly benefitted thereby.

ALLOWS SON TO REMAIN IN ARMY

WINNIPEG, Jan. 4.— The sight of her stalwart young son in khaki clothes, made into a husky, healthy man by four months' military training, helped Mrs. Amanda Carr, of Foxhome, Minn., to decide to let her son, David, remain a soldier. The young man's firm will also had something to do with it likely.

Mrs. Carr arrived in the city and went to the district headquarters, where she announced she had come to take her son out of the army and back to the United States for she claimed he was but 17 years old. She had heard that he had been forced into the army by conscription, that he was mistreated and that he wanted to be taken home. A German lawyer in her home town across the line had volunteered to help her get her son back and had written a hot letter to Lt.-Col. Morley of the 144th Battalion, in which young Carr had enlisted. The colonel refused to release the boy as he appeared to be more than 18 years of age. Even Minnesota's governor was urged by the German lawyer, to help get the boy out.

Is Pleasantly Disillusioned.

Yesterday morning Mrs. Carr herself appeared to do battle, single-handed, if necessary, with the whole Canadian army, but she was going to take her boy back. The headquarters staff were very nice to her. Certainly, they would send out at once for her son. She became somewhat mollified. Evidently they were not all brutes.

Half an hour later David stepped in. Strapping he looked and fine with the healthy glow of the wintry wind on his cheeks. The little mother's eyes shone with pride and love.

The pair went for a walk outside to discuss the matter. The boy told his mother that he had been in the army since last August, having enlisted with the 10th C.M.R.'s, later transferring to the 144th. He was perfectly satisfied with his lot.

The mother could not resist the appeal he put into his request that he be allowed to stay. Anyway the army had already done him a world of good and then, too, he was quite determined, and his will had strength enough with his body. The result was that when they came back to headquarters in half an hour Mrs. Carr announced that she was willing to let David remain a Canadian soldier. Carr will be off on four days' furlough for New Year's and he and his mother will spend the time together.

THE PETERBORO' POULTRY SHOW

the various grades of good eggs. It is a process with which both producer and consumer should be conversant. By this means the producer can place a guarantee on all the eggs he ships, and be assured of receiving a high price for his produce.

In this work the consumer is also receiving attention, and to him candling is just as important, as by this process he can acquire accurate information regarding the quality of eggs purchased.

A knowledge of the grades of fresh gathered eggs will also place the consumer in a position to be able to demand these grades of the retailer. It will only be when this demand is forthcoming from the consuming public that the many designations under which eggs are sold at the present time, will be done away with, and the four grades, 'Specials,' 'Extras,' 'No. 1's' and 'No. 2's' become the standard grades in the retail stores.

A lesson may be learned from this exhibit and demonstration that will be of interest to all, and those who wish to candle their own eggs will be supplied with candling appliances free by leaving their names and addresses with the officer in charge of the exhibit, or by writing to the Live Stock Commission, Ottawa.

Miss Yates of the Ontario Agricultural College, will be present to-morrow evening and will give an interesting demonstration on the art of preparing fowl for the market.

POLICE ARREST SOLDIER

QUEBEC, Jan. 4.—The search for the soldier who in the early hours of New Year's Day killed Georges Perganteak, restaurant proprietor of this city, by firing three shots into his body, is apparently over. Private Jas. Kane, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., and in quarters here with the 33rd Overseas Battalion, is now confined in a cell at Police Headquarters in the City Hall, and will appear at the Coroner's inquest at Moisanu's Morgue. It is said he has been identified by three Greeks who were in the restaurant when the shooting took place, by the carter who was driving him on the night of the murder, and by the clerk who sold him the revolver.

The essential clue, it is alleged, was furnished by the prisoner's belt, which had dropped off him at the time of the shooting.

MAYOR DUFFUS' CARD OF THANKS

To The Electors of the City of Peterborough

Peterborough, January 4th, 1916.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is with a degree of modest pride and gratification that I am enabled to convey to you my sincere thanks for the splendid efforts put forth which brought about my election for Mayor on Monday.

I desire to emphasize my appreciation of the active support which worked so enthusiastically and faithfully for my election. I speak from my own personal knowledge when I say that no municipal election in my experience ever evoked better workers or more enthusiastic supporters.

In thus testifying to the zealous and effective services rendered in my behalf, I feel that I cannot adequately express my gratitude for such a splendid bestowal of your trust and confidence. The voluntary support which I received from all denominations, societies, parties and interests—the like of which has never before occurred in this city—is the strongest testimony of your respect and esteem.

I would be untrue to myself and to all of my best interests, as well as yours, if any act of mine should ever prove unworthy of your confidence—a confidence, may I hope, the result of which may be of more far-reaching importance than can be at present imagined, in assisting in harmonizing not only the civic welfare of Peterborough, but of our whole, nationality. May it be a herald of some of those blessings of a united Empire which inspired the hope:

"When man to man the warl' ower, Shall brithers be for a' that."

And so, service has come into its own. He who best serves, best succeeds. It is the inimitable law of compensation. May I be permitted to take this view of your verdict—that it is the public bestowal of your highest idea of compensation for my past six years' service on behalf of our ambitious City.

Again thanking you for your splendid New Year's gift.

I remain, your humble servant,

JOS. J. DUFFUS

Ex-Alderman Green's Card Of Thanks

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—According to the election returns for Mayor from the different polling sub-divisions in the City yesterday, a majority of 167 has been recorded in favour of Mr. Duffus, thanks to his running mate, who was injveigled into the contest to split my vote.

The total number of electoral votes in the City is about 5,800. Of this number only 3,126 recorded their votes, showing that less than two-thirds of the electors availed themselves of their franchise. Of the total number of votes polled (3176) I received 1,067 votes — only 167 less votes than Mr. Duffus. The wonder is that with my real opponent and his running mate to contend against, my vote was so large; and I leave the solution of the question to you: "What would have been the result if only two candidates had been in the field?"

It has been one of the pleasing features of the campaign for me to see the best elements of both the Liberal and Conservative parties working hand in hand for my election. This one fact will be a pleasing reminiscence to me in the future. So that, altogether, I can afford to be a good loser.

And now, Ladies and Gentlemen, what if this contest has been adverse to me? I have no cause to be discouraged or embarrassed. It has been valuable experience to me, and will not be lost. Truth and fair-dealing has been on my side, and I am under no stigma of misrepresentations or dishonour.

You will, therefore, accept my heartfelt thanks for the splendid clean election which you have helped to put up in my behalf. I extend to all my supporters my warmest appreciation of the gallant fight against such odds. I desire to convey to my real opponent my congratulations on his election to the Mayor's chair, and hope for him clear sailing in his new field of civic usefulness.

Respectfully yours,

G. WALTER GREEN

Mr. Galbraith's Thanks

To the Electors of the West Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire to express my appreciation of the splendid support that was given me in the election for alderman for the West Ward.

Believe me, I will strive to serve you to the best of my ability, and make every effort to justify the confidence reposed in me.

Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM GALBRAITH.

W. C. Austin's Thanks

I wish to thank my nominators and all those friends who supported me as candidate for Alderman in the West Ward, yesterday. La Grippe, on Wednesday and Thursday, prevented my canvassing; otherwise the results might have been different.

Respectfully yours,

W. C. AUSTIN.

Wm. Langford's Thanks

To the Electors of the North Ward.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I wish to thank all those who by their votes and otherwise helped to re-elect me yesterday by such a handsome majority. Hoping all may enjoy a happy and prosperous year, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

WM. LANGFORD, JR.

Mr. Sturgeon's Thanks

To the Ladies and Gentlemen of the North Ward.

I wish to take this opportunity of thanking all my supporters and friends who helped me so materially in the recent campaign, although not elected. I trust it will be different next year.

Wishing you all a very prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours truly,

R. G. STURGEON.

G. H. Duncan's Thanks

To the Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I take this means of extending to all who by their votes or otherwise, again elected me to the City Council.

I will do all in my power to further the best interests of the city.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE H. DUNCAN.

Dr. Neal's Thanks

Board of Education.

To the Ratepayers of Peterborough:

Permit me to convey to you my personal appreciation of the confidence reposed in me by electing me for the first time, by an overwhelming majority; one of your representatives on the Board of Education. I thank, particularly, the ladies, who did such good work in my behalf.

Yours truly,

F. C. NEAL.

W. H. Hill's Thanks

Mr. W. H. Hill desires to extend his most hearty thanks to his friends and supporters one and all who so kindly assisted, by their votes and influence, in re-electing him to the Board of Education. His election is all the more gratifying on account of the misrepresentations to which he was subjected, notwithstanding the fact that he had faithfully and continuously discharged his duties as a trustee for over 27 years.

John McIntosh's Thanks

To the Electors of North Monaghan:

I take this opportunity of thanking the ladies and gentlemen, electors of the Township, for the support they gave me in yesterday's elections. Again wishing them a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

JOHN McINTOSH,
Reeve.

A. J. Jobe's Thanks

To the Electors of the Township of Smith.

I wish to convey my thanks to the ratepayers who so loyally gave me their support at the election for Deputy Reeve of the Township. Although the returns have shown a majority against me I feel that my friends realized the value of my services to the Township during the past three years.

Respectfully,

A. J. JOBE.

Electric Intermediates Are Out--- Defaulted to Cobourg Last Night

Certificates Refused to Several of the Players and They Hadn't Enough Men on Hand at Cobourg Last Night to Play a Game.

PIN FAITH ON JUNIORS

The Electrics intermediate O. H. A. team is out of the running without playing a game. At the meeting of the O.H.A. sub-committee yesterday morning certificated were refused for R. Montgomery, W. J. Tobin and L. Baillie. Jerry Coughlin was declared eligible to play for Peterborough, but the rejection of the others left the Electrics with only five men at Cobourg and the result was they had to default last night's game with the Cobourg St. Michaels and are thus automatically out of the group.

The catastrophe is to be regretted but scarcely to be wondered at. The O.H.A. sub-committee could hardly adopt any other course under the circumstances and the action of some of the players in question after the meeting of the committee only substantiates the wisdom of the Hockey Association in the stand they took on the matter. It is but simple justice to the officers of the Electric Hockey Club to point out that they can in no way be responsible for the mix-up. They took hold of the hockey situation only a few weeks ago and had nothing whatever to do with any players who came to Peterborough from outside. The action of the O.H.A. will clear the air and will make it plain that the best interests of the game are served by a home-brew team, although it may be whispered that there are a number of other places in the O.H.A. who should learn the same lesson.

In the junior club on which the Electrics will pin their faith and for whose support they ask assistance of the fans, they have a genuine home-brew aggregation which deserves patronage. The youngsters have a fast, clever team, and their victory over the Campbellford intermediates on the latter's own ice, under conditions that entirely favoured the Campbellford squad, shows that the Electric kids are game as well as clever. They play their first O.H.A. game here a week from to-morrow night with the fast Lindsay juniors, and as this is the first O.H.A. game of the season the youngsters should be encouraged with a big house.

It is likely that Jackson, Evans and other Electric intermediates may cast in their lot with the 93rd Battalion intermediates. They are eligible to play with the 93rd whether they enlist or not, while Tobin, Montgomery and the others would be eligible to play if they enlist in the Peterborough Battalion.

Problems Before Germans' Campaign Against Egypt.—Some idea of the difficulties in the way of a German invasion of Egypt is given by the map of the last and longest stage of the necessary railway connections. All munitions must come first to Constantinople over the newly re-opened Oriental railway from which it would be transhipped across the Bosphorus and then transported over 100 miles of single track railway, sixty miles of narrow gauge railway and 160 miles of roads. All material must be transhipped six times during the journey from terminals within reach of aeroplane raids from the sea and that at Tarsus within range of bombardment from warships. Then 300 miles of desert intervenes between it and the Suez. The location marked by "X" shows where the Persia and the Glengyle were recently torpedoed. Two Japanese ships were also lost near this point.

93rd Battalion Team To Play The Local Juniors

Peterborough fans will get an opportunity to size up the two local O.H.A. teams on Thursday night of this week when the 93rd Battalion Intermediates will clash with the Electric Junior O.H.A. team. The game is called for 8 o'clock sharp, and the public will be given an opportunity of skating afterwards. The full Band of the 93rd Battalion will be in attendance, and a big evening's sport is promised. It will be the first appearance of the soldier team, and as they have several dark horses available, the public will be on hand to look them over. The fans are also anxious to get a glimpse of the Peterborough Juniors, who showed their class on Saturday by winning away from home game with the Campbellford Intermediates. The lads in khaki will have a big following from among their comrades at the Armouries, and will make things lively with their band and rooters. On the other hand the Peterborough youngsters will not lack for supporters, and the game promises to be an interesting clash.

Winter Sports Start At Quebec

Toboggan Slides Higher Than Ever And a New Open Air Skating Rink

QUEBEC, Jan. 3.—With a toboggan slide higher than ever and a new open air skating rink on Dufferin Terrace, Quebec has started her winter sports in earnest. It is doubtful whether any previous winter season saw so many American visitors as have registered at the Chateau or have announced their intention of coming in January. Boston, New York and Philadelphia are sending large contingents, one Philadelphia millionaire alone having reserved 12 rooms, while there are quite a few from Chicago and the middle west. The officers from the 33rd took part in the New Year's eve dance so that the old grandfather clock which commanded the supper room, faced a lively scene, yet the remembrance of the war kept a restraining influence over the festivities and made impossible the thought of any boisterous revelry. One New Yorker expressed his sympathy by handing over $100 to the patriotic fund and said he would collect twenty more such subscriptions from his friends in Wall street on his return. On the stroke of midnight announcing the New Year, Father time emerged from the grandfather clock and was followed by a fairy attended by a train of six pretty little children who threw roses at the delighted guests. Many prominent leaders in Quebec society attended the New Year's dinner. The visitors at the Chateau over the New Year included the following: Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Fox, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Nedle, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cone, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jacob, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Gowan, New Jersey; Mr. and Mrs. Brock, Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald, Mr. Nurnberg, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Holder, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Mullen, Lynn, Mass.; Miss E. H. Brayton, Miss M. M. Stewart, Miss M. M. Winslow, Mr. J. D. Holand, Fall River, Mass; Mrs. G. A. Fraser and Miss Fraser, Philadelphia; Mr. H. J. Loomis, Gloversville; Mr and Miss Zellers, Miss Bennett, Mr. Herchl, Mr. Spoor, Chicago; Mr. Chas. C. McIntyre, Miss McIntyre and Miss Helen McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. G. Foster and party, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. H. Joseph, Miss Marguerite Joseph, Mr. R. J. Henoker, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lambe, Dr. J. B. Houro, Mr. J. B. Moriarity, Mr. A. J. Dawers, Montreal, Sir Wm. and Lady Price.

BLACKBURN ROVERS IN THE TRENCHES

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The famous Blackburn Rovers soccer club, which won the championship of the English league in the 1913-1914 season with a forward line which cost them $50,000, have set a splendid example among the football clubs in England. Their entire team has joined the colours. Several members enlisted some time ago, and the remainder, including Bob Crompton, the veteran; Bradshaw, Latheron and Suttle, took the step under Lord Derby's scheme.

As a result of the first half of the English soccer season, which ended last Monday, the league clubs of the Northern and Midland section have handed over to the charity funds more than $10,000. This sum represents a percentage deducted from the gate receipts.

HOCKEY

The Toronto Globe says: Lon Marsh had just seated himself comfortably in the 5 o'clock train for Lindsay yesterday afternoon, in which town he was to have refereed an O.H.A. junior game last night, when he was informed by a messenger boy, a few minutes prior to the departure of the train, that Secretary Hewitt had received a telegram stating that the game was postponed on account of lack of ice. The same thing happened on Saturday afternoon. He was slated to go to Dunnville and was seated on the train, when Secretary Hewitt located him and informed him "No ice."

The Electric Juniors will practice at Brock St. Rink to-morrow night at 7 o'clock. A full turnout of players is expected.

BOWLING

An interesting game of bowling was held on the Y.M.C.A. alley on Saturday night, when the C.G.E. team took two out of three from T. E. Pratt's team. Following was the score:

Early	146	142	135—423
Jardine	120	150	158—428
Langley	154	146	145—449
Bishop	168	177	171—516
	588	615	609—1812
			151
Cannift	125	173	137—435
Galley	108	233	—341
Langley			110—110
Adams	147	148	137—432
Pratt	132	92	157—381
	512	646	541—1699
			141.5

The grip ball will be at the Y.M.C.A. to-night and to-morrow. Bowlers in the different teams may have a chance to get a ball suitable for their grip by calling and trying it.

JUNIOR CHURCH LEAGUE HOCKEY

There will be a meeting of the Junior Church League to-morrow evening in the boys' parlour of the Y.M.C.A. to organize for this season, also to settle accounts of last year, especially one with the Brock street rink, for which the following churches must send representatives: Trinity (Charlotte street), Knox and All Saints'. The following are the rules of the league:

1. No hockey player is eligible to play who is seventeen years old on or before December 1, 1915.
2. Each player must supply a birth certificate from his parents. If any doubt shall arise, this shall be submitted to the officers and the members of the executive that they may investigate further.
3. Every player must have belonged to some organization in connection with the church since December 1, 1915.
4. Each team must submit a list of players belonging to that team, to the executive before the first league game. The number in this list is not to exceed twelve.
5. Three members of the executive form a committee to appoint a referee for each game. The referee must not in any way be connected with either of the participating teams.
7. Any club protesting a player must supply proof to the executive within 48 hours of the time the protest is submitted.
8. The game is to consist of two twenty minutes halves.
9. If at the end of the second half of the game the score is tied—if it is possible to secure the rink—the teams will play five minutes each way overtime.
10. If at the time scheduled for the game to take place one of the participating teams has not its seven men on the ice, the other team shall drop enough men to even up, and as the men arrive on the ice the other team shall put men on, until each has seven men on the ice.
11. The officers of the league are President, Vice-President and Secretary-Treasurer and these, together with two representatives from each team, form the executive.
12. Participating teams shall share the expense of using the ice for the game equally.
13. In case of only six teams being in the league, there shall be but one group.
14. Each participating team shall supply the referee with a puck before the game.
15. All O.H.A., City League and Senior Church League (if any) players are debarred from the league after playing more than one game in the above mentioned leagues.

Hugh Austin, Sec-Treas.

When He Married.— Robert Lowe, the great English Commoner, was exceedingly sarcastic and frequently ungallant. Upon the occasion of a well-known wedding he began to descant on the absurdities of the marriage service. "When I married," he said, "all the worldly goods with which I endowed my wife might have been carried in a bundle over my shoulder." "Ah! but Robert," interposed Mrs. Lowe, "there was your great intellect." "Well, I certainly did not endow you with that, dear," was the rejoinder.

Proof That India's Millions Are Loyal, By Bishop of Lucknow

Frank W. Warne, Methodist Episcopal Bishop to India, with headquarters at Lucknow, writing regarding the loyalty of the people of India, says:

"The tremendous significance of the opening keynote statement in the address of Sir Satyendra Sinhha, that "millions in India are awaiting to serve," and his statement of "admiration for the self-imposed burden England was bearing in the struggle for liberty and freedom, and pride that India had proven herself not a whit behind the rest of the empire in the assistance given the mother country," I fear is not appreciated by the American public.

The Indian National Congress is the greatest purely Indian organization in the Indian Empire. It is composed of thousands of elected delegates from all over India, who are the leaders of Indian thought, and was organized in 1885, and has met every year since. In this congress, more definitely than anywhere else, there is a focusing of the national advanced liberal thought. The discussions are all conducted in English, because it is the only language in which representatives of all sections and all races and languages of India can confer together and conduct national business. That which is spoken from a thousand scattered platforms during the year is in the congress gathered up and made official. The fundamental principles of this organization are:

First, the fusion into one national whole of all the different and discordant elements that constitute the population of India.

Second, the gradual regeneration along all lines, mental, moral, social, and political, of the nation thus evolved; and,

Third, the consolidation of union between England and India by securing the modification of such of the conditions as may be unjust or injurious to the latter country.

In this time of war the utterance of such a congress are of superlative interest. In its deliberations India's feelings toward her rulers, from the purely Indian standpoint, are courageously expressed. A year ago, after the war had been going on for a number of months, this national congress passed the following resolution:

The congress desires to convey to his Majesty the King-Emperor and the people of England its profound devotion to the throne, its unswerving allegiance to the British, and its firm resolve to stand by the Empire at all hazards and at all costs.

A year ago it further stated: "England could have put to-day on the battlefields of Europe not seventy thousand Indian soldiers, but a wall of men."

Now the war has raged for another year and India's loyalty evidently is unshaken. One of the most popular moves that the British Government has made was to put the Indian soldier in France, side by side with other representatives of the British Empire. The time was when India said, "We are a conquered people," but after that India said, "We are no longer conquered people, we are part of the British Empire. Our soldiers are side by side on the battlefield with the English the Scotch, the Canadians, the Australians; we are one people and part of the empire."

Just before leaving India I was up in the mountains, and a friend of mine was explaining on a map the location of Germany, the seas, and the general situation of the war, and a representative villager came in to see and hear, and said:

"Ever since my eyes have looked upon this earth I have beheld the British as my rulers. My fathers had them before me, and I want my children and my children's children to have them as their rulers. This rule has meant peace, prosperity and safety in our villages, on our farms, to our women and children, and our cattle. We want the British to rule over us. If the Government would only accept one man from every family in the hills, we would go to Europe, and we would shed our last drop of blood for our rulers. We cannot all go, but one from each family would mean much, and how willingly we would offer ourselves."

It is my belief that this man fairly represents the sentiment of the great middle and lower castes of the people of India, the class that Lord Curzon said he always had in his thought in all the legislation, and whom he called the "silent millions." This man, in my judgment, represents over 300,000,000 of India's people. They are the backbone of the country, and are loyal, and herein is Britain's strength in India."

TORONTO VOTES FOR ANNUAL ELECTIONS FOR B. OF E.

On New Year's Day the electors of Toronto voted to return to Annual Elections for members of the Board of Education and in view of the fact that Peterborough elects its members of the Board of Education for a two year term the following from the Toronto Star on the situation in Toronto is interesting, it says:

"The vote on Saturday shows that public opinion strongly favors the annual election of the Board of Education.

Next year we may expect an election, accompanied by a thorough public discussion, in all parts of the city, of school affairs.

The City council possesses no power of control over the amount of taxes which the board expends nor over the manner in which it is spent.

Such being the fact, would it not be a prudent measure to require that the school tax be levied by means of a separate tax bill in a distinctive color, so that each ratepayer will have this reminder of the importance that attaches to the election of members of the Board of Education? In time the fact might come to be generally understood that the school trustee needs to be, not only a man with some grasp of educational questions but as good a business man as the alderman, as well."

Why so?—"Oh, yes, we are engaged to be married next Spring. But I fear she has not that utter confidence in me that comes with perfect love." "Why so?" "Well, when a fellow looks back—as a fellow in love naturally will, you know—and sees her testing the diamond in her engagement ring on the window-pane, don't you think he has good cause to feel a bit dubious."

Dr. Johnston, veterinary surgeon, has been called to Belleville in the interests of the Grank Trunk rai way in an action for damages brought against the G.T.R. by a number of citizens who complain that seepage from the railway's round house has poisoned the water and affected the health of their live stock.

WANTS NEW COMMITTEE ABOLISHED

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M. P. Has Designs on Newly Formed National Liberal Committee

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., for West Peterborough, and now in the uniform of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, has designs upon the newly formed National Liberal Committee. Captain Burnham contends that the committee is contrary to the spirit of the British constitution, and undemocratic in its aims and objects, and he desires that the Minister of Justice take steps to abolish it. Captain Burnham has a resolution to the effect ready for the order paper of the coming session.

WEDDING BELLS

MONTGOMERY—CRISP.
TORONTO, Jan. 3.—A quiet wedding was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Bedford, in the Davenport Methodist Church, Dec. 29th. The contracting parties were Gladys Irene, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Crisp, of 81 Hounslow Heath road, and A. Gordon Montgomery, son of Mrs. N. A. Decks, of 114 Nairn avenue, Toronto. The bride was given away by her father, she wore a blue serge tailored suit, with black hat, trimmed with pink feathers, and carried a bouquet of lily of the valley, and white roses. The groom's only sister, Eva, acted as bridesmaid. Mr. Gordon Crisp, only brother of the bride, acted as groomsman. The house was decorated with Christmas greenery, and white roses. Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery left on the 9 p.m. C.P.R. train for Peterborough, where they will reside for the present.

OBITUARY

R. P. ELMHIRST.
The death occurred at the Nicholls Hospital on Saturday of Richard Percival Elmhirst, aged 27 years and 2 months. He was the son of Mr. Richard Elmhirst, of Villiers, Otonabee. The funeral will be held on Wednesday at 2 p.m., from the residence of his father. Death resulted from typhoid after an illness of two weeks.

MR. ALEX. TROTTER.
The death occurred this morning at 9.30 of a well known citizen in the person of Mr. Alexander ("Sandy") Trotter, at his late residence, Water street north. The deceased was 63 years of age, and has been a resident of Peterborough for many years. He has been in poor health for some weeks. He was a man of robust physique and was a conspicuous figure on the city streets by reason of his unusual height.

His wife, four sons and two daughters are left to mourn his loss. The sons are Messrs. David in New Ontario; William, in Buffalo, N.Y.; and Jack and Alex., at home. The daughters are Mrs. John Gerrett, residing in the northern part of the county, and Miss Margaret at home.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made but will be announced later.

JAMES JOHNSTON.
Last evening, a well-known resident passed away in the person of James Johnston. Death occurred at the home of the deceased, Brown street, after an illness extending over several years. He was in his fifty-second year.

Besides a wife, deceased leaves two daughters, namely, Mrs. Victor Morten, Hiawatha, and Irene, at home. Also the following brothers: Richard of the North West, Roland of Saskatchewan, William of Hope Township Samuel on the homestead, Dr. J. N. Johnston of Port Hope, and Dr. Thos Johnston of Peterborough. Two sisters also survive. They are, namely Mrs. W. H. Hutchinson of Fraserville and Mrs. Percy Donaldson of Keene. Mrs. James Johnston, mother of the deceased, resides with Mrs. Hutchinson of Fraserville.

The funeral will take place at two o'clock on Thursday from the late residence of the deceased. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

INDIAN PRINCE'S SUITE ON THE LINER PERSIA

Famous Jewels Reported Lost When P. & O. Liner was Sunk by Sub.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The suite of his Royal Highness Jagatjit Singh, Maharajah of Kapurthala, were passengers on the steamship Persia, which has been sunk on its way to Bombay. A despatch from Cairo states that the Maharajah's famous jewels were lost with the ship, but gives no further indication of the fate of the members of his party.

The Maharajah was waiting at Port Said to join the ship and continue his journey to India accompanied by his suite. It is assumed that his wife, who was formerly Anita Delgado, a Spanish dancing girl, was waiting with him at Port Said, and that Miss Cullen was with them.

His Royal Highness is having an exciting trip back to India. When he sailed from New York on the steamship Rotterdam last August the greatest secrecy was observed, and not until the Rotterdam arrived at Falmouth was it made known that he was on board. He feared that on account of his great wealth and the aid which he had lent to the British cause the Germans would make a special effort to capture him or sink his ship. A British cruiser met the Rotterdam off Falmouth and convoyed it through the mine field.

Very Different.—A gentleman tarvelling on the Great Northern Railway, having delivered his luggage to the care of a porter, made himself comfortable in the corner of a carriage. The porter came to the carriage for the "reward of merit." "Well," said the passenger, "I see by the letter 'G.N.R.' on your cap that Gratuities are Never Received." "A little mistake, sir," replied the porter, "it should me, Gratuities Never Refused."

HIRED MAN CONFESSES

CYPRESS RIVER, Man., January 4.—Morbo Mastiff, a Belgian farmer living southwest of Cypress River, was murdered on Saturday night and his hired man is in custody, having admitted doing the shooting. The hired man is known as Bob, but his full name is unknown. He is believed to have been drinking, and took a keg of beer home with him on Saturday evening. When he arrived his employer was asleep, and the hired man, without any preliminaries, fired a shot from a shotgun into his body, killing him instantly.

A girl was asked to explain why men never kiss each other, while women do. She replied—"Men have something better to kiss; women haven't."

"HOUSE BASED UPON WOMAN"

"A house is not based upon the ground, but upon woman," is an old Montenegro proverb. To her falls the hard work of the household. They use the sickle, tend the flocks, as well as the spinning wheel, and have the vitality and health to enjoy it.

American women should take more care to preserve health and vitality by avoiding nervous, run-down conditions, and for this purpose our local druggists, McDermid and Jury, and E. L. Payne, have a most valuable combination of the three oldest tonics known in Vinol. If you are weak, run-down, over-worked, just try it.

FOUR GIRLS ARE DECORATED FOR HEROIC CONDUCT

Carried Food Through the Enemy's Lines to Surrounded Soldiers

VERTUS, France, Jan. 5.—5:55 p. m.—Four young sisters have been decorated with the cross of war in the presence of a regiment of artillery. They were cited in an order of the day of the —— division in the following terms:

"Marie, Helene, Camille and Madeleine Vatel, at the peril of life in a region occupied by the Germans, patriotically revictualled, in a thick of the woods from the 8th to the 12th of September, 1914, seven French soldiers who were then surrounded by the enemy at Fere Champenoise and who, thanks to their care, were able to find their regiment after the German retirement."

The order was read to the sisters and the medals pinned on them, after which the regiment filed past them, the crowd applauding the sisters.

CZERNOWITZ REPORTED RETAKEN BY THE RUSSIANS

Riots Owing to Food Shortage Are Reported in Athens

Russian Drive Extends Over a 225 Mile Front Foe Suffers Heavily

Petrograd Officially Reports a Continuous Advance in Bukowina Territory--Russians Advance 17 Miles

PETROGRAD, Jan. 4.¾By holding the Teutonic forces on the line of Vladimir-Colynski, on the Galician frontier, while fortifying and pressing forward at some points, the Russians have checked the German attempt to advance from the direction of Kolki and improve their position along the Kovel Railway eastward towards Sarny. North of Czartorysk the Russians drove the Germans back and occupied the town of Khriasi.

The very fact that the Russians are advancing along the Kovel-Rovno railway is held by military men to be of great importance, since it indicates a concentration with a view of taking Kovel, an important point of communication between the German and Austrian front. In order to relieve the pressure on the Kovel-Sarny line, the Teutons counter-attacked southwest of Kolki, but without result.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE SEVENTEEN MILES.

On the Galician front, it is stated in reports received in Petrograd, between the rivers Sereth and Strypa, before which the Russian troops had taken up positions, the Muscovites apparently have commenced an offensive and advanced as far as the left bank of the Strypa, between Bucsacz and Sokolow. The region on the left bank of the Strypa is still held against serious attempts of the Austrians to advance. The greatest activity appears now along the Strypa on both sides of Bucsacz. Here the Russians have driven the opposing forces back from 15 to 17 miles from their positions. It is stated that the Russians continue to hold and to fortify the newly acquired territory, although the battle is still progressing.

MAY SECURE CZERNOWITZ.

The capture of the heights north of Czernowitz, where nearly 900 prisoners were taken, is held by military experts here to be of special importance. They predict that is probably will result in forcing the evacuation of Czernowitz by the Teutonic allies, giving the Russians a strong foothold in the centre of Bukowina, and control of the railways into Roumania.

ON TWO HUNDRED TWENTY-FIVE-MILE FRONT.

The Dussky Invalide prints the following regarding the situation: "The Russian offensive on the long front of 225 miles, from Czartorysk to the Roumanian frontier, started when our troops crossed to the left bank of the Styr, taking Khriask, at the foot of the Meddeezhski heights. The Austrians are making every effort to retake these heights, which command the Styr. North of Olka and at Silno our troops advanced and fortified the occupied region of Uscieczko, ten miles north of Zale Szcrky, and forced the Austrians to the right bank of the Dniester."

GREECE WARNED THAT TEUTONS WILL ATTACK GRECIAN MACEDONIA

If the Allies Do Not Leave Salonika —Russian Offensive Continuing

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 5.—The Kaiser had an operation on his larnyx and may lose his voice.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Greece has been warned if the allies do not leave Saloniki, Teutonic forces will attack Grecian Macedonia.

SALONIKA, Jan. 5.—The allies have offered fifty thousand francs reward for the capture of a submarine in the Aegean Sea.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The Russian offensive is continuing all along the line, but little ground has been lost by the Germans.

SALONIKA, Jan. 5.—Aged King Peter has arrived here to reorganize the Serbian army.

LONDON, Jan. 5.— Alexandria despatches say the steamer Geelong, supposed to have been sunk, has arrived there safely.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The Carnegie foundation has devoted one hundred thousand dollars towards the expenses of the Pan-American congress for the promotion of peace."

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 5.—German despatches say Admiral Von Tirpitz conferred with the Kaiser yesterday in regard to Mediterranean submarines.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—Ambassador Gerard of the United States asked the German government to ascertain the nationality of the sub which sank the Persia.

Asked Him to Sign It.— Sir John Struthers, in his annual report for secondary education in Scotland, quotes the following "howler" from a scholar's history paper: "When the South Sea Bubble was drawn up, in the reign of Charles, the men placed it on the table, and, sending for Cromwell, asked him to sign it. Cromwell, who he saw the document, put on a stern look, and, swing his hand in the air, with a loud voice shouted, 'Take away that bauble.'" are so often subject to headache—are languid, pale and nervous—because their blood is thin or insufficient. They are not really sick and hesitate to complain, but they lack that ambition and vivacity which is their birthright. They do not need drugs—but do need the tonic and nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that makes richer blood, fills hollow cheeks, suppresses nervousness and establishes strength. Nourishment alone makes blood and Scott's Emulsion is the essence of concentrated nourishment, free from wines or opiates.

OUR YOUNG WOMEN

Offensive Movement By Allies Will Meet Defeat Says Hungarian Official

Surmises By Julius Andrassy, Hungarian Parliamentary Leader--Does Not Expect an Early Peace

BUDAPEST, Jan 1 (delayed)—A great offensive movement by the Allies on all fronts is expected by Hungarian officials this spring. They are certain it will meet with defeat. "The Allies fail to take into account our military positions," Count Julius Andrassy, Hungarian Parliamentary leader, declared to-day. "We are so situated now that we can help each other. We can concentrate—something the enemy cannot do. This, I believe, makes our victory certain, and it overbalances the resources of our opponents. The situation cannot be changed by an Entente offensive this spring."

Contrary to the general opinion in Berlin, Hungarian officials believe there will be no early peace.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—All United States mail to and from Great Britain is to be censored hereafter.

KAISER MAY NEED A SILVER PLATE TO RELIEVE PALATE

PARIS, Jan. 5.—Press despatches from Switzerland and Italy continue to affirm that the illness of Emperor William is serious. It is stated that he was operated on last Wednesday successfully, but the nature of the operation is not specified.

It is stated that the Emperor is suffering from a deep seated affection of which the cutaneous eruption is but an incidental symptom and that the malady is complicated by the reappearance of his old throat trouble, which has extended to the mouth. It is even asserted that it will be necessary to provide him with an artificial palate made of silver.

The Norwegian Consul at Salonika Is Arrested

LONDON, Jan. 5—Reuter's Athens correspondent says the Norwegian Consul at Salonica was arrested at the time the Austrian, German, Bulgarian and Turkish Consuls were taken into custody on the order of the French commander, General Sarrail.

The arrest of the Norwegian official is said to have resulted from the discovery at the Austrian and German Consulates of documents implicating him in connection with espionage. The Greek Government, the message says, has protested against his detention, as well as against the arrest of Greeks suspected of espionage.

GREEK PARLIAMENT CALLED JAN. 17

PARIS, Jan. 5.—A despatch to the Havas agency from Athens says:

"It is announced that the Chamber of Deputies has been convoked for January 17, a week earlier than previously had been intended. King Constantine himself will open the session.

"The Greek Government through the Prefect of Salonica has sent an address of welcome to King Peter of Serbia. The newspapers emphasize the influence that the sojourn of the Serbian King is likely to have on the relations of Greece with the Entente Powers. All the newspapers say the situation between the Entente Allies and Greece is obviously improving."

He'd Had Some.—"Were you ever in a danger zone, dad?" asked Sonny, seeking information to help him to understand the war reports. "Yes, my son, many times," replied the father with a sigh. "Where were they?" "Mostly between the foot of the stairs and my bedroom door, and after twelve o'clock at night." Just then mamma shied a book at papa's head and he beat a hasty retreat.

ITALY SHOCKED AT THE SINKING OF THE PERSIA

ROME, Jan 5.—The sinking of the Persia has made a profound impression in Italy, which is reflected in the press.

"This new crime is a grievous offence against civilization," says the Giornale d'Italia. "especially as it comes almost at the time of the Austrian note to America, with its profession of humanitarian principles."

The Tribuna recalls the fact that during the negotiations with the United States concerning the Lusitania Germans sank the Arabic, just as now, with the Austro-American exchanges over the Ancona in progress, the Persia has been destroyed.

The Idea Nazionale says that, beginning with the Luitania and ending with the Persia, more than two thousand unarmed persons, including women, children and aged and ill persons, have ben sacrificed.

Potash, Perlmutter and Others

By MONTAGUE GLASS

II.—A CLOAK AND SUIT COMEDY

[Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.]

"MAWRUSS, I don't like the looks of Mengel Bros. & Gunst," said Abe Potash to his partner, Morris Perlmutter.

"Why not?" Morris asked.

"Because I seen Ike Mengel in front of the Bingler House this morning, and I asked him how is business. He smiles and says, 'Thank Gawd!' Then he says he would like to duplicate on them forty-twenty-twos and double up on sixteens, seventeens and eighteens."

"That's bad," Morris commented.

"I should say so," Abe added. "Why, them forty-twenty-twos is stickers, as you know, Mawruss, what trouble we had to sell 'em, and if he gets rid of that last order already so quick, Mawruss, he done it by auction houses. Ain't it?"

Morris nodded gloomily, and Abe walked back to the office in the rear of his commodious salesroom.

"Miss Cohen," he said to the bookkeeper, "you should please write to Mengel Bros. & Gunst: 'Gentlemen, we inclose you statement of your account, which, as you are aware, is past due, and we must say we are surprised we should not hear from you. Please send us check at once, as we pay our bills prompt on the day, and we are obliged to you to do the same. Yours truly.'"

He wiped away a slight moisture from his forehead, for when Abe dictated correspondence he emphasized his words with appropriate gestures, which, in the case of dunning letters were apt to assume an especial vehemence.

"That ought to fetch 'em," he said, and, carefully selecting a slightly damaged cigar from the E to J customers' first and second credit box, he strode into the salesroom puffing great clouds of indignant smoke.

Morris Perlmutter was making up his line of samples for an impending western trip.

"Well, Abe, what are you going to do about Mengel Bros. & Gunst?" he asked.

"I wrote 'em a letter," Abe replied—"a dirty letter."

"A letter!" cried Morris. "What good's a letter? Bite 'em, Abe. That's all. We can't do no more with them people. They're just thieves, Abe. You had no business to sell 'em anyway."

"I wrote 'em a letter," Abe replied—"a dirty letter."

"Me sell 'em!" Abe exclaimed. "I'm surprised to hear you, that you should talk that way, Mawruss. Ain't I always told you, Mawruss, you shouldn't sell 'em no more goods? From the first I said it, 'Mengel Bros. & Gunst ain't worth the wrapping paper to sell 'em a C. O. D. shipment for $2.' Miss Cohen should be a witness that if I say it once I say it a hundred times, 'For a merchant to do business with Mengel Bros. & Gunst is like taking your life in your hands.' Don't I know Ike Mengel from old times yet when he was with Krieger Bros.? A bad egg, Mawruss—a loafer and a gambler. His father before him"—

Here the conversation was interrupted by the entrance of Philip Unterberg, a friendly competitor of Potash & Perlmutter in the cloak and suit trade.

"Good morning, Mr. Unterberg," Abe broke off. He shook hands warmly with the newcomer. "I know what you want before you open your mouth, Mawruss, tell Henry to bring over them forty-twenty-twos. That's a popular line, Mr. Unterberg, and I don't wonder you can't make 'em up quick enough. They're in big demand for the out of town trade, ain't it, Mawruss, and we're always glad to help out our neighbors."

Mr. Unterberg's breath, which had been taken away by Abe's sudden onslaught, came back at this juncture, and he made haste to disclaim the imputed reason for his visit.

"I don't know the numbers of your stock," he said, "but if you mean them striped tourist coats, our factory ain't exactly working night and day on 'em, y' understand. The fact is," he concluded, "I ain't come to buy goods at all."

"No?" Abe commented coldly.

"I come," he said in a burst of confidence, "to ask you a friendly advice."

"Anything what me and Mawruss can do," said Abe, "you can depend on us."

"Well," Mr. Unterberg went on, "the fact is, we got an order this morning from Mengel Bros. & Gunst—not a big order, y' understand, but only a thousand dollars. Now, I know it that Mengel Bros. & Gunst is all right, y' understand, but naturally when a man does business with comparatively strangers, why, he"—

"Sure," Abe broke in, "I don't blame you a bit. Of course I don't want you to tell this all around."

"Sure not," Unterberg protested.

"But Mengel Bros. & Gunst," Abe continues, with a wicked gleam in his eye, "while they ain't exactly millionaires nor nothing like that, are good bright boys. Ike Mengel—I know him twenty years already—ain't never done nobody for a cent, so far what I hear, and I consider 'em that whatever you sell 'em you needn't be afraid."

"I'm much obliged to you," Unterberg declared, beaming. "Of course I ain't scared nor nothing, but so long as I was passing by I thought I'd just drop in and ask your advice what you think in the matter."

"You're welcome," Abe replied, and Mr. Unterberg, with a nod to Morris, left the store.

"Dat ain't no lie, either, what I tell him," Abe apologized. "Mengel Bros. & Gunst ain't no millionaires, believe me, but they are good bright boys—too bright for you, Mawruss. Ike Mengel ain't never done nobody for a cent. That ain't saying nothing about a thousand dollars. As for Unterberg being afraid, he needn't be. Mawruss—he needn't be a bit afraid that he'll ever see the color of their money. No, siree, Mawruss, if any one says Mengel Bros. & Gunst to me, Mawruss, I hear a solve like a petition in bankruptcy."

"But the way I understand it," said Perlmutter, "you gave 'em a good send off. Unterberg thinks it's a recommendation, that Mengel Bros. & Gunst is good for a thousand."

"Does he?" Abe retorted. "All right, let him think so and ship 'em the order at once. We may be suckers, Mawruss, but you know what the fellow once said, Mawruss. Suckers likes company, and don't you forget it."

For ten minutes Abe smoked in silence, and then he rose and re-entered the office.

"Miss Cohen," he said to the bookkeeper, "don't you send that letter, I'll go up and see Mengel Bros. & Gunst myself."

II.

Ike Mengel, the senior member of the firm of Mengel Bros. & Gunst, was adding up figures on the back of an envelope as Abe came in, and apparently found no pleasure in the operation.

"H'lo, Ike," Abe said, "what are you doing? Figuring up your overdue accounts? I think I see ours there. Five hundred and thirty-two forty-five, ain't it?"

"Is it?" said Ike. "You got a good memory, Abe."

"I got a good memory and good judgment, too, Ike. When a merchant like Philip Unterberg says to me, as he did say to me today, 'What do you think of Mengel Bros. & Gunst? Shall I ship 'em a thousand dollars, Abe? Are they prompt pay?' I say, 'Well, Mr. Unterberg, I'd like to have a little time to look at my books. I got so many customers, Mr. Unterberg, I can't tell you exactly how each of them is prompt or not. But if you come around tomorrow, Mr. Unterberg, then I let you know.' That's the kind of man I am, Ike; I tell 'em straight what I think. Now, supposing you give me a check right away for $532.45, and supposing Unterberg asks me tomorrow what I advise, I can say, from the heart, Ike, 'Mr. Unterberg, Mengel Bros. & Gunst always pays us in good season.' Ain't it?"

Ike Mengel sat in profound thought for a moment or two and then rose slowly to his feet.

"Miss Levison," he said to his bookkeeper, "make Potash & Perlmutter a check for five-twenty-two forty-five."

"Five-thirty-two forty-five," Abe corrected firmly.

"Excuse me," said Mengel. He waved an additional apology with his grimy, fat hand. "You are right."

Abe took the check with a smile that completely engulfed his short black mustache between his nose and his chin.

"That depends it who owes the money," Mengel replied.

"You see, Ike," he said, "it pays to have a good memory."

"That depends it who owes the money," Mengel replied sadly, and Abe left hurriedly to certify the check before returning to his office.

III.

Here it is pertinent to record two facts in their chronological order. On the 15th Philip Unterberg shipped his goods, and on the 30th Mengel Bros. & Gunst were thrown into involuntary bankruptcy. It is unnecessary, however, to pursue that interesting proceeding through all its stages, which culminated in a composition of 10 cents cash and 15 cents promissory notes at eight, ten and twelve months respectively.

Ten days after the confirmation of the composition Morris Perlmutter, laden with a sample case and followed by a small boy similarly burdened, passed into the salesmen's entrance of the Boston Store, Kugel & Fishblatt, proprietors. He encountered Philip Unterberg on his way out.

"Good morning, Mr. Unterberg," Morris said pleasantly.

Philip Unterberg stopped short and fixed Morris with a terrible glare. Then he turned his face to one side and spat out on the ground. "T'phooee," even as did Shimei of old.

Morris dropped his sample case and clutched Unterberg by the elbow. "What's the matter, Mr. Unterberg?" he asked. "Have we done you something?"

Unterberg choked and at length found speech.

"Done me something? A question!" he gasped. He waved his hands impotently. "Wait," he shouted—"wait; I fix him yet, that—that scoundrel—Abe Potash!"

"Mr. Unterberg, one moment," Morris protested.

THE FIGHTING IS BITTER IN EAST GALICIA

LONDON, Jan. 4—The forward Russian movement in eastern Galicia is still proceeding with great vigor, the Russians attacking in great force with the object of piercing the Austro Hungarian winter lines.

The isolated Russian advances, mentioned in Vienna reports as having been repelled, evidently refer to advance guards. Over a front of two hundred miles the recuperated and reinforced armies of the Czar are pressing the attack and already are securely established across the Styr, north of Czartoysk.

Mackensen is in command of the Austo-German forces, with his headquarters at Czernowitz, and is reported to be organizing a big counter-offensive.

A Petrograd despatch says the offensive in Volhynia and Galicia was opened by the Austrians, who utterly failed in their objectives, the Russians not only repulsing all attacks on their positions, but following up their advantage by carrying the war into the enemy's lines with a preponderance of gun-fire that astonished the Austro-German commanders.

Progress Toward Kovel.

Progress is reported in the direction of Kovel, along the two railways between Sarny and Kovel and Rovno and Kovel.

The Russians have captured the village of Khrinsk, three miles from the river. A flank attack six or seven miles to the southeast of Kolki, according to the advices, has failed to shake the solidarity of the new Russian dispositions. Russian progress is also reported north of Olyka.

Berlin, Jan. 3—The German official report says:

"Eastern front.—At various places the Russians continued, with the same lack of success as heretofore, their attacks with patrols and other small detachments of troops."

Austria Statement.

Berlin, via Wireless to Sayville), Jan. 4. — The Austro-Hungarian official communication of January 3, as received here, says:

"Bitter fighting is going on along the Bessarabian front. The enemy made the utmost efforts to break the Austro-Hungarian front in the Toporouts district, which all failed. Three officers and 850 soldiers were made prisoners.

"Isolated Russian advances on the Sereth, at the mouth of the lower Stripa, in the Kormin district, and on the Styr River were repulsed."

READ THE EVENING EXAMINER

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

In Fashion Cavalier.

By Barry Preston.

The knight of the golden helmet rode briskly down the lane. His sword made a pleasant clanking in the rusty scabbard which it was never intended to fit; his eyes sparkled; his plumes waved bravely in the breeze.

Anon from sheer exuberance of spirits the knight of the golden helmet let out a wild and joyous whoop which startled the grazing cattle and set the mild eyed sheep huddling together in trembling wonder.

The general getup of the gentleman of the aureate headpiece was a trifle startling. Upon his head was a basket, the handle beneath his chin and its bottom (or, rather, top in its present position) decorated with the tail feathers of an incautious rooster. About his waist was a red sash stuck full of wooden dirks. From the left side of this sash half dangled, half dragged, the naval sword in the old cavalry scabbard.

A rake handle answered the purpose of a lance and bore as its pennon a fluttering three cornered piece of red flannel. Upon the knight's fat, chubby legs were fastened pieces of zinc, evidently intended for greaves. The steed he bestrode was a crooked piece of apple limb, with a bit of twine about one end of it for reins.

It is quite needless to state perhaps that the knight of the gold helmet had recently been filling his small head with certain romantic literature relating to the days of chivalry.

It is probably quite as needless to cite that, now the literature had been absorbed, he thirsted for deeds of valor.

Hence the ride down the lane, and hence the whoops. But very unfortunately it seemed to be an off day for opportunities.

"I AM THE KNIGHT OF THE GOLDEN HELMET."

The cattle gazed upon him in melancholy doubt. The sheep bunched together and sent up discordant bleats. Aside from these, the landscape gave no evidences of life.

It was a sorry world. Whatever it was you wanted you never got it, the knightly gentleman reflected sadly. One couldn't perform deeds of valor with nothing at hand but sheep and cattle. People were necessary to his plans—live, red blooded, much troubled people—languishing ladies preferred.

The world was full of 'em. There must be some about somewhere. The only way to get 'em was to find 'em. With another full throated bellow the knight of the golden helmet spurred his good apple limb steed to a yet more furious pace and sped down the shaded lane in quest of adventure.

He had just splashed through the muddy pool where the cattle drank each evening and was cantering blithely past the birches beyond when he saw a young man approaching—a young man in flannels, very tall and straight, pleasant faced, too, although just now the forehead was wrinkled in a frown and the firm jaw was set in determination. The young man was puffing vigorously at the brier pipe between his teeth, sending out great blue clouds of smoke in his wake.

The knight of the golden helmet reined in his steed and accosted the man before him with a familiar:

"Hey, Charlie!"

Then, suddenly remembering the dignity of his position, he squared his small shoulders and threw up his chin.

"What, ho, Charles!" he corrected his first salutation. "Hold a bit. I wouldst have converse with thee."

The young man seemed aware for the first time of the other's presence.

"Hello, Billy!" said he, abstractedly glancing at the queer figure before him. "What's up now?"

"I am the knight of the golden helmet," was the grave response.

"You don't say! Where are you bound?"

"Where is thy lady?" the knight demanded.

"My lady! You mean your Aunt Margaret?"

The knight nodded.

"Down the lane a bit, by the walnut trees. Know the place, don't you?"

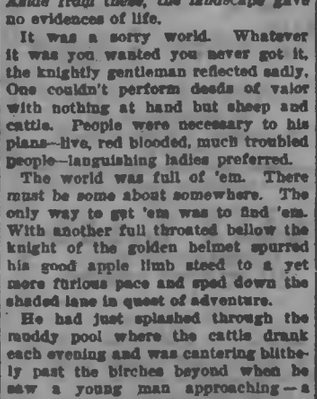
"Sure!" was the unknightly reply.

He drew a bit nearer. One hand rested upon the hilt of the sword.

"Why are you here, varlet?" he demanded. "Why hast thou deserted thy lady?"

"Huh!" said the man in flannels. Then he burst into laughter. But there was a certain grating noise in it.

"Well, Billy—Mr. Golden Helmet, I



A PROMINENT NURSE SPEAKS.

Many Nurses in Canada and Elsewhere Say the Same.

Chatham, Ont.—"Being a nurse I have had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription quite a lot. I always recommend it to my patients and it has been a wonderful help to many of them. I never knew of a case where it failed. I have a patient who is using it now and she is doing fine since taking it. I have taken it myself and got the very best results. I consider it the best medicine there is to-day for women who are ailing." —Miss. Edith Moore, 30 Degge St., Chatham, Ont.

THAT WEAK BACK

Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—maybe faint spells, chills or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 50 years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps. Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion.

How To Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organ of the entire body. After you finish your day's work you sit down and rest your muscles, but how about your eyes, do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they never cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest wideawake drug store, and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one tablet and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvellously effective in multitudes of cases. Now that you have been warned, don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

REPORTS OF LYNCHING OF TWO NEGROES

HARTWELL, Ga., Jan. 4.—Two negroes were lynched and a negress badly beaten as the result of an insult to a white girl in Anderson county, S.C., according to reports received here by officials of Georgia county.

The story of the encounter was told by the negress, who arrived at Hartwell asserting that after she had been beaten she had been ordered out of South Carolina by the mob.

It was said that the negroes, one a brother and the other a cousin of the negress, were in a buggy when they passed the girl. It was said they yelled out "Hello, sweetheart."

The girl reported the affair and the mob quickly formed. One negro, it was reported, was shot as he ran. The Sheriff of Anderson county says the other negro is in jail.

CARDINAL MERCIER DEFIES GERMANS

A prominent Belgian in New York gave a copy of a short address which Cardinal Mercier delivered before a gathering of Belgians at Jette-St. Pierre, near Brussels, without the knowledge of the German authorities. One of the Belgians present took the speech down in shorthand, and a copy of it was smuggled out of Belgium into Holland. The Cardinal said:—

"My brothers: I want to tell you how proud we are of you. A day does not go by without my receiving from friends of all nationalities letters of condolence which invariably terminate with the words, 'Poor Belgium!' and I answer; 'No, No, not poor Belgium, (applause) but great Belgium, (applause) incomparable Belgium, (applause) heroic Belgium, (applause). On the map of the world it is only a tiny spot which many foreigners would never notice without the aid of a magnifying glass; but to-day there is not a nation in the world which does not render homage to this Belgium. (Great Applause.)

"How grand and beautiful she is! If they could see her as we see her, they would know that there is not a single Belgian who weeps or complains! (applause). I have not yet met on my way a single workman without work, a woman without resources, a mother in tears, a wife in mourning who was sorrowing.

"This is what disconcerts the men who have been among us for one year. It is now one year that they have been living among us, and they do not know us yet. They are stupefied. On one hand no one complains. We all respect and will continue to respect their rules. But on the other hand not one heart gives itself to them. (Continued applause.)

"We have a King! One King! And we will have but one King!" Thundering applause.)

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Sage Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

ALLIES TAKE KAISER'S HOME FOR HOSPITAL

His Summer Residence on Island of Corfu To Be Used For That Purpose.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The British Government has notified Greece that the Kaiser's summer residence, "Villa Achilleion," on the Island of Corfu, will be taken by the allies for use as a hospital, according to a Central News despatch from Athens.

Emperor William purchased "Villa Achilleion" from the heirs of the late Empress Elizabeth of Austria. The villa itself is a marble palace. Over the gateway is the word "Achilleion," as the villa was dedicated by Empress Elizabeth to Achilles, who, she said, was to her the personification of the Hellenic soul. The Island of Corfu belongs to Greece. It is about twelve hours by sea from Brindisi, the southern Italian port, and is one of the show places of the Mediterranean. The King of Greece also has a summer home there.

He No Come Back.— A Chinaman was asked if there were good doctors in China. "Good doctors?" he exclaimed. "China have best doctors in the world. Hang Chang one good doctor; he great. He save my life." "You don't say so! How was that?" "Me velly bad," he said. "Me callee Dr. Han Kon. Give some medicine. Get velly, velly sick. Me callee Dr. Sam Sing. Give more medicine. Me grow worse—going to die. Bimeby callee Dr. Hang Chang. He no got time; no come. He save my life."

Toleration As An Asset

By Charles F. Thwing

(President Western Reserve University.)

The growth of toleration in the individual or the community measures the growth of civilization.

The savage is intolerant, the civilized man tolerant.

For, toleration is a virtue at once of the mind, the heart, the conscience and the will. In its higher relations it becomes a grace, as well as remains a virtue. It stands for knowing one's own cause, condition, movement, forces.

It also stands for knowing other men's cause, condition, movement, forces. It stands for self-understanding and for self-respect. It also stands for altruism, for the other man's worth. It has, too, a certain emotional appreciation: feeling with others' feeling, inspiration inspired by the other man's ideals, exultation over his triumphs, depression made by his failures.

It is free from arrogance. It is first cousin to humility. It spells sympathy. It even goes so far as putting one's self in the other's place, recognizing his difficulties and limitations, as well as appreciating his powers and favouring environment. It is bathed in the waters of imagination. It suggests the oneness of all men and the uniting of all the races.

Should Be Positive.

Toleration usually is supposed to be a negative force. It should be made positive. It should represent, not passivity, but activity. It should aid and promote. It does not stand for mere intention. It is consistent with partisanship, but with a large and seeing, not a blind, partisanship.

At once springs up the question, Is one to tolerate evils, is the State to tolerate crime, the community wrong, the individual insults? Are the pestiferous forces to be suffered to continue working devastation and destruction? Are the moral typhoids to be allowed to go on spreading their epidemics?

Of course the answer is inevitable. Every form and force of evil attacking the community are to be removed. But, in such extirpation, one is to bear in mind the causes whence the pests arise.

One may worthily pray not to do more harm by the tearing up and out of evils than are the evils themselves. It is sometimes well to let the tares grow with the wheat until the harvest-time.

A Suering of Persons.

Toleration is not, however, a suffering of things so much as it is a suffering of persons. It is also to be remembered that often the best way of casting out sickness is to build up the general health. Certain bacteria do not attack the strong. The cyclone has no affinity for sound oaks, only for those which have rotten hearts.

In all vital processes evolution counts for more than revolution. One may find it hard to tolerate errors, but he can tolerate men who are in error, provided only they wish to seek and to find the truth.

Toleration is often supposed to be the mark of maturity, of age, of experience, and intolerance of youth, of inexperience, of immaturity. Age thinks more in curves, youths in tangents.

By nations and by individuals, toleration should be regarded as a plant, delicately and thinly rooted, which can be and should be cultivated. Its blossoms bear no poisons.

Bismarck is not usually supposed to be an example of toleration. Rather he commonly is supposed to be a perpetuator of Laud and Strafford. But if his toleration shown in the Austrian War of 1866 had been followed in the German-Franco War of 1870-71, of permitting France to retain Alsace and Lorraine, the world to-day would have been a far happier world.

Of all English statesmen perhaps John Bright represents best the great virtue, in its large and noble relations.

Not Afraid.—Employer: "Well, what did he say when you called to collect that bill?" Clerk: "That he would break every bone in my body and pitch me out of the window if I showed my face there again." Employer: "Then go back at once and tell him he can't frighten me by his violence."

Rheumatism!

How is rheumatism recognized? Some have said—

Rheumatism is a dull pain.
Rheumatism is a sharp pain.
Rheumatism is sore muscles.
Rheumatism is stiff joints.
Rheumatism is a shifting pain.

Uncle Abner.

It ain't so hard to be pleasant if a feller has got an automobile, a steam yacht and about nine million dollars.

When the feller goes away and makes a national reputation for himself in his own particular line, it is always consoling for him to go back to the old home town and have seven or eight old tads ask him: "Well, boy, wat ye a-doin' for a livin' now?"

For a lazy man's job there ain't nothing that beats coloring a meerchaum pipe.

The fellers that never tried to raise chickens are always sorry they didn't and the fellers that did try are sorry they did.

When a feller gits old enought to know better it is too late for him to take advantage of it.

HAD LUCKY ESCAPE.

Bullet Taken From Macgregor Boy's Eye and Eyesight Saved.

John McIlwraith, of Macgregor, Man., has received the following note from his son, Wm. McG. McIlwraith who is in ward 1, No. 28 General hospital, Etaples, France:

"My Dear Father:—Just a note to let you know that all's well with me. I am able to sit up in bed now. According to the doctors I have made a wonderful recovery. I think I can say I have had one of the most remarkable escapes in this war. A shrapnel ball three-eights of an inch in diameter penetrated through my eyelid and lodged in a cavity over two and one-half inches in my head. I carried it there for nine days. The operation, performed by one of America's most skilled surgeons, lasting almost three hours, was a marked success. I will never forget coming to some two hours later. Nearly all the doctors in the hospital were around me and when they found out I could still see with my right eye they were more than pleased. To-day the tube and stitches were taken out; the tube was 2 and one-half inches long and when it was in it was almost level with the eyelid. When the hair on the eyebrow grows there will scarcely be any visible scar. I expect to go to England in about a week and in a few months will be fit for duty again. Your affectionate son."

The darkest shadows of life are those which a man himself makes when he stands in his own light.—Lord Avebury.

Historic Window Removed From St. Margaret's, London

LONDON, Jan 4.—The Church of St. Margaret's, Westminster, the scene of most of London's "fashionable" weddings, looking so very tiny alongside the towers of Westminster Abbey, might suggest to the visitor that its interior is as unattractive as its exterior. But that is not so.

For instance, the great west window in the church was the gift of Americans in commemoration of Sir Walter Raleigh, whose headless body is interred in the chancel.

But of even greater historic interest is the great east window, which is now being removed to a place of safety in case of further Zeppelin raids, for it is regarded as the best specimen in England of Flemish glass of its date. So perfectly in harmony is the arrangement of the colouring that all authorities on glass are agreed that it is one of the most beautiful works with which they are acquainted.

Its central lights represent the scene on Calvary. At the foot lie the skull and crossbones to commemorate the legend that on setting up the cross the bones of Adam were found beneath. In the morning sun the deep blue behind the three figures on the crosses and the great mass of colour on the figures below the cross are seen in their full beauty, the window facing due east over the altar.

Many attempts have been made to explain the symbolism in the upper lights, of the crescent moon and the full moon, or it may be the sun, but with no satisfactory results.

Of the curious history of the window an authoritative statement was made in an interview by the Rev. H. F. Westlake, Minor Canon of Westminster and author of "St. Margaret's, Westminster."

"It is the generally accepted tradition," he said, "that it was designed for the Chapel of Henry VII. in the Abbey, as a gift to that King from Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain on the betrothal of his eldest son, Prince Arthur, to their daughter, Katharine of Aragon, and it undoubtedly contains in the bottom right hand light a portrait of Katharine, and in the bottom left hand light a portrait, it is generally supposed, of Prince Arthur.

"It is true that there are other theories concerning these portraits. One is that they are those of Henry VII. and Elizabeth of York, his wife, and another that the male figure is that of Henry VIII. as a young prince. Of these various theories that of Katharine and Arthur seems the most probable. Certainly it is improbable that the female figure can be any other than that of Katharine of Aragon, because above it is that of her name saint, St. Katharine, with the wheel on which she was martyred. Above the figure of the Prince on the other side is that of St. George.

"Confirmation of the tradition that the window was the gift of Ferdinand is found in the representation in a top light of the split pomegranate the symbol of his recently conquered province of Grenada.

"Prince Arthur was married to Katharine only three or four months. He died and Henry VIII. married his brother's wife. It is easy to conceive that Henry desired no reminder of that fact, such as this window would have been. On its completion, therefore, it was never set up in the Abbey. It was sent to the Abbey of Waltham, where it remained until that abbey was dissolved in 1540.

"The last Abbot of Waltham sent the window to New Hall, which shortly afterward became the property of Sir Thomas Boleyn, Anne Boleyn's father. From him it went to the Duke of Buckingham, and was eventually bought by General Monck, afterward the Duke of Albemarle, by whom, with the object of saving it from the Puritans, it was buried.

"After the Restoration it was bought by a grant out of Parliament and set up in St. Margaret's. The window has always been protected by an additional glazing of transparent plate glass and by wire grating. Its removal means, therefore, taking out all the plate glass, which fits each of the five vertical lights and afterward restoring the glass to its setting and stippling it to prevent too strong a light.

ANTIMONY IS SCARCE.

Metal Greatly in Demand and Price Breaks all Records.

Antimony has reached a record price because of the great need for metal in making munitions of war, and Chinese, who were far-sighted enough to corner antimony output, have reaped a fortune.

The refined metal has been sold in London for over $800 gold per ton at times since opening of the war. Previous to hostilities the London price was about $136.

Hunan province, which lies south of Hankow, is the chief antimony producing section of the world. The ore from which the metal is obtained, is blasted there from the hilltops, and reaches Hankow on rivers which drain into the Yangtze. The chief producer of the refined ore is the Hua Ch'ang company of Changsha. Changsha is an important commercial center on the Siang river, south of Hankow. Before the war the output of the Haung Ch'ang company's refinery averaged a little more than two hundred tons a month, but the plant has now been extended and the company has opened offices in New York.

Several plants have now been established in Hankow for refining the ore, and this city is probably supplying ninety per cent. of the antimony used by the munition workers. The metal is necessary in the manufacture of shells, as it makes the steel more brittle and caused the shell to be much more deadly by breaking into smaller pieces when it explodes. Antimony is also required in making armor plate for warships.

Producers of the crude ore have enjoyed only a slight increase in the price of their product. Middlemen, who are able to corner the output and were far-seeking enough to appreciate how the prices would rise, have reaped most of the profit. Practically all the leaders in the movement to corner the market are Chinese and Japanese.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we dont have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeths Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, it prevents dandruff, itching, scalp and falling hair.

China Seeks Peace With All the World

PEKING, Jan. 4.—The Peking papers publish what purports to be an interview given to a high official by President Yuan Shih-kai, and, while it was not officially authorized by the Government, it is regarded as an inspired statement, designed to quiet the popular mind. A translation follows:

"Diplomats count everything that makes the maintenance of the country's position in the world; but we should adopt a peaceful policy toward foreign powers and at the same time endeavor to put our house in order. Only in this way can the country utilize its latest power to maintain its independence and obtain respect for its foreign policy. Whatever foreign policy the country will adopt, it will not depart from the principle of international morality. We shall make closer relations with the powers which have shown us kindness and good-will and those which are close at our doors. We should not fail to grasp any opportunity to settle outstanding diplomatic questions with our neighbors.

"In former times the Government was often troubled by diplomatic questions which could have been settled without difficulty had not the authority then in power missed the opportunity or caused ill-feeling among foreigners. The diplomatic policy of this country should be carried out in a spirit of peace and good-will, with the object of settling all outstanding questions with friendly powers. We are sure that the foreign powers will always act upon the principle of international morality and have great respect for the sovereignty of other countries.

"It would be idle to think that the friendly powers will demand of us things which we are unable to concede, as they are well aware of the present situation of this country. Suppose now some of the foreign powers approach us with a request to do a certain thing, our answer to their request will be determined by looking at the general tendency of the world and reading those signs of the times that indicate the possibilities of the future. This is the guiding principle that I shall go by to determine my future diplomatic policy.

"What we expect is that there will be no serious diplomatic problems. As to the rumor that this country is now acting at the dictation of other countries, it is a view that is shared by only a section of short-sighted people. It calls for derision and laughter."

BROCKVILLE BOYS AT FRONT ARE HEROES

Lieut-Col. W. St. Pierre Hughes, officer commanding the 21st Battalion, has written Mayor Donaldson, of Brockville, telling how some boys of that place died heroic deaths on the field of battle. The letter, which was written at La Clytte, on December 12th, is as follows:

Dear Mr. Donaldson—Yours of the 23rd November reached me yesterday and I was very pleased to hear from you. I note what you say about the letter of Mrs. Deegan and will give you full information regarding her poor boy's death.

On the afternoon of the 20-10-'15 Deegan was killed by shell fire, death being instantaneous. He was a good boy and I am indeed proud of my Brockville contingent. He was in the front line trenches in the firing line and his mother as she suggests will always have the satisfaction of knowing that he died fighting in defence of his country. He was buried together with two others of the 21st Battalion on the 1-11-'15 in a recognized cemetery at Ridgewood, Belgium. Our Catholic priest officiated at the funeral and the Brockville boys of the 21st Battalion were present, four of them acting as pallbearers. Suitable crosses with names, regimental numbers, name of battalion, etc., are erected over each grave and the boys take a delight in endeavoring to make these graves as neat and tasty as possible. Beautiful flowers of various kinds have been placed on them and we intend placing a railing around the graves of our brave laddies who are buried there.

Some parcels of food and other things from poor Deegan's home have come since his death. These have all been given to his comrades from Brockville in accordance with his mother's wish.

Since the death of Pte. Deegan, Lieut. Wilgress, Sergt. Ennos and Pte. Trevor, also all of your city met their deaths by one shell explosion. Braver and better lads never wore a uniform and only an hour or two before Lieut. Wilgress was killed he brought to a place of safety a wounded boy of the regiment under terrible rifle fire, escaping unhurt, while one stretcher bearer who went to his assistance was killed and another seriously wounded.

Heroes All.

George Wilgress was a hero among heroes and Brockville may well be proud of her boys in the 21st battalion.

Your own son who is also a splendid soldier was alongside Lieut. Wilgress, Ennoss and Trevor when the three were killed. He suffered temporarily from shock but refused to leave the trenches and continued to perform his duties. It is very hard to particularize in connection with my brave boys as when an occasion presents itself they all prove themselves equal to it, and willing to take any kind of chance necessary to gain their point or save a comrade.

Col. Cochrane and Pte. Starkey were both killed endeavoring to save a wounded comrade. Had they lived they would have undoubtedly received recognition for their brave act. Yet when they both died in their endeavors to save their comrades, others flew to their rescue and brought not only the wounded man in but the bodies of both Cochrane and Starkey also. There have been several other cases equally as brave as those I have told you of enacted by the boys of the 21st battalion, and while I believe all our Canadian laddies are good, the more I see of other troops in the field the better I love and admire the laddies of the 21st battalion.

We are beginning to receive many Christmas presents from friends in Canada for the boys. I personally see that every man receives what comes for him and I can assure you the brave laddies appreciate the gifts.

This letter may not reach you by Christmas, but nevertheless, we want you to know that the officers, N.C. O"s and men of the battalion wish you all the compliments of the season.

With best regards, believe me.

Yours sincerely,

W. S. HUGHES, Lieut.-Colonel, Commanding 21st Canadian Battalion.

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL, THICK, GLOSSY, WAVY

Try This! All Dandruff Disappears and Hair Stops Coming Out

Surely it's a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

TRY "CASCARETS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS IF SICK OR BILIOUS

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and Stop Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box now.

Turn the rascals out—the headache biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and bad colds—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret to-night straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love Cascarets because they never gripe or sicken.

MORE RAILROAD RECORDS

The pace set last week by the Baltimore and Ohio, Southern Pacific, and Northern Pacific in their November earning statements was followed by the Union Pacific and the Atchison in their statements. Union Pacific beat all previous records in gross for November, just as the Southern Pacific did. The gross earnings were $9,385,089, an increase of $1,796,887, or 23 per cent., compared with November, 1914. The net, after taxes, was $3,693,115, an increase of $1,047,290, or 37 per cent. The best previous record for gross earnings was in 1912, when $8,731,119 was earned. Only once, in November, 1910, was this year's net for November surpassed.

Atchison continued the good showing which first appeared several months ago. Gross earnings for November were $12,050,676, an increase of $1,967,689, and net earnings, above taxes, were $4,200,178, an increase of $1,037,819. The increase in net earnings for the five months of the new fiscal year was $1,928,890, and of this amount November contributed 55 per cent. The Atchison and Union Pacific earnings were considered so good that the news helped to raise the stocks even higher, Atchison touching 107¾ and Union Pacific 139¾. The Street is now looking forward to the New York Central and the Pennsylvania reports, which are due about Jan. 1. The report of the former is particularly interesting in view of Central's great rise. Last week Central stock gained 8 points, and yesterday it made a net gain of 1¾ points in addition. The stock was skating all day on new high records for the year, and once touched 110½.—New York Times.

The Best Treatment For Constipation

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the complications which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills, as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive troubles. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—no griping—action always insured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S PRINCESS APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

The princess style has found its way even into the most commonplace garments and has given them a dignity which is a welcome feature. The apron shown in the accompanying illustration shows how well the dignity of the princess lines can be adapted to a simple working garment.

This apron is made with a plain front panel, joined to the side pieces by means of curved seams which extend to the shoulder. The same arrangement is used in the back, except that here the central panel is broken by the line of closing, which is placed in the centre of it.

Where side and centre front pieces are joined large pockets are stitched in, making them extra strong. There are no sleeves and the treatment of the neck is a matter of choice. It may be simply rounded out or it may be made quite low by cutting away only the centre front and centre back panels.

Wash materials are always employed for an apron, and gingham, linen, chambray and the like are best liked and most serviceable. Brilliantine also washes easily and may be used when the garment is to serve as a working dress. The edge may be bound with braid of contrasting material or with a bias band of the apron material.

The apron pattern, No. 7348, is cut in sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4⅝ yards of 36-inch materials, with 3½ yards of banding to bind.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CONSCRIPTION BILL INTRODUCED TO-DAY

Bulgars Pillage Village On Greek Frontier

PREMIER ASQUITH INTRODUCES THE CONSCRIPTION BILL IN THE COMMONS

Act Calls For the Compulsory Enlistment of All Single Men Between the Age of 18 and 41 Who Are Eligible For Military Service---Sir John Simon Declares That Parliament Should Resist the Attempt to Enforce Conscription.

BRITISH LOST NEARLY 60,000 AT LOOS

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Asquith's announcement was regarded as an admission that the cabinet had reached a comprimise on the conscription question. By rejecting the suggestion of Lloyd George and other strong conscription advocates for a bill of far-reaching effect it is understood Asquith prevented other resignations from the Ministry.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Though the Lord Derby recruiting campaign did not meet all the expectations of some government officials, Premier Asquith declared its results were most encouraging in certain aspects. "The figures are wonderful," he said. "Nearly 3,000,000 men have signified their willingness to serve their country. It should convince the Allies and their enemies that the people of Great Britain have their heart in the war, and are prepared to meet any call."

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The British casualties in the battle of Loos alone during the Allied offensive in September totalled nearly 60,000, Under-Secretary Tennant announced this afternoon. They are divided as follows: Officers 2,378, men 57,288.

This indicates that the battle of Loos was one of the bloodiest in history. No accurate estimates of the German losses have been obtained. For an army of men killed, wounded and made prisoners the British conquered seven square miles of territory between LaBassee Canal and Lens. The British rushed the German trenches on a five-mile front for a depth of 4,000 yards in some places, but in the fighting later in the week lost some of the newly captured ground. They occupied Hill No. 70, one mile from Lens.

The Casualties at Loos are divided as follows: Killed—Officers 773, other ranks 10,345. Wounded—Officers 1,288, others 38,095. Missing — Officers 317, others 8,838.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Sir John Simon in a speech explaining his reasons for resigning from the British Cabinet declared in the Commons this afternoon that Parliament should resist the attempt to force conscription.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—In a long interview Lord Northcliffe calls the attention of the United States to its perilous position, and says a hostile army of Huns or Orientals could be brought across the ocean and landed on United States shores rapidly.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Conscription Bill to be introduced to-day will likely be less drastic than expected. Britain will consult with Allies before making heavy compulsory drafts.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Wilson to-day called Secretary of State Lansing to meet him in conference on the international situation at 11 o'clock.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The coast guard cutter Seneca was ordered to start to-day to the aid of the Greek liner Thessalonika with instructions either to tow the hull of the vessel in, or if that is not possible, to dynamite it. The Seneca is in New York Harbour.

The Thessalonika is waterlogged and it is believed it will be impossible to bring her into port. The liner is in the main steamship lanes, and it will be necessary to get it out of the way.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing for nearly an hour to-day threshed out the international crisis developed by the sinking of the Persia. At the conclusion of the conference Secretary Lansing said this country is still awaiting facts. It is hoped Ambassador PePnfield at Vienna will be able to throw some light on the situation within the next 24 hours.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 5.—The American steamer Santa Clara from New York for Valparaiso has been wrecked in a severe storm in the Magellan Straits. No other details received here.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—The following official statement was given out last night:

"Certain Bulgarian detachments have pillaged villages on the Greek frontier. In the Dardanelles artillery fire has been less active. During the days of January 2 and 3 there have been no events of importance."

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The marriage of Prince Joachim, sixth son of the Kaiser, has been set for the end of February. It will be purely a war ceremony with only the immediate relatives present.

Joachim, the youngest son of the Kaiser, who was wounded early in the war, and "thanked God for it," is to wed Princess Marie of Anhalt.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Premier Asquith this afternoon introduced in the Commons the Government's bill for conscription. In offering the Bill the Prime Minister declared that the Government does not plan to draft into service at this time all men of military age. The results of the Derby recruiting campaign show that the case for general compulsion has not been proven, he said.

Ireland is excluded from the provisions of the bill, Premier Asquith announced. The Government took this step to avoid opposition from the Irish party leaders. The bill calls for the compulsory enlistment of all single men between the ages of 18 and 41, who are eligible for military service. It also provides for the enlistment of widowers without dependants.

The conscription battle that may bring new crisis in domestic affairs of the United Kingdom opened in Parliament to-day.

The Bill exempts from service, however, all bachelors and widowers engaged in "indispensable special occupations" like manufacture of war munitions and railway duties, those supporting relatives, and those who have conscientious scruples as Quakers and other religious sects.

It is estimated that a maximum of between 400,000 and 500,000 men will be added to the British armies when the Bill introduced to-day goes into effect.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Single men will have one more chance to escape the stigma of being forced into service Prime Minister said the recruiting lists under group system inaugurated by Lord Derby will be opened again and single men allowed to attest voluntarily.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Calling present upward swing of "business blood-soaked prosperity" coming as piece of political fortune to help democratic party, Rep Humphrey of Washington in a speech to-day predicted panic unequalled in history of country at end of the European war unless tariff rates are raised.

"Who will boast of prosperity here that is measured by blood and tears shed across the seas" he said "We would look upon such a person much as we would look upon man who boasts of having rifled clothes of dead soldiers on battlefield."

KEEP UP THE SUPPLY FOR THE BOYS AT FRONT

Overseas Club Has Sent Just Enough to Supply the Peterborough Boys to the End of the Coming Week

MORE IS NEEDED

Now that the holiday season is over let us start the supply of tobacco and cigarettes again. We have sent over just enough to supply the Peterborough boys up to the end of next week —January 15th.

Don't Let the Supply Stop.

Will you give 25 cents per month to send—50 Canadian manufactured cigarettes, 1-5 lb. Canadian manufactured tobacco, 1 box of matches? Enclosed in each of these 25c packages is a postcard on which is a donor's name and address and the soldier will thank you when he returns this card.

Returned Cards.

If you have received a card from the front will you let us have it for a week. Take it or send it to Mr. R. J. Soden's Bookstore or notify the Secretary, and we will send for it. These cards will be returned to you.

For further information, collection books, collection boxes, etc., call 'phone or write to the Secretaries.

Second Day of the Poultry Show

Miss Yates Will Give a Demonstration This Evening

The second day of the Poultry Show opened to-day. The attendance this afternoon was larger than anticipated. The Market Hall, where the show is being held is well heated, and provides excellent facilities for the accommodation of a large crowd. The coops containing the birds are conveniently arranged for inspection.

They extend the entire length of the hall, and are arranged so that the public can have access to them.

A Demonstration.

Last evening a demonstration was given in egg testing. This proved interesting and instructive to a large number who were present. This evening, Miss Yates, of the Ontario Agricultural College, will give a demonstration on the art of preparing poultry for the market.

To-morrow evening the show will close following the distribution of the prizes.

MR. JOHN F. HARVEY QUITS TEACHING FOR NEWSPAPER BUSINESS

Mr. John F. Harvey, assistant mathematical master at the Collegiate Institute, tendered his resignation to the Board of Education last night requesting that it take effect about March 1. Mr. Harvey has purchased a newspaper in Newmarket, and intends quitting the teaching profession to enter the fourth estate towards which he has long been attracted. On motion of Mr. Hill, seconded by Col. Miller, the resignation was referred to the Committee on Appointments, which will endeavour to acquiesce in Mr. Harvey's request if the necessary arrangements can be made.

A BEQUEST.

Mr. Geo. W. Powell is mentioned in the will of the late Mrs. Massey Treble, his cousin, as having been bequeathed the sum of $4,000.

TWENTY-ONE DIVISIONS TO BE RAISED IN CANADA

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Canada proposes to raise the quota of troops necessary to bring her war contribution to the half-million men by securing twenty-one additional divisions. The raising of these divisions has been apportioned as follows: From the Toronto district, five divisions; from eastern Ontario, two divisions; from western Ontario, two divisions; from Manitoba and Saskatchewan, three divisions; from Alberta, two divisions; from British Columbia, two divisions; from Quebec, three, possibly four, divisions, and from the Maritime Provinces, two divisions.

At the present time, training at home and in Britain, and at the front, Canada has 285,000 men in uniform. Two divisions, each of 18,000, are at the battlefront; four divisions are in Britain awaiting the call to reinforce their fighting comrades, and two divisions, completely trained, are waiting in Canada to sail.

By the end of this month the Canadian forces in uniform will number 250,000. In addition, over 100,000 skilled Canadian mechanics are at work manufacturing munitions of war.

It is confidently expected that "before the snow flies next fall" the full complement of half a million men will have been raised.

6 LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to grant the following leave of absence as under: Lt. G. Matthews, from reveille Jan. 5, 1916, to reveille Jan. 8, 1916.

C. R. WIDDIFIELD, Lt.
Adjutant for O.C 93rd Battalion, C. E. F.

Col. W. R. Ward, chief paymaster of the Canadian pay and record offices in London, England, has arrived in Ottawa from the old country, Capt Gimblett and Lieut Bray, of Kingston, are under Col. Ward in the record and pay offices. According to Col. Ward since the war began, $80,000,000 have been distributed among Canadian soldiers in pay and allowances, without a dollar of it going astray. There are over 120,000 Canadians at the front, and all have to be paid regularly, regardless of changes in location. The pay roll now totals $5,000,000 a month. Every day Col. Ward's Office pays out $80,000 in cash, and 30,000 cheques are issued monthly from the Canadian office. The staff at the pay office now totals 1,000 officers and men, and day and night shifts have to be worked to keep pace with the demands upon their time.

Private Lang Thompson of the Lord Strathcona Horse, has returned to Winnipeg, after spending a few days with friends in Peterborough and Keene.

"I PLANT MY TULIPS."

I plant my tulips, while the autumn haze
Falls chill; admonishing of bleaker days
And bitter frost,
Wherein all tender loveliness is lost.

And where it withers, and the earth lies bare,
I place the dry brown bulbs, in durance, (there
Fierce storms shall rend
Shall pierce each clod, and all but make an end),
But they are safe—the cold earth is their friend.

And other flowers I plant in Time's wide field,
To leave them; see them die, mayhap or yield
Fruit strange to taste,
And thrown aside beneath life's toll of waste.

I plant my tulips; some will be pearl-white,
Or like the clouds that round the sun unfold—
Or splendid crimson—
Some will be pure gold!

—Richard Scrace.

Lieut. Jesse Ketchum of the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, has been taken on the strength of the 93rd Batt. He is a well known athlete and will be of assistance to the 93rd Intermediate O.H.A. team.

The Militia Department has announced that field allowances will not be paid to officers on leave or soldiers on furlough.

A hundred new panes of glass are needed in the buildings of Tete du Pont barracks, says the Kingston Standard. At midnight on Friday, the boys of the R.C.H.A. blew the old year out with one heavy gun, and blew the New Year in with another gun, and at the same time blew one hundred panes of glass all to smithereens by the consequent concussion. It sounded like a German invasion, and woke the echoes far and wide. Old Tete du Pont barracks has seen a good many old years pass away, and wanted everybody to know that 1915 was passing out.

The Kingston Standard says:

Lieut.-Col. Mills, of Peterboro who recently returned from the front to take command of the 93rd Battalion, but who has been made inspector of transport and supplies for the 2nd division, is in the city and will speak at the meeting to-night in the City Hall. Col. Mills was all through the hard fighting in which the Canadians participated last spring and was brought in close touch with the boys from Kingston who were at Ypres, and Langemarck. Col. Mills knew the late Lieut. Day very well, and spoke of the courage of this young Kingston officer, and told how keenly he felt his loss. Col. Mills also spoke feelingly of "Scotty" Davidson, and said that such boys were a credit to the city of Kingston, and that he regretted to see such a splendid soldier fall in the fight.

How New Armies Are To Be Raised

THE INAUGURAL MEETING OF THE CITY COUNCIL

New 1916 Council Will Meet on Monday Next—The Standing Committees Will Be Struck

THE PROSPECTS DISCUSSED

The inaugural meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday. In the morning the Council will meet and strike the standing committees. The most important of these is the Board of Works. It represents the largest spending department and exacts the maximum amount of time from its members. It would not come as a surprise if Ald. G. H. Duncan, representing the West Ward, was appointed chairman of this committee. He is the bell wether of the present Council, and has had considerable experience both as a member and chairman of the Board of Works.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre may retain the chairmanship of the Property Committee. It is an important committee, and was well looked after during the past year. The same might be said of the Finance Committee, whose destinies are ably guided by Ald. A. H. Stratton. There is some speculation as to who will get the Fire, Water and Light Committee. With this goes Fire Chief Howard and a large body of men, who know what it is to be well looked after.

Tenders Call For Fresh Meat

Peterboro' Butchers Were Not Invited to Tender for Supply of Frozen Meat

Some time ago complaints were made to Captain J. H. Burnham, Federal Member for West Peterborough, that local butchers and meat supply men had not received the consideration they they ought to have received. Since frozen or chilled meat had been substituted for fresh meat in the contracts without the knowledge of many of them they naturally concluded they had been overlooked.

Captain Burnham communicated with the authorities at Ottawa, and received the following in reply:

"I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letters with reference to the supply of meat at Peterborough, and in reply beg to inform you that the contract for the supply of meat, now in force in Peterborough, is for fresh meat. Tenders were not invited for frozen meat nor has any contract for such a supply been made."

Eastern Ontario Divisional Area Expected to Raise Two Divisions of Between 17,000 and 18,000 Men Announces General Hughes

EXPLAINS THE PLAN

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Details of how the new Canadian armies which will bring the Dominion's contribution up to or beyond 500,000 men are to be raised were given by Major-Gen. Sir Sam. Hughes in replying to the toast proposed in his honour at the banquet tendered to Brig.-Gen. Logie and the officers of the overseas forces in Toronto by the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition in the King Edward Hotel last night. Whether 21 or 22 divisions will be raised depends on whether Quebec contributes three or four divisions, and the Minister of Militia expressed every confidence that the latter figure would be reached, as recruiting in the sister province has seen a big improvement of late. "The call has gone forth for 500,000 Canadian soldiers, and we are going to get these as easily as we did before, and we are going to get the best young men in the country," he said. "We have practically three divisions in the firing line, and two more ready to cross. Gen. Logie is to raise five divisions here in the second divisional area. Then there will be two divisions from Eastern and two from Western Ontario. Manitoba and Saskatchewan will contribute three divisions, Alberta will contribute two. British Columbia two, Quebec three, and probably four, and the Maritime Provinces, two. That will be 400,000 men, and it will be all done like clock-work."

Sir Sam. also announced that both Brig.-Gen. Logie and Col. Mewburn would be given command of divisions in the field. They would be allowed to select each for his own division the ten or twelve best regiments they could pick, as the system would be adopted of sending the most efficient regiments forward first. Sir Sam intimated that he referred to a division as from 17,000 to 18,000 men with the necessary transport staff.

The speaker touched upon the question of recruiting in Quebec. Much had been said about the slowness of recruiting there, he remarked, but it should be remembered that there was nothing in Quebec like the perfection of organization for carrying on the work that there was in Ontario. Practically all the trained officers who could be called upon for this work had left with the first and second contingents. Now, however, they had organized a splendid lot of officers, and there was a big improvement in recruiting, so much so that he would be very much surprised if before the snow flies the people of Quebec would be content to have only three divisions in the field. He also referred to the fact that through over a million tickets had been issued to soldiers on Canadian railways only one fatal accident had occurred, while not a single fatality had occurred while thousands of men were being transported across the Atlantic. He eulogized the services to the cause rendered by the women of Canada, and remarked that these services had become more notable since liquor had been eliminated from the camps. "As long as I am Minister of Militia," he said, "booze will not be encouraged either in the camps or in the individual soldier."

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 5, 1916

SMALLER COMMITTEES.

In a short while the committees of the City Council will be named, and one of the ideas that might be considered by the new Council is that of reducing the number of aldermen on each committee. As it is at present each alderman is named on so many committees that his committee work, regular council meetings, and meetings of the Committee of the Whole Council take up so much of his time that it is very few men who can give the necessary time and attention.

Last year the most important committee, that of Board of Works, was composed of the whole Council, with ex-Alderman Green as chairman. It is the Chairman on whom devolves the major part of the work of any committee, and if he is made responsible, with a lesser number of aldermen the work will be as well done as by the old system of large committees.

It will be a difficult matter to appoint a Chairman of the Board of Works who will as faithfully discharge the duties of this office as ex-Alderman Green did last year. Mr. Green was specially fitted for such a chairman ship and gave liberally of his time, went into details minutely, and saw for himself what was required. The new Chairman will have a trying time to keep pace with Mr. Greens' conception of what a Board of Works chairman should be.

CANADA'S PART IN THE WAR.

The part that Canada is taking in this war has elicited praise from many of the leading newspapers of the United States, says the Toronto Star. In commenting on Sir Robert Borden's speech before the New England Society, the New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser discusses Canada's relation to the war and declares it to be an admirable one. This country is represented as pouring out her blood and treasure in an effort to serve the best interests of mankind and without any other gain in view. The article says in part:

"Canada, the world's second largest melting pot, child of the United States almost as much as of Great Britain and France, has reason to feel proud of her record during the last seventeen months. Whatever sneers may be directed against Great Britain's moral pretensions, or however plausibly it may be said that England, animated by nationalistic fears, is in the war from essentially the same motives that animate Germany, it is difficult for even the most cynical to withhold whole hearted recognition of the high morality back of Canadian action. She is not fighting for herself. She is and has been in no material danger. The break-up of the British Empire would not affect her prosperity. Her participation is altruistic to the verge of knight errantry. She is testifying in the most practical way in behalf of what she regards as supreme righteousness."

It is, says the New York Globe, a big work of emancipation in which Canada believes herself engaged, and the article concludes:

"Canada in the face of the nations has shown that it is possible to unite the spirit of pacificism with the ability to fight manfully. At Ypres, amid clouds of potent gas, her interpid soldiers saved the day. Relatively Canada is making a contribution to the war equal to, if it does not exceed, that of England or France. And, so doing, Americans true to their other traditions perceive that she is fighting not only for her own future but for the supremacy of those great principles that we fought for at Bunker Hill and revindicated at Gettysburg. Canada is a worthy sister of the United States. Should a crisis be forced on us, should we also be called on to testify by deeds in behalf of things without which civilization is a sham, may we prove ourselves as worthy and as self-sacrificing as have the Canadians."

The New York Sunday Times says editorially that "Canadians have a right to be proud of themselves." As a people, it says, we have shown a readiness and courage in fighting. After giving the figures of enlistment in the Dominion up to the present it describes the Canadian army as made up of a hardy, rosy, fitnest of fellows. "The old breed in the new environment has improved," says the Times. "There is a Canadian type, hard to define, but noticeable, with a freedom, self-reliance, independence, a physical and mental sturdiness that promise great things for the Canada to come, whatever destiny it chooses for itself or events chooses for it."

The soldiers of Canada bring great credit to the country, and the country is proud of the record they have made and are making. And as for the destiny of the country, we fancy that most of us are of the belief that our sons soldiering in this war under the old flag of Britain are going far towards determining that destiny and making sure, beyond further question, the continuance of the British Empire, strong for peace the world over, but if need be, strong in war, too.

THE PRESTIGE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Neutrality means something more than keeping out of the war. It carries rights with it—rights not dependent upon the grace or convenience of the belligerent States, but upon treaties and conventons and well established doctrines of international law. If a non-belligerent power finds its rights as a neutral challenged or encroached upon it must either assert them with spirit or succumb to the overbearing will of its armed neighbor. A power that cannot keep out of the war without foregoing its rights or without sacrifice of prestige occupies a position of lesser dignity than that of neutrality. The United States Government must rouse itself if it is not to be backed into a position of that kind.

So far from being the upholder of neutral rights in general, the maintainer of the agreements and principles by which nations at war are bound, the United States has not succeeded in keeping its own greatness, its own rights as a member of the family of nations, respected by Germany and her allies. When the war began the friends of mankind throughout the world were thankful that so puissant a nation as the United States kept its skirts clear of it. They trusted that the good offces of that great power in the capacity of a moderator or referee would be imposed on the belligerent, and that the Washington Government would have an influence to hold the fighting fair, to keep hands off non-combatants, and to put beyond question the immunity of the open courses of navigation from mines. But the United States Government has acted as if this supporting of the rules of war for the nations in general were none of its business. If Germany chose to commit flagrant violations of conventions to which it and the United States were parties, the United States Government did not feel called upon to protest unless its own people or its own rights were affected. Even as the champion of its own people and its own rights the Washington Government has fallen short. Its controversy with the Berlin Government over the Lusitania horror, in which upwards of a hundred citizens of the United States perished, is so far without finality. The sinking of the Ancona by a submarine acknowledged by the Austrian Government became the subject of diplomatic correspondence which the Vienna Foreign Office plainly meant to carry through the same devious and temporising course. The United States Government objected to going over the same ground and the Austrian Government took a stand of mingled defiance and concession. The whole proceedings was most unsatisfactory not to say humiliating, to the United States.

Now the Persian, with a United States Consul and doubtless some fellow-citizens of his on board, has been torpedoed with great loss of life. Austria or Germany or Turkey or Bulgaria will be ready to carry on a tedious and inconclusive correspondence with the United States Government on the subject. But if our great neighbor is not ready to waive some of the most vital rights of a nation among nations, it must be prepared to back up its protests with armed force. When the Central Powers cease to show due respect to the United States, the question can no longer be one of retaining their friendship. Friendship cannot survive respect.

NO LAWYERS AT FERRANTI CASE

MURRAYVILLE, Jan. 5.—Details of the finding of the body of Nick Tocaci, the murdered Italian, were given at the opening of the preliminary hearing of the charge of murder against Rocci Ferranti before Magistrates A. Deans and F. C. Copp. After several witnesses had been heard, the hearing was adjourned, when the confession in the hands of Constable Elliott will be read. Chief Constable Grubber of Langley conducted the prosecution, there being no lawyers present for either prosecution of defence. Ferranti declined to ask the witnesses any questions, his husky voice betraying his nervousness.

Head Found in Well.

Section Foreman A. F. McIvor, of the B. C. Electric, and Sectionman McHugh, told practically identical stories of the finding of Tocaci's body, and Mr. McIvor identified the knife as one that had been about the shack and belonged to Tocaci. The story as recounted in The World several days ago about the breaking in of the door to turn off the electric heater and the finding of the dead body on Tocaci's bed was repeated without variation. Ferranti's bed was undisturbed. The absence of the head was not noted at this time, however, the blood frightening the men into leaving the shack at once. They afterwards took a drink out of the well, although they noticed an object floating in the water. Not having missed the head, they took no notice of this fact. The head was subsequently found in the well.

Men Were Good Friends.

Mr. McIvor's evidence disclosed that Ferranti had been moved to Coughlin at Tocaci's request, because the latter was lonesome. They were always good friends, although C. McNigan, of Coughlin, said that Ferrante had been rather sullen lately. Nick Tocari had given no evidence of trouble when seen at 7 o'clock the previous evening and there was no liquor in the shack.

Dr. Albert Bernie said that the severance of the head was the actual cause of death

$87,800 Required For Schools And Collegiate This Year

Annual Budget Presented by Mr. Vincent Eastwood at the Concluding Meeting of the Board of Education Last Night—Slight Advance Over Last Year Explained

STATEMENT FOR PAST YEAR AND THE 1916 ESTIMATES

SCHOOL BOARD DEMANDS...

Demands for 1916	$87,800
Last year's demands	84,200
Increase this year	$ 3,600

This $3,600 is made up by paying half the salaries of Capt. Park and Capt. Munro, who have enlisted; the opening of two rooms; and other items.

The Board has a slight credit balance from 1915.

The Board of Education requires $87,800.00 from the City Council for the maintenance of the Public Schools and Collegiate Institute during 1916.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Finance Committee submitted to the 1915 Board at the final meeting last night a minute statement of the receipts and expenditures in the past year with an estimate of the 1916 amounts to be expended and received.

The statement for the past year was read first, and on motion of Mr. Eastwood, seconded by Mr. Denne, was referred to the city auditors.

Referring to the estimates for 1916 Mr. Eastwood explained the increase of $3,600 as occasioned by the payment of half the salaries of Capt. Maurice Park and Capt. H. R. Munro, two teachers who are on active service, by the opening of two additional rooms, one in King Edward, and the other in the South Central school, also by $400 granted last year to Mr. Lacheur, retired caretaker of the South Central; also by the fact that many of the teachers are now receiving the maximum salaries according to the Board's schedule. This applies to Collegiate Institute and Public School teachers.

Mr. Eastwood referred to the balance of $1,522.89 which would be reduced by about $800 to Mr. F. Bartlett, and would leave a small balance from the administration of the schools during 1915.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman remarked that the entire budget was a very satisfactory one in view of the extra demands placed upon the Board.

Motion to the Council.

Moved by V. Eastwood.
Seconded by W. H. Hill.

"That pursuant to the Public Schools Act, Section 47, and the High Schools Act, Section 87, the Municipal Council of the City of Peterborough be and they are hereby required to pay the Treasurer of the Board of Education in monthly instalments, the money to be used for the current expenses of the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools, as follows":

ITALIAN OFFICER DESCRIBES FIGHT IN THE ADRIATIC

BARI, Italy, Jan. 3.—A naval officer who participated in the action at Durazzo, gives the following details of the engagement which cost the Austrians two destroyers.

"Apparently the successful naval operations in the Adriatic on the part of the Italians had greatly enraged the Austrian Admiralty. The warships of Austria had been utterly unable to prevent the passage of troops to Albania because of the strong Italian convoys. They, therefore, revenged themselves by bombarding open coast towns and sinking merchant vessels laden with supplies.

"On the morning of December 28 an Austrian advice boat and five destroyers appeared off Durazzo and was inflicted on the town.

"Suddenly an Italian squadron appeared from the south and a French squadron from the north. When the Austrians discovered that they were surrounded they abandoned the bombardment and fled, disregarding the mine fields. One destroyer struck a mine and was blown in two, sinking immediately.

"The second destroyer was riddled with shells. It floated for a time and part of the crew was rescued. The other three destroyers headed for Brindisi. Fifteen miles from the Italian port they changed their course, heading along the northly coast. After being pursued all the afternoon the Austrian boats escaped when darkness fell."

Like alone acts upon like. Be what you wish others to become. Let yourself and not your words preach. —Amiel.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

SOLDIERS' INTERMEDIATE TEAM WILL BATTLE WITH LOCAL JUNIORS

Fans are hoping for a change to colder weather before to-morrow night, when the 93rd Battalion Intermediate O.H.A. team is scheduled to do battle with the Electrics Juniors. Great interest is being taken in the soldiers' team, who open their O.H.A. season next week, and the game with the local Junior O.H.A. team will not only furnish a line on the boys in khaki, but also on the youngsters who will wear the Peterborough colours this year, and in whom the fans are taking great interest. The victory of kids in Campbellford made the fans sit up and take notice, and if they come through with a good game against the soldier team to-morrow night as their supporters confidently expect, the youngsters will have a host of friends to follow them in their O.H.A. series which opens with Lindsay next Wednesday night. There promises to be a big crowd at to-morrow night's game, as a contest between a junior and an intermediate team is somewhat of a novelty, and as the fans know the two teams will battle for the whole distance. The soldiers will have a big bunch of supporters from the lads in khaki, and will in addition, have their fine band with them. There will be an hour's skating after the game. The price for admission to the game to any part of the rink and including skating, will be 25c. The game is called for 8 o'clock sharp.

The Junior O.H.A. team will use the following players:

Goal—C. Montgomery.

Defence—Legros, Lowes, F. Montgomery.

Forwards—Rose, Hamilton, Graham, Cherrett, Bartley, Kennaley, Smythe.

The 93rd will introduce many new faces to local hockey fans. Included in their line-up is Lieut. Jesse Ketchum, the well-known Ottawa athlete, who has been attached to the Peterborough battalion. The soldier team will line up as follows:

Goal—Lieut. Widdifield.

Defence—Lieut. Dupuy and Lieut. Matthews.

Forwards—Lieut. de Pencalon, Lieut. Ketchum, Lieut. Stevenson, Pte. Blewett, Pte. Anderson, Pte. Wedlock.

Campbellford To Play Intermediate O. H. A. Game Here Friday

In view of the unusual circumstances in connection with the game scheduled for Cobourg on Monday night, when the Electrics had not enough men available to go ahead with the game, the O.H.A. will not look upon it as a defaulted game and as a result the Electrics are still in the running and will play an intermediate game with Campbellford on Friday night. Although the loss of Montgomery, Baillie and Tobin will be felt, the Electrics management felt that they have plenty of material left for a strong seven, and the other teams in the district who have been rejoicing in what they call Peterborough's downfall will find they have a battle on their hands when they tackle the red, white and blue team. Campbellford has strengthened its team during the past few days and are coming up confident of beating the Electrics on their own ice. They will have a surprise coming to them Friday when they go into action against the Electrics. The Easterners are permitted to select men from around the Campbellford district as well as in the town itself, and as a result they will probably have a pretty husky seven in line for Friday's game. It should be a battle royal all along the line and incidentally will be the first O.H.A. game of the season.

COUGHLIN ONLY GOT CERTIFICATE THE OTHERS WERE REFUSED

At a meeting of the sub-committee of the Ontario Hockey Association, held yesterday morning, G. R. Porter was refused a permit to play with Wiarton. Porter was working in Berlin after the first of August and did not qualify with Wiarton under the residence rule. If he enlists in the Bruce Battalion he can qualify with Wiarton. He has already made application for admission.

Howard Merrium, of Markdale, has enlisted with the 14th battalion but desired to play with his home town. He was granted permission.

It was decided that Roy Harmon was eligible to play with Collingwood.

A communication was received from A. E. Sexsmith, of Pittsburg, asking if he dropped the reinstated professional players from his Winter Garden team and imported no players and played none but amateurs satisfactory to the O.H.A., would his team be allowed to play with O.H.A. teams. If these conditions are complied with immediately the application will be granted.

Jerry Coughlin was in Peterborough in April. He played in Haileybury in 1914, at Ingersoll in 1913, and in Peterboro in 1912. He is now in Peterboro, and is declared eligible.

B. J. R. Montgomery in New Liskeard in 1912, 1913 and 1914, now in Peterboro was declared ineligible to play for Peterboro, as were W. J. Tobin, at Haileybury in 1914, North Bay 1913, Ottawa in 1912, and L. Baillie in Cobalt in 1912, North Bay 1913 and 1914.

"GLAD" MURPHY TO BE OPERATED ON

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Heroic measures will be adopted to-day at St. Michael's Hospital to save the life of W. E. G. ("Glad") Murphy, the Argonaut football player, who suffered a fracture of the cervical vertebrae in a Big Four game here between Argos and Hamilton on October 7th. An operation will be performed, which, if successful, may restore the injured athlete to health.

For three months Murphy has been confined to the hospital totally paralyzed from the neck down, but in full possession of his mental faculties. When the nature of the injury was first ascertained an operation was considered highly inadvisable, but the patient's wonderful physique has stood him in good stead, and he has been able to conserve his strength to a remarkable degree. For the past month there has been little or no change in the condition of the patient, a fact which surprised the attendant surgeons. It was decided to make another X-ray picture of the injury and a copy was forwarded to Dr. John Murphy, the eminent Chicago surgical authority, together with a statement of the developments of the case, with which he was made familiar some weeks ago. Upon receipt of a reply from Dr. Murphy it was decided to operate, and Dr. Bruce will do so to-day.

It was felt some time ago that there was no likelihood of Murphy's recovery, but there now appears to be a ray of hope. The Argonaut Club has been untiring in its efforts to afford comfort and relief for the stricken footballer-hockeyist-oarsman-aviator, and sportsmen throughout the land are hoping for the best.

HOCKEY

The Belleville junior game of Lindsay, scheduled for Monday, will be played to-night (Wednesday). The Lindsay juniors are in no way connected with the Lindsay intermediates who defaulted.

Cobourg St. Michaels have put in a claim of $75 for the default of the Peterborough Electrics on Monday night.

The Toronto Star says: There was no game at Cobourg last night between Peterborough Electrics and Cobourg Intermediates. Referee Ernie Lang of Belleville, who was at Cobourg to officiate, declared the game defaulted to Cobourg, but it is hardly likely that the Peterborough team will be declared out of all competition as teams which default usually are in O.H.A. competitions. There are peculiar circumstances. Peterborough had four men before the O. H. A. sub-committee yesterday applying for re-consideration of a refusal to grant certificates, and were confident of getting by. Of the four, only Jerry Coughlin was declared eligible. This left the Peterborough team with only five men to play Cobourg last night, and the wire service was so badly disorganized that Manager Smuck, who was in Toronto, could not get hold of club officers in Peterborough to send down juniors to fill the team out at Cobourg. The result was that he only had five men, and as Cobourg St. Michaels refused to play short-handed Referee Lang declared the game forfeited to Cobourg. No game at all was played, and the crowd was handed return checks.

TREMENDOUS RESPONSE TO LORD DERBY'S PLAN OF JOINING THE COLOURS

The appended table strikingly illustrates the tremendous response of the British public to Lord Derby's campaign. It must be remembered that before it was inaugurated forces estimated at from 2,500,000 to 4,000,000 men had been raised, and that the following figures refer only to the "residue."

SINGLE MEN.
Single men of military age	2,179,231
Enrolled under Derby scheme	1,150,000
Remaining	1,029,231
Exempt from military service	378,071
Remaining to be "fetched" by some form of compulsion	651,160
MARRIED MEN.
Married men of military age	2,832,210
Enrolled under Derby scheme	1,679,261
Remaining	1,152,949

No form of compulsion respecting married men is as yet contemplated.

Single men enrolled	52 per cent.
Married men enrolled	59 per cent.
SUMMARY.
Total men of military age	5,011,441
Enrolled by Derby scheme	2,829,261
Remaining	2,182,180

With such a mighty new army available the question may be asked, why any talk of conscription, at least until this new force has been assimilated? The reason lies in the terms under which men enrolled during the Derby campaign. The feature of these terms was the Prime Minister's pledge to married men that they would not be obliged to serve until after all the available single men had joined the colours. The immediate problem, therefore, is to enlist by some means or other, the 651,160 single men who have not yet been enrolled. It is a surprisingly small fraction, but sufficiently large to require attention, and "thorough" is now the word.

HOW FRENCH BEADLE TRICKED GERMANS

Though Eighty Years Old, He Was More Than a Match for His Captors

Many a French village will have a story to recount of the great war. That of which the beadel of a small village in the department of the Aisne is the hero has a human side that will cause it to be remembered. Before the war, this village was a peaceful spot. Then, one fine day, the Hun legions descended upon it.

As usual, the invaders were terribly suspicious. Neither priest nor beadle, in spite of his 80 years, was exempt from careful supervision. Suspicion was replaced by certainty one night, when a flickering light was noticed behind one of the church windows. Somebody inside was obviously making secret signals to the enemy. With infinite precautions the church was surrounded and the door burst open.

"Mind Your Own Business."

Inside the beadle was discovered looking very embarrassed.

"What are you doing here?"

"Mind your own business."

Without more ado the old man was seized and carried off to his house. It was thoroughly ransacked, but nothing suspicious was discovered. The beadle was submitted to a fire of questions, but no answer could be extracted from him, except "Mind your own business."

For nothing in the world would the poor old fellow admit in front of his nearly paralyzed wife, the real motive for his presence in the church. How could he confess that what took him there was the desire which periodically seized him with irresistible force to have a brief tete-a-tete with a certain black bottle of potent liquor, which he kept carefully hidden on the top of a dusty beam?

"To-morrow at dawn you will be shot," was the verdict. In vain the old woman pleaded for her husband.

As there was no suitable place to keep the beadle, it was decided to leave him in his dwelling for the night and place an armed sentry at the door, the only exit.

In Borrowed Plemes.

For a long time the beadle pondered in silence. Then, a luminous idea occurred to him. He rose suddenly, whispered a few words to his wife, and began to rummage in the wardrobe.

First he put on a bonnet, then a bodice, then a petticoat. Finally, he took his wife's crutch, and, leaning heavily upon it, groaning and sobbing bitterly the while, he opened the door and went out.

The sentry stared hard, but, recognizing the figure of the old woman he offered no objection to let her pass. A few hours later, when the first streak of dawn lit up the eastern sky, a sergeant and two men appeared to take the prisoner to the Kommandatur. In the little house they found only the poor old woman industriously telling her beads.

"Where is your husband?"

"I don't know."

The whole village was turned inside out—church, presbytery and houses, but not beadle could the soldiers discover.

Two days later the village changed masters a second time and was occupied by the allies. Just as a regiment of French dragoons was passing the church, the beadle appeared on the steps wearing his wife's bonnet and singing lustily the Marseillaise.

BAD HABITS MUST BE CURED; MAY NOT BE BROKEN

To try to "break" a child of a habit is a great mistake, although habits may be cured if they are objectionable. So says Dr. George Van Ness Dearborn, psychologist and physiologist to the Forsyth Dental Infirmary for children, in Boston, in an address before a recent meeting of dental graduates, printed in the New York Medical Record.

Habituation is regarded by Dr. Dearborn as a well-nigh universal process. Machines of steel, of brass, and of wood are said by some to acquire habits just as organisms do "Shoes, coats, neckscarfs, have habits." The rain running down a new mountainside soon acquires definite habits, which we call brooks. Almost everything we are familiar with has habits. Habit is surely a universal process in matter, in all material mechanisms. Pretty nearly everything we do is a habit. There is only one exception—voluntary motion—and even that often strives in vain against some opposing motion impressed on the body by habits. One has only to try to say "black bug's blood" six times, very fast, to assure himself of the truth of this. Habit is said by William James to be more than "second nature"; it is nature itself. This being the case, we should not interfere with a habit, even a bad one, unless we know how. Says Dr. Dearborn in part:

Understand Nature of It.

"A child should not be punished or abused because he has a habit, but he must be led to understand the human nature of it and must be able to work out his own gradual cure. No other method is scientific, no easier way is sane or safe to the delicate personality of the young child. Such habits are more readily prevented than safely checked.

"You cannot do much in practice unless it is in your own household, or unless you can deeply convince the parents of the essential importance of rightly controlling the habit, and obtain their full and active co-operation. In many cases at least, however, it is certain that if you start far enough back, by giving a course of out-of-door hygiene, getting them to go 'back to the farm' for several months—six or so—and so fundamentally to equalize the invigorate the nervous system, thus making it so active and vigorous that this particular neuromuscular action will be practically swamped out, you may get results. I certainly would not try to "break a habit as such; but it may be safely and surely most often, bent and persuaded out of its wrong growth.

"One thing in particular that we need to get out of our teachers' consciousness is that children are little men and women. They are of course, just as different from men and women almost as can be, and, different in the most fundamental respect. The breaking of a well-fixed psychomotor habit is wholly, for the most part, unjustifiable. A habit is not like a femur-bone which may be forcibly broken and in time made to grow again straight, but on the other hand, habit is a part of the child's organism, part of his brain-action and his muscle-action, ingrained in every portion of the mind and body. The much shock to such a mechanism when young neranges it and may set up very serious undercurrents in the nervous system. As you are doubtless aware, from 60 to 70 per cent. at least of cholera cases are known to start in some sort of nervous shock, unusually fright, and it is obvious that an acute form of shock might come from the strict absolute insistence that a child should not continue certain deeply ingrained habits. It is not safe to break, in that liberal sense, those neuromuscular habits; too much shock in such a mechanism deranges it; one stops any child-actvity at one's peril, unless it be done along natural methods.

Soon Become Fxed.

"Unless you have had much personal experience, and unless you have thought about these habits as found in even the average child, you are not apt to realize how very firmly fixed they become. The most trivial habit soon becomes implanted so that it is a part of the organism, even in normal individuals, and where there is any lack of inhibitory control, in a child, notably, who is slightly defective, it will become in the most literal and most obvious sense a part of the organism. This is a physiological process, the means of economy taken by the nervous system in the youthful individual. It may be a long, long way to this particular Tipperary.

Deplace With Something Else.

"The normal way of breaking a habit, the safe way, is to displace it with something else. The neuromuscular mechanism is far too subtle and sensitive a thing, and these involuntary habits involve too much of a strain to make it safe to insist that it be broken off too short, so to speak. Enlightenment is the crying need of the times, in matters of diet, sex, and how to live in general, and education so far has neglected them. I think the average normal child can be more or less controlled by way of his own interest; and, as I have already said, I believe that the average child, even as young as five or six years, can be guided wisely if properly approached along the lines of psychotherapeutics, careful, elaborate, explanation adapted to his years pointing out the really fundamental things. I think a child under such instruction, when it is expedient, can be impressed, or at least his subconscious mind can be impressed so that it would be effective in many of these habit-conditions. But one must start with a normal, that is, an outdoor, nervous system, and musculature.

"Out-of-door exercise and plenty of sleep—that is the dual but shortest road to a strong nervous system. Than to live in some places or in some way is that these are amply available, I do not know any other certain way; in fact, I would suggest in every case of bad habits that we should urge on the parents the absolute necessity of the victim getting a long and real vacation in the real country. I believe that ordinarily that will have more immediate benefit than anything else they could do, and be wholly safe and hygienic, and as speedy, too, in its actions as the conditions of organic life allow.

"A change of location and of surroundings assists in breakng up habits in so far as the changes invigorate the organism. When you travel in Europe, hoping to get away from your worries you hardly succeed in leaving them behind, but in so far as travel or change invigorates, as it often does, I should say that it would lessen all abnormal functional conditions, these malocclusional habits among the rest.

A slow answer may mean dullness, instead of deliberation.

CAN'T FIX MAXIMUM PRICE.

Hanover, Germany, Jan. 4.—In passing upon a petty case of the owner of a delicatessen shop who was charged with violation of the municipal maximum price regulations the supreme court has rendered a decision which may become of the utmost significance for the entire empire. The defendant has been found guilty in a lower court of selling Brunswick sausage at a higher price than the maximum fixed for Hanover. He appealed on the ground that the city of Hanover had no right to fix the prices of goods brought to Hanover from an outside point. The supreme court sustained this contention.

Until the necessary legislation is enacted there probably will be great confusion everywhere as a result of the court's decision.

Review of Work by Industrial Night Classes in Peterborough

Presented to Board of Education by Mr. Eastwood, With Estimate of Requirements for the New Year.

The work of the Peterborough Industrial Night Classes during the Fall term was presented to the Board of Education last night by Mr. V. Eastwood, chairman of this special committee.

The estimates for the coming year show a total expenditure of $2,900. Of this sum, $650 will be met by various grants, and the balance of $1,150 is to be provided by the Board.

The importance of the classes in electricity is indicated by the proposal to expend $550.00 for new voltructers, ammeters, galvanometers, rheortats, retistance boxes, and other equipment. This in a measure is adapting the technical school in its electrical branch to the special opportunities Peterborough offers for this work.

Mr. A. F. Hagerman, principal, in his report, included the following facts:

Teachers and Classes.

Electricity—Mr. Carson.
Mathematics—Mr. Brown.
Draughting—Mr. Hagerman.
Domestic Science—Miss M. G. Walsh.
Dressmaking—Miss A. Welsh.
Millinery—Miss McIntosh.
Total enrolment was 188 students.
Fees collected—$240.00.
Fees returnable—$216.35.
Fees forfeited—$23.65.
Interest—59c.
Handed to secretary—$34.24.

Salaries Paid.

Miss M. G. Walsh, 41 classes—$123.
Miss A. Welsh, 22 classes—$66.
Miss McIntosh, 10 classes—$30.
Mr. Brown, 10 classes—$30.
Mr. Carson, 16 classes—$48.
Mr. Northcott, janitor—$45.
Mr. Hagerman, principal—$200.
Total—$542.

Expenditure on Supplies.

Domestic Science	$ 23.56
Electricity	2.50
Advertising, W. Stocker	30.00
Advertising	13.35
Higgins' Account	2.50
Light and heat	50.00
Total	$129.95

Estimated grants to be received total $582.98.

FRANCE CERTAIN SHE WILL WIN

Position of the Allies at Saloniki is Fine, He Thinks—Not Sure About an Offensive in the Spring, However.

ATHENS, Jan. 5.—"With our batteries of heavy artillery and the men behind them it is impossible to oust the allied forces from Saloniki," said General Castelnau, chief of the French general staff, in a statement. General Castelnau gave the interview after being received by King Constantine this morning and attending a luncheon at the French legation.

"The situation at Saloniki to-day is most excellent," the general said.

"I spent several days examining the ground. I must say I have rarely seen an emplacement which lends itself better to defence.

"I may say also that the position provides the most favourable conditions for offensive as well as defensive operations."

The general was asked whether the allies contemplate an offensive movement from Saloniki in the spring.

Spring Will Tell.

"Spring will tell," he replied. "It is impossible to discount the exigencies of the military situation so far ahead. Should it be decided upon, the offensive from Saloniki would be made under peculiarly favourable conditions.

"And in France, General, how soon do you believe the war will be finished?"

"That does not matter. The most important thing is that victory is certain, sooner or later. In France every Frenchman and every French woman is ready to go the whole way for a complete triumph. Whether in France or here, there will be no weakening for France is not only determined—France is sure."

An Easy Way to Increase Weight

Good Advice For Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods, rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

There is a preparation known to reliable druggists almost everywhere which seemingly embodies the missing elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This modern treatment is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aims through regenerative, re-constructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood where they are carried to the starved, broken-down cells and tissues of your body. You can readily picture what result this amazing transformation should produce as with increased weight the cheeks fill out, hollows about the neck, shoulders and bust disappear and from 10 to 20 pounds of solid, healthy flesh is added to the body. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, effective. All leading druggists of this vicinity have it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied as per the guarantee found in every package.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you send $1.00 to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you by mail.

In some positions if you are on the spot one minute before the boss arrives you are early; one minute after he arrives you are late. The successful man never waits until the last minute.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Ladies of the C. W. A. Tendered an Elegant Banquet to the Officials and Senior Scholars—A Programme Followed

Those large-hearted and whole-souled ladies comprising the Church Women's Association of St. John's were the hostesses at a very elegant supper held last evening, in the St. John's school-house. To this sumptuous and pretty function were bidden the Sunday school children of the senior classes, together with the officers and teachers and past officers and past teachers.

If bright, beaming faces, and talk at the rate of nineteen to the dozen, are to be taken as any criterion of pleasure and happiness, then there is not the shadow of a doubt that enjoyment and appreciation were the key-notes of the evening.

At six o'clock sharp, the happy band assembled; many were in waiting considerably before the leaving-of-work hooters had sent up their somewhat discordant sounds. A peep into the large schoolroom revealed a great number of tables of varying dimensions, all prettily set out with flowers, and an abundance of plate and cutlery, to say nothing of the papery. The electroliers had been hung with streamers and the 'tout-ensemble' had a very elegant effect.

Great justice was due to the repast which was served up on a very liberal scale; the ladies of the C.W.A. ministering to the needs of their guests. And right well they did it, too! Mrs. C. Turner, the indefatigable president of the Association, was here there and everywhere, keeping things going, assisted by her satellites, both young and old. At the officials' table, where this scribe had the pleasure of sitting, there was no doubt as to the enjoyment. Canon Davidson kept up a continual fire of 'bonhomie,' to say nothing of the pleasure of the society of some of the charming teachers.

The original intention, viz., the consumption of viands, having been effected in the most practical manner, and a shout of 'thanks' to the donors having been given, some willing hands quickly made light work of stripping the tables, placing them on one side, and arranging the chairs for a programme. While this work was in progress, the ladies who had so kindly waited on us, partook of their repast, and the children had a little affair to themselves, singing snatches of patriotic and other songs, recitations of a verse or two—in fact a little "free-and-easy"—"all on their own," Major J. C. Davidson aiding and abetting for all he was worth.

Then began the programme proper. Mr. W. Scadding, the newly-appointed Superintendent, calling the scholars to attention, said a few nice, kindly words, hoping that they would all pull together, illustrating, that as our fingers are useless to us without the use of our thumbs and vice versa, he, the thumb, would be of no value without the co-operation of the fingers, which represented the scholars His remarks were cordially received by those to whom they were addressed. During the programme each number of which was well rendered and equally well received, a small "play" was introduced. The "book" of this was, like so many others of its type, somewhat vapid and "kiddish"; one wonders who can write such twaddle, but the general plot of the affair, entitled "A Joke on Santa," appeared to be that Santa had provided a Christmas tree laden with gifts for his favourites, including, amongst others, Little Boy Blue, Humpty Dumpty, Jack and Jill, and other notorious characters. The Spirit of Mischief, in the form of a country 'yokel'—a peasant, in fact—happens along and thinks it would be a good joke to change the 'tags' on the presents, a diabolical trick which he effects. The presents are then distributed and, of course, get into the wrong hands, absolutely. When 'Santy' comes along, instead of blessings, he receives cursings, until the mischief-maker has owned up, and found open confession to be good for his soul. Then, of course, every tangled thread is straightened out and everything goes as merrily as the proverbial "marriage-bell."

The programme given was as follows:

Programme.

Violin solo—Kenneth Lang.
Recitation—Ella Smith.
Recitation—"The News Boy"—Mrs Hopwood.
Stage Production.
Recitation—Lillian Faggan.
Song—Doris Laws.
Recitation—Lawrence Killally.

The names of those taking part in the play are as under:

The Misses. Helen Wilson, Elsie Toone, W. Cuffe, G. Cuffe, Marjory Evans, Marguerite Herridge, V. Phillips, Gertie Hood, P. G. Hood, H. Crowe, B. Smith and G. Collinson.

Messrs. A. Pitchford, Jack Thirnbeck, C. Thirnbeck, J. Turner, R Brown, B. Parkes, O. Crowe, C. Flowers and Jack McCullough.

If, by any chance, I have omitted the names of any performers, let me assure them that it is not done of set or deliberate purpose, and I hereby offer my regrets. But with so many "on the bill" "accidents will happen even in the best regulated families."

I may mention that, prior to the programme, a Grand March of the scholars, headed by the Superintendent, went three times the round of the school room. Some spirited quick march movements were ably played by Miss Rush.

At 8.30 a vote of thanks was given to the ladies; the National Anthem, "God Save the King," was sung, accompanied by Mrs. Scadding, and everybody went away delighted with their evening's entertainment.—F. R

LABOUR COUNCIL SENDS NEW NOTE TO SCHOOL BOARD

Wants "One Man One Job" Secretary and Meetings Not Held Behind "Closed Doors—Mr. Crane's Explanation.

GOES TO THE NEW BOARD

Mr. Wm. Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labour Council, sent a second note to the Board of Education requesting that some one who does not hold a lucrative position be appointed secretary-treasurer to the Board instead of Mr. Thompson, on the reiterated principle of one man, one job. He also urged that since the Board is an elective body it should hold its meetings where the public can readily attend and "not behind closed doors."

Mr. John Crane stated that the Trades and Labour Council represented an important section of the citizenry and there was no doubt that they meant well. But it seemed that they had not grasped the exact position of the Board. Certain duties were imposed on the secretary and he had to live up to them scrupulously. The Board required a capable financier. Last year $116,000 passed through Mr. Thompson's hands. A permanent separate secretary is not required. There is not sufficient work to demand all his time, but it is necessary that the secretary be capable. If another man was engaged for $600 the Board would not want a man whose ability was only worth that amount. Mr. Crane felt that this aspect of the question should be laid before the Labour Council, and he felt confident they would agree with the idea of the Board.

Mr. Eastwood suggested that a meeting be arranged with the President of the Labour Council that they might discuss the point.

Mr. Hill observed that there was no question about the efficiency of Mr. Thompson, and since the citizens had elected the Board to handle the schools of the city, surely this matter could be left with the Board.

On motion of Mr. Gordon and Mr. Eastwood the Stevens letter was referred to the 1916 Board.

Two Lawyers In Scuffle

Court Case Ends in Accusation and Blows.

NEW WESTMINSTER, Jan. 5.—Messrs. C. W. Craig and J. E. Bird, two well-known Vancouver barristers, came to blows in the court-room at the conclusion of the trial of an action affecting the Blue Funnel motor line. The case was that of T. D. Coldicutt et al. against C. W. Tait.

Subsequent to the trial, Mr. Craig accused Mr. Bird of being mixed up in an alleged crooked deal and Mr. Bird responded with a blow. Gowns were ripped off and a scuffle occurred, several blows being struck.

The action was sent to the registrar for an accounting, the sheriff being receiver in the meantime, when the defendant admitted the partnership of the plaintiffs in the Blue Funnel motor line. The leases of the local and Vancouver offices held by the company in Tait's name are now in the hands of Mr. N. Almas of the Big Five Company.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

MR. V. EASTWOOD
Chairman of Finance Committee of 1916 Board of Education, who tabled the New Year's Budget last night.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Brigham Johnstone, painter and decorator, 340 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, paperwriting, paperhanging, furniture polishing and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Enquirer, Peterborough, Ont.—I have enjoyed reading your "Arts and Crafts" column since its inception, and now find it useful, inasmuch as I hope to receive an answer to my first query. In my living room is a fireplace, the front of which is faced with white Terra Cotta bricks with fancy ornaments at the top corners. Now what will restore the whiteness to them as they are so smeared up with smoke and dirt?

Ans.—Make a stout lather with castile soap and water, to which add some ammonia, and wash the smooth bricks with this thoroughly, rinsing with clean water and a soft sponge. If the smoke seems to still stick, rub with flour, pumice or powdered rotton stone and water. To clean the ornaments use a soft brush to work the lather well in allowing it to stand a while. But don't let it dry. Then with a soft scrub brush go over them, working well into the figures. Again sponge clean as above. Should any stains remain try some pure turpentine on a cloth, rubbing briskly.

Fly Screens.—I discovered that my fly screens are rusting, and in trying to paint them (or rather one of them) I find the paint clogs up the mesh and of course destroys them as a screen. Is there a special paint to use? If so, what is its name?

Ans.—Any good oil paint will answer. The fault is in its application. Have very little paint in your brush and spread it on evenly. It will take lots of brushing, but be sure not to miss any of it. This is important. Then take an old shoe or clothes brush and brush the mesh well with it, and in this way the paint will be evenly distributed, as well as cleaning out the mesh.

Enquirer, Peterborough.—Please tell me how to measure a hall and back stairway for to paper? Also how I can get the proper slant and height for one of them burlap dados?

Ans.—There are many methods for estimating the quantity of paper required to cover the ceiling and walls of a hall or room. It is simply a matter of getting the area in square feet. Ordinary Canadian or American papers are 18 inches wide, 24 feet long to the roll. English paper usually 21 inches wide, 36 feet long. French papers vary. Japanese is 36 inches wide by 36 feet long. So you can readily figure it out for yourself after you have found the area of the surface to be papered. With reference to the burlap dado. I presume you will have your dado 36 inches high (the usual height). Take a yard stick, and with a pencil mark the top (resting the yard stick on top of base board) on the level at the corner nearest the foot of the stairs, now set the yard stick on the base at the point where the stair stringer joins the base. Keep it perfectly upright, and work the top. Do the same at the top landing. Now snap a line by using a piece of string on which you have rubbed some charcoal or coloured chalk. Have some person hold one end on one mark. You draw the string tight and hold on the other mark. Then draw away the centre of the string and let snap, when a straight line will result. Then from point to point down the stairs and you have the stair rake perfectly. Of course if the stairs have a turn or have not an angle mitre, conditions will vary slightly. But the principle is the same.

Marjory X, Peterborough City.—Kindly inform me how to stain those dark irregular spots one sees on bamboo easels, paper racks, etc.

Ans.—Those marks are not stained, they are burnt. The Japanese are adept at this class of work, which can, with a little practice, be done by a novice, fairly well. Simply set the bamboo on a gas jet, when the flame will be divided and burn the wood. By using different shaped jets and with careful manipulation, many beautiful designs can be formed, and with various depths of tones. After the burning process oil or varnish the wood.

DO EMPLOYERS WANT WOMEN IN MEN'S PLACES?

The registration of women to fill the places of men enlisting for military service is being carried on by the Suffragists' War Auxiliary by Miss Elizabeth Boulton, 1 Cluny avenue. There are now two hundred women volunteers to fill the places of chauffeurs, stenographers, postmen and other men who are going to the front.

The Employment Department of the Women's Patriotic League has sent six women to work in a munition factory at Parry Sound, but Miss Boulton says that manufacturers as a rule do not seem anxious to employ women in the making of munitions. It seems that the women who have expressed themselves as eager to release men for service overseas have scarcely been given an opportunity to prove their willingness and capability.

Christmas Gifts Are Acknowledged

Many Donations Received by St. Vincent's Orphanage

The Sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage desire to thank most sincerely the following benefactors, who, by their generosity, aided in filling the Christmast stockings with the good things that made their young hearts glad.

Not the least of the little ones Yuletide pleasures was that afforded them by the kindness of Mr. C. Rutherford and family, who served the annual banquet at their own home on the Feast of the Holy Innocents, Dec. 28, 1915.

May all who participated in making the orphans happy be repaid by Him who has promised that even a cup of cold water given to the needy, shall not go unrewarded.

PRESENTATION TO REV. M. F. FITZPATRICK BY KNIGHTS OF COLUMBO

Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, who is removing from St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, to Medicine Hat, in the diocese of Calgary, was presented with a purse of gold by Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus, at their regular meeting, last night. Mr. Michael O'Brien made a very happy speech accompanying the presentation, which fell to Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald. Mr. J. O'Connell, G.K. presided, and, with other members, added to the expressions of esteem and love for Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, whose gift of oratory has illumined many assemblies of the local Council. His reply, last night, was warmly received.

"Do you believe that there is really something which can invariably tell when a man is lying?" "I know it." "Ah, perhaps you have seen one of the instruments?" "Seen one! I have married one."

LIGHT HARNESS COLTS SCARCE IN KENTUCKY

Another indication of the present high tide in the light harness business is the scarcity of colts to be found in the breeding farms in Kentucky. So many youngsters have been disposed of at private sales or at auctions last fall and this winter that there is a great dearth of young trotters and pacers left in the Blue Grass country.

Thus far about 100 colts were disposed of at the Old Glory sale in New York, 50 were shipped to the Chicago vendue recently, several were knocked down to the high bidder at the Lexington sale in October and others are about as good as sold, as they are billed for the February sale in Lexington.

These, with the various baby equines that were sold privately, have put a big hole in the juvenile ranks in Kentucky. Prices paid for yearlings, two and three years old, at the Old Glory sale, were far better than have been realised in many years.

It is understood that there are only four young Peter the Greats left at Patchen Wilkes farm. These include three weanlings and one yearling.

Military News - Continued

take charge of the detachment of the 93rd, stationed in that Village. Ptes. C. and R. Tanner and several other Apsley men in the 93rd have also been sent to Apsley on duty.

Gunner Harry Mann of the 33rd Battery, is being transferred to the 93rd Battalion.

By the kind permission of Col. Johnston, a squad of seventeen men will take part in the patriotic chorus, "Motherland" to be sung in San Toy on Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Several of the recently returned soldiers have been waiting for advice that sums of money due them by the military authorities should arrive. The information has reached the Patriotic Office that amounts have been forwarded to the Divisional Headquarters for the following men:

Gunner F. Somerville, Pte. Parrington, Gunner M. McGill, Corp. J. King, Pte. J. Fallen, Pte. H. Fitzclarence, Pte. Chas. Rae.

Divisional Headquarters is at Kingston, and it is quite likely that cheques will be forwarded individually to these men within the next few days.

Belgian Consul Further Assured

Received Word Again That Not an Ounce of Relief Food Goes to the Germans

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—M. Goor, Belgian Consul-General to Canada, has just received further assurance from the neutral members of the Belgian Relief Commission, through whom the relief to the thousands of famine-scourged Belgians is dispensed, that not an ounce of the supplies and food that has gone into the country has fallen into the hands of the Germans.

The Germans have violated all the laws that have previously governed warfare, all the laws of God and man, and have resorted to barbarity in its cruellist forms, but one trust they have kept and that is their pledge to leave untouched the food that is supplied Belgium. The invaders have robbed Belgium of the food she had stored and of the means the people had of purchasing food, but they have not prevented the food from entering the country through neutral channels.

Mr. Goor's information comes direct from officials in Belgium, and has been communicated to the treasurer of the Belgian Relief Committee's offices at 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal. With this renewed assurance that wheat sent from Canada does not go to feed the enemies of the Empire, it is anticipated that many more will join in the already large number of Canadians who have contributed the bags of flour, each of which keeps one Belgian family alive a month.

The three newspapers of this city—The Times, Review, and Examiner—have been authorized to receive subscriptions to this fund, or they may be sent direct to and cheques made payable to the Treasurer, Belgian Relief Fund, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

Coloured Paper Hard to Obtain

In order to show the difficulty under which every printer is labouring at the present time to secure coloured papers used by the trade, the following is an exact reproduction of a circular received by The Examiner this morning from one of our largest wholesalers, and which is an embodiment of similar circulars received daily from wholesalers and jobbers on the same subject.

Special Notice.

The Dye Situation having become acute, we are compelled to notify the trade that on and after this date all tinted and coloured papers are subject to an advance in price.

The advance varies from one-half cent per pound to one cent per pound on all light colours, and on deeper colours, such as Golden Rod, Red, Cherry, Greens, Browns, the prices have advanced from 1½ cents to 3½ cents per pound. The conditions are such that the mills cannot guarantee prices, nor can they guarantee to keep such colours as they do make uniform in shade. We would, therefore, ask our customers to make a special note, that any and all orders for coloured or tinted papers will be filled at such advance as may be necessary, and we would advise our customers, in quoting prices on tinted papers, that they protect themselves in regard to such advance as they may pay.

It is impossible for us to issue a price list on colours owing to the continued and growing scarcity of Dyes and the inability of the mills to replenish their stock.

CONCLUDING MEETING OF THE 1915 BOARD OF EDUCATION

School Attendance During December Affected by Measles, Inspector Reported — Usual Accounts Passed and Other Routine Business Done.

JANITOR GETS LEAVE

The last sands of the 1915 Board of Education ran out last night terminating Mr. John Smith's tenure in the administration of educational affairs in this city. All the members of the old Board were present, but it might have been a midseason session as far as any reference was made to the recent election. Prompt and punctual as usual the routine business was commenced on the dot, and the Board trimmed their sails to consider the budget tabled by Finance Minister Eastwood. Its details are published elsewhere and warrant a careful perusal by the citizens.

A favorable inspection report was presented of the boilers in the King George and Queen Mary schools.

Extend Nurse Treatment.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, secretary of the Board of Health forwarded the following extract from the annual report of the Medical Officer of Health.

"I wish to suggest that the School Boards of the city and suburban schools get together and make arrangements so that a school nurse is engaged to make visits to those schools not included in the present arrangements. If we leave the Collegiate Institute or any of the schools not visited, we weaken the whole principle of the working out of the same."

On motion of Mr. Gordon and Mr. Smith this was referred to the Supervision Committee for a report.

Janitor Given Leave.

Mr. W. H. Wilson, janitor at the Queen Alexandria school, tendered his resignation on account of ill health. He did not feel that he would be able to resume work until March.

Mr. Gordon moved that this matter be referred to its committee with power to grant leave of absence to Mr. Wilson for as long a period as they deemed fit.

Mr. Hill moved that Mr. Wilson be given leave without salary until Easter.

Mr. Gordon withdrew his motion and Mr. Hill's was passed.

South Central Change.

Dr. C. H. Amys, M. H. O., drew attention to a change in the ventilation system at the South Central school, which he had suggested, but which had not been effected, referred to Property Committee with power to act.

School Attendance.

The following report of Public School attendance during December was read:

	On Roll	Aver.
Central	433	392
Queen Alexandria	256	235
Queen Mary	377	338
King George	251	217
South Central	367	347
King Edward	496	377
	2190	1911
Kindergarten	198	167
	2318	2078

Fire drill was practiced in each of the schools during the month; time of such practices from 35 to 60 seconds.

The attendance of pupils was considerably affected by the prevelence of measles.

A MOWAT,
P.S.I.

Collegiate Attendance.

Mr. H. R. H. Kenner presented the following report of December attendance at the Collegiate Institute.

Moved by W. H. Hill.
Seconded by T. B. McGrath.
"That Mr. Mowat, B. A. be reappointed on the Public Library Board for the term of three years beginning 1st February, 1916."

MR. A. MOWAT, P. S. I.
Re-appointed by Board of Education to a three year term on the Public Library Board.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr. W. W. Lear, Port Plasford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made complete cure. With a grateful heart write you this letter."

Huge Sum For Hun Army

Germany has recognised the superlative value of sea power but while developing her armies at a record rate of expense she evidently could not spare enough money to enlarge the navy on the same grand scale. The following figures will show how disproportionate were the sums spent on the army to those spent on the navy:

	Army	Navy
1909	$217,150,000	$105,000,000
1910	202,650,000	105,500,000
1911	204,050,000	115,000,000
1912	236,300,000	117,000,000
1913	389,200,000	120,000,000

Thus in the last year of peace, more than three times as much money was going toward the support of the army as towards the enlargement of the naval establishment. While the outlays for the land forces increased by 1 1-2 those for the fleet were hardly augmented at all.

FORMER PETERBORO' MAN ON LICENSE BOARD

Mr. P. F. McWilliams Appointed by the Manitoba Government

The following despatch refers to Mr. R. F. McWilliams, barrister, formerly of this city:

Winnipeg, Jan. 4.—Government has appointed R. F. McWilliams, former Mayor of Peterborough, Ont., W. M. Bannatyne, and Dr. J. N. Hutchinson, license commissioners for the Province for 1916.

Mr. McWilliams has been in Winnipeg for about five years, and during that time has been in partnership with one of the best known law firms in the west.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

The inaugural meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday next. The committees will be struck in the morning, and will be followed in the evening by a regular meeting.

Garbage Collection.

People are slow to learn that the present by-law governing the collection of garbage does not require them to place the garbage on the street line. Three feet inside the house line is the requirement.

The New Contractor.

The present contract for the collection of garbage is now in the hands of Mr. K. Graham. His duties commenced on Monday and despite the fact that he is a new man on that particular job, is performing them to the satisfaction of Sanitary Inspector Spence.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

St. Catharines movies pay a license fee of $150 per year.

Had a Surplus.

Stayner's hydro-electric power commission ended the year $400 to the good, without one cent of arrears for light or power.

A Good Year.

Woodstock's public utilities had a good year. The waterworks showed a surplus of $9,000 and the electric light department $6,000.

Records Missing.

Waterworks records and plans which cost about $10,000, are missing at Calgary, and a plot is alleged to destroy them and give surveyors another year's work.

Finished With Balance.

London's public utilities commission ran the waterworks department with a gross surplus of $81,800 this year, turning over a balance of $14,000 when the debt charges were paid.

Mr. Hartley's Thanks

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBORO:

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I desire to extend my hearty thanks to the electors who gave me such loyal support in the election for mayor.

I feel satisfied with the verdict of the people and my best wishes will always be for the welfare of our city.

Yours truly, J. J. HARTLEY

Ald. Weir's Thanks

To the Electors:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I take this opportunity of thanking you for electing me your representative in Number Five ward, by acclamation.

Wishing you all a happy and prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours truly,
ARCHIE WEIR.

J. H. Smith's Thanks

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Though defeated, but not beaten, I wish to thank all those who so kindly supported me unsolicited on Monday for the Board of Education. I wish to state I was not running with any clique, and my only desire was to represent the city at large, and my only regret is that by my defeat, I left East City without a representative on the Board.

Sincerely yours,
J. H. SMITH.

Jas. Grant's Thanks

To the Electors of the Township of Smith:—

I wish to thank the electors of the Township of Smith for their generous support in the election for councillors on January 3rd.

JAS. GRANT,
Bridgenorth.

W. G. Howden's Thanks

To the Electors of North Monaghan:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—I desire to most sincerely thank you all for the large vote I obtained in the election for Reeve of our Township.

While I was not elected, the figures were so close as to make me greatly pleased with the support accorded me.

Yours faithfully,
W. G. HOWDEN.

CURLING

The first scheduled games were played at the Curling Rink last night, and most of them went to close finishes. The ice was fair, but it looks decidedly wet this afternoon, and will scarcely be fit for use to-night. The results were as follows:

A. Moore—4	W. M. Lang—14
H. F. Foote—7	Geo. Hill—12
R. M. Waddell—13	R. Neil—11
W. G. Morrow—10	J. W. McDermid 11
G. H. Giroux—9	H. R. Martin—10

Mr. R. M. Waddell, Umpire for District No. 2, announces the District Cup games for January 18th, the date of the Tankard Cup games. This will not occasion an unnecessary break in the scheduled games.

A new Ennie piano has been secured and the members of musical turn are expected to make use of it.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The many friends of Miss Flowers will regret to know of her illness at Nicholls Hospital.

Miss Rose and Neil Masterson have returned to Toronto after spending New Year's with their brother, Casey Masterson, Lake Street.

Dr. and Mrs. Weldon and Master Kenneth have returned to Toronto, after spending the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Gray, Harvey street.

Mr. Wroe Wright, late finisher at the Auburn Woollen Mills, has returned to Lawrence, Mass., after spending the past few days with his family in the city.

Mrs. Mills will be the hostess at the afternoon tea to be held to-morrow afternoon in the Oriental tea rooms, under the auspices of the 57th Chapter, Daughters of the Empire.

YOUR THOUGHTS ARE MAKING YOUR AURA

(By Antoinette Donnelly in Chicago Tribune.)

You have heard of the "colours of the rainbow," and have seen the glorious arc in the sky called by the Hebrews of old "God's covenant." Did you know that each of us is a human rainbow, with this difference: that in us the seven colors are not equally blended, but one colour predominates over the rest. This colour sheath around the human body is called the "aura."

It is no fantasy, but a fact well known to scientists, that your aura is determined by your thoughts, words and deeds. It is largely in your power to make your rainbow sheath glow with the lovely rose pink of affection, the tender blue of sincerity—"true blue" is its old fashioned name—and the sunny gold of justice, or fair dealing.

If your nature is above all things spiritual, those who can see your aura will describe it as like an amethyst, with light gleaming through it. Every shade of exquisite lavender and heliotrope down to the clearest violet and purest purple will encompass you all through life, and your presence will help to dispel the sombre effect of the petty cares which make up the daily round of life.

GREEN FOR OPTIMISM.

Persons of sullen or jealous temperament emit no glowing tints—only a dark, rusty red mixed with shades of dingy green. If you have a hopeful disposition and insist on showing only the silver lining of your clouds, a delicate, pale, diaphanous green, like the first young leaves of spring, will prevail in your auric colours.

Every man, woman and child has an aura peculiar to him or her, which extends some distance from the body and is oval in shape. If your sense of sight were clear enough to perceive this envelope of colour every person you meet would look like a more or less bright coloured egg. Fortunately for most of us, the gift of seeing auras is not common.

There is a reason, however, for your thinking beautiful thoughts, doing beautiful deeds, and saying kindly words. If you diffuse happiness and cheerfulness you are going to be thought a much more beautiful creature than the woman who diffuses depression and gloom, for your aura will be a bright and radiant colour, while hers will be ugly, dull and dingy.

10,000 MILES OF TRENCHES.

London, Jan. 4.—There are at least 10,000 miles of allies' trenches now in the western theatre of the European war, according to H. Warner Allen, special correspondent with the French army. He writes:

"In the section of the French lines that I have just been visiting there are already on a front of just over ten miles, 375 kilometres (or slightly over 234 miles), of trenches. In a short time there will be in that neighborhood 280 miles of trenches on ten miles of front.

"Elsewhere a certain division has 230 miles of trenches to look after, while a certain corps d'armee has 450 miles. There are 20 miles of trenches to every mile of front, so that between Switzerland and the North Sea, the British and the French armies have at least 10,000 miles of trenches to guard and keep in order."

WEDDING BELLS

DOLBY—PENROSE.
ROBSON—WHEELER.

A double wedding was solemnized at Knox Church, this morning, at 7.30, when Miss Myrtle L. Penrose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Penrose, 548 Sherbrooke Street, became the bride of Mr. Robert Dolby of Peterborough, and Miss Violet Wheeler was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Robson. Both young couples were unattended. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. McKenzie, B.A. Mr. and Mrs. Dolby and Mr. and Mrs. Robson left on the 8.10 train for a short honeymoon in Cobourg. On their return they will reside in this city.

OBITUARY

MRS. JAMES STRATTON.

One of the very oldest pioneer residents of Peterborough passed away this morning at the family residence, Ardyn, Gilmour street, in the person of Mrs. Rosanna Armstrong Stratton, widow of the late James Stratton.

The deceased lady was a daughter of the late William Armstrong, and of his wife, Anne Brown, sister of John Brown, founder of Port Hope. She was born in Peterborough on May 16th, 1825, on Water street, in a long disappeared residence, that stood near where the court house then stood. Her father kept the first large general store in Peterborough, which afterwards became the then well known store of Nicholls & Hall.

After the death of the mother, the Armstrong family removed to Cavan, where they remained till their removal to California at the time of the gold excitement in 1851. Miss Armstrong however, remained, and the day the family left for the west, she was united in marriage to the late James Stratton, the ceremony having been performed in the Episcopal church, Port Hope. Soon after the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Stratton removed to Peterborough, where the latter purchased the Examiner, and where the family have ever since lived, and where Mr. Stratton died at the present family residence in 1880. To this marriage were born nine children, of whom six are still living. The eldest daughter, Frances A., who married the lately deceased Rev. Dr. Campbell, died in 1874. In 1904 W. A. Stratton, barrister, passed away, and six years later, in 1910, Dr. Edward Stratton died. The surviving members of the family are, Hon. J. R. Stratton, at present at Hot Springs, Arkansas, Mrs. J. B. (Dr.) Hunter, Miss Roey, Miss Mary, Mr. A. H. Stratton, and Mrs. T. F. Matthews.

In religious faith the late Mrs. Stratton was a lady of strong convictions, to which she showed a striking fidelity. In early life she was an Episcopalian "of the strictest sort," brought up under the pastoral influence of the late Rev. Dr. Armour, and in her subsequent life she never lost interest and faith in the principles of the church. After her marriage she became actively associated with the Baptist church, serving it with the same loyalty of sentiment and practice. Her religious character was a strong one, and though she stood unflinchingly to her convictions, she had a beautifully broad Christian charity and recognized good in others and gave credit for honesty of purpose and conduct. These characteristics begot a beautiful optimism that saw the best in all her associations, and made her content with the conditions of her daily life and brought a happiness, that can only come from a deep divine trust, cheerful temperament and well-founded Christian character. She had many friends, because she made and kept friends; she was loved and respected; only getting what she gave. Her life was long and uneventful, though full of all the great events that constitute the real life. She had her share of sorrows; she saw husband and children pass away; but she had her compensations: she also saw her children grow into the useful and honoured life of citizenship in several prominent capacities, and she always found herself the centre of a family affection and devotion, that lengthened while it cheered her life. One of the comforting and cheering influences of her last hours, was to see about her the loving faces and feel the touch of the tender hands of most of her surviving children.

She has enjoyed generally excellent health, and this, in addition to a robust constitution and cheerful disposition, she owed very largely to the unremitting care and devotion of her daughters, which sheltered her from every influence that could interfere with health or physical comfort or satisfying affection. If any have realized to the full the meaning of a serene and happy old age, it is the late Mrs. Stratton.

Funeral from the family residence, 566 Gilmour street, on Friday, Jan. 7th, 1916, at 2.30 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

BABY SWEET.

The death occurred of Baby Sweet, infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Sweet, Brownton, this afternoon.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

Song Service At S. A. Temple

A splendid programme will be rendered at the S. A. Temple to-morrow (Thursday) night at 8 o'clock. It will be the best number given last week at the Christmas entertainment of the three S. A. WAR ANOTHER YEAR, MARCONI PREDICTS

Germans Sick of It, and Ready to Make Peace, But Upon Impossible Terms

Will Meet Allies' Determination with Determination, but Must Be Worn Out in the End.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—Upon his return to London to-day from a month's trip to Italy and elsewhere on the continent, Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless telegraphy, and now a Second Lieutenant in the Italian Army, replying to a query put by the London correspondent of the New York Times, expressed the belief that there was no likelihood of the war being finished within another year.

While Germany seemed ready to make peace now, he said, the Allies were bound to ignore any such overture, for the reason that Germany was not inclined to agree to any terms that would be acceptable.

"The plain fact," he said, "is that Germany, or a majority of the German people, is sick of the war. The people are tired of the slaughter of men, weary of a struggle that seems to have no end in sight. While that is the prevailing feeling in Germany to-day, it will shift to one of bitter resolve to see the war won when all of Germany realizes that the Allies are intent on beating Germany, and that the Allies will not accept any half-way peace terms.

"The bulk of Germany's population believe that Germany has accomplished enough to enable her to dictate terms advantageous to herself. They have the false idea that the Allies ought to be ready to quit now. They will all pull together for German victory, even harder than ever, when the grim determination of the Allies dawns on their minds.

"So the war will have to go on, and I fail to see any prospect of the end of it by next winter. From observations I've made everywhere, I'm sure the conflict will be carried on, regrettable as it is, beyond next Christmas. Ultimately the side stronger in men and finances must win, and that's the Allies.

"Germany cannot go on indefinitely with the terrific strain on her financial resources, while every one knows the drain upon her men is terrible. Britain has money to finance the war, and upon her the financial pressure must come hardest of all of the Allies. Russia, France, and Italy have men, while Britain is throwing her own into the field, too. As the months go by this bulk of men and money is bound to win the war for the Allies, but it is going to be an awful drain on all the nations before victory comes.

"The year drawing to a close has been a bitterly disappointing one for the Allies. Germany has made great headway, although not entirely in the direction she wanted to go. But she's got Poland and she still holds Belgium, while Serbia is crushed. If Germany could make peace to-day I believe she would be willing to give up Belgium, but she would insist upon holding part, if not all, of Poland, and upon getting back Alsace-Lorraine from France and her South African colonies from England. Such a silly peace never would be accepted by the Allies.

"To make victory sure the Quadruple Alliance must move in precise accord until the end, each making a heroic sacrifice of men and financial sinews. Political upsets only retard the concerted action so supremely necessary. There must be no more mistakes of diplomacy.

"Italy is throwing all her energy into the war. Already she has 3000,000 men in arms. She will hold Albania and help Salonika, if need be. But I don't think Italian aid is needed for Salonika, for the British and French seem capable of holding their own. I don't believe the Germans will get into Greece.

"Difficult times are ahead in the western theatre of war next Spring and Summer, with the Germans trying to push through the allied lines in France, but the Allies undoubtedly will be able to successfully resist them."

Mr. Marconi is wearing mufti on this visit home instead of his Italian regimentals.

RUSSIA IS IN TO THE END.

London, Jan. 4.—During a review of the Russian army on Jan. 2, Emperor Nicholas delivered an address to the Chevaliers of the Order of St. George, saying:

"To you as the most valiant representatives of our army, I offer my most cordial and profound appreciation of your services, which in this campaign have been full of bravery and sacrifices. I beg you to transmit to your respective regiments my sincere gratitude for your painful efforts which have succeeded, as all Russia, as well as I, understands, and rest assured that, as I said at the beginning of the war, I will not conclude peace until we have expelled the last enemy from our territory, and I will only conclude peace with the full accord of our allies, to who we are bound, not by paper treaties, but by real friendship and blood.

"I ask you personally to convey to all my troops my recognition of their devoted service, which gladdens my heart. May God protect you."

Krivolak in the Balkans A Drear Picture As War Engulfs Town

Debarkation Point of French in Balkans is Small and Unclean---How Order is Kept by Serbian Guerilla

KRIVOLAK, Jan. 6.—Krivolak is the debarkation point of the French armies in the field in the Balkan campaign. As a village it is small and unclean, with more the character of a Turkish or a Bulgarian than a Serbian town. There are no accommodations for anybody. The railway station, with its chimney knocked down by a Bulgarian shell, is the most imposing building. To the east is the Vardar, still swollen with rains, shifting, uncertain, narrow, deep.

To the north, where the Vardar bends in a westerly direction, is what the French call "The English Bridge"—a pontoon structure for the building of which the British army lent the men and the materials. To the southeast is a hill, commanding as an artillery position every nook and corner of the curve of the river. To the north beyond the Vardar is the key of the whole French position—the mountain of Kara Hodzali.

Strong as the point is naturally—and the French Balkan campaign so far almost has confined itself to the tactics of occupying and holding if possible the maximum number of strong natural positions—it is open to hostile bombardment from the hills on the opposite shore of the river. A few moments ago half a dozen large calibre shells fell in the river near the English bridge. Just now one has fallen on the hillside to the southeast of the station.

Constantly the bridge, the station and the railroad are the mark of Bulgarian long range artillery. But the mark is too distant. The Bulgarian artillery fire generally is excellent, but it lacks the scientific accuracy of the French, and as yet the Bulgars have no aeroplanes to verify their fire as the French have. So Krivolak remains unharmed. Soon the hills to the east are to be cleaned of their batteries. Then Krivolak will be tranquil.

LONG RIDGE FROM SALONIKA.

"All lights out," he ordered. "From here on the railway is within range interminable. Fifteen hours to do seventy-five miles. The French complain bitterly that the delay is in the Greek end of the line. Already French engineers are double-tracking the railroad from the Greek-Serbian frontier, north.

There are no fixed train lines. On the return journey it is the transport of the wounded—of armies needing repair, of empty rolling stock, of which there is too little. There is but one passenger coach on the train, crowded with officers charged with the communications of the various armies engaged—for the telegraph wires also are uncertain—with sanitary officers, medical officers, commissary staff and a few civilians bound for Greek villages between Salonika and the frontier. The station at Salonika is a military one, a couple of miles from the town, in the midst of fields flowering with the tents of the British, finally beginning to move toward the front.

The train is long—all freight cars save the one reserved for the more distinguished. But almost all of the freight cars have their human load as well. The men sleep on straw on the floor throughout the wearisome journey.

At Strumitza station a Serbian officer comes quietly down the corridor. "All light out," he ordered. "From here on the railway is withing range of the enemy. They generally drop a few at passing trains if they see them." The order seems superfluous in view of the fact that the car is unprovided with any lighting system—or at least any that works. But a few men have provided themselves with candles and it is these that must be extinguished.

WHERE SERB GUERILLA RULES.

Slowly the train approaches Kilometre 68, where the railway crosses the Vardar to the side of the Bulgars. The bride was destroyed three years ago in the last Balkan war, and has not been properly rebuilt since. The train creeps across it. The swirling waters of the Vardar are white in the moonlight. Against a sand bar the current has washed three black objects. Logs? As the trains pass close to them those who have looked out of the train windows see that one of the black objects ends in a white oval—a face upturned to the moon. The eyes are black shadowed holes. The mouth is wide open. A mat of hair alternately covers and reveals the wet glittering forehead in time with the little backwaters of the river from the sand bar.

"Good God, what are those?"

"Some of Babounsky's acquaintances," says the French officer. Babounsky is a Serbian guerilla. He has no standing in the laws of war, but he isn't a bad sort, and he administers a very rude but a very effective sort of justice hereabouts. A good many of the inhabitants of this part of Serbia are Bulgars you know—and there is no end of spying and general lawlessness going on. Babounsky looks after that. A lot of Serbs have fled, leaving all their belongings. The temptations for the Bulgarians who remain is great. But if Babounsky catches them—and he generally does—their shrift is short. He sends them to Salonika, as he calls it. The Frenchman jerked his thumb over his shoulder towards the river just passed.

"Those are on their way to Salonika," he added.

Russians Bombard Austrian Positions in Bukowina

Eight Successive Infantry Attacks Followed---German Armed Steamer Surrenders to the British Naval Expedition in Africa---New Conscription Law in Effect Only Till Conclusion of the Present War.

LATE WAR DESPATCHES

VIENNA, Jan. 6.—Russians bombarded Austrian positions in Bukowina for hours followed by eight successive infantry attacks. Austrian lines held under most difficult circumstances in Galicia.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—John Redmond expressed regret at Ireland's non-support of conscription, but believes there are more soldiers now than can be handled.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The German armed steamer Kingani has surrendered to the British naval expedition in Africa, it was officially announced.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—President Wilson announced the calling of the Cabinet Friday morning to determine the submarine policy.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—In explaining his resignation from the Government Sir John Simon said conscription could only be enforced in any country with the entire consent of the people, and this was impossible in Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—British officers seized the papers of Captain Franz Von Papen returning to Germany on the Noordam.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Lord Kitchener declared that the new conscription law is in effect only till the conclusion of the present war.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Telegram has following special cable from its London correspondent to-day; "Considered as a signal of Divine providence protecting the British Empire in the present struggle is the second escape of King George from a fatal accident in two months. "Though warned by an old peasant prophetess that some special danger threatened his Majesty about New Year, neither the King nor his suite placed credence in the augury. The King who happened to be staying at Sandringham on that date was out driving in the park in the afternoon in very high wind, with some rain. Soddenly, as the royal equipage was opposite a big elm the tree came crashing down, killing the horse and coachman, smashing the carriage, and just grazing the King who, however, got off without even a scratch.

"The Sovereign assured his aides he required no attention and immediately busied himself seeing to the unfortunate coachman by whose fate he was deeply affected."

German Armed Steamer Captured By the British

Fifth Boat From the Str. Persia Has Arrived at Malta—Italy Has Promised Greece That Her Forces Will Not Advance Beyond the Northern Epirus

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A German armed steamer has been captured by a British naval expedition on Lake Tanganyika, Central Africa.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A fifth boat from the steamer Persia has arrived at Malta and a sixth, it is believed, succeeded in getting away.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—It is officially announced that the Germans renewed attacks in the Tahure region, all of which were repulsed.

LONDON, Jan. 6. — One thousand skilled Canadian mechanics have been released for munition work at the request of Lloyd George.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The submarine which sank the Persia is generally believed to have been a German one.

OWEN SOUND, Jan. 6.—A special recruiting train through Grey county yesterday gathered in one hundred and fifty recruits.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Italy has promised Greece that her forces will not advance beyond the Northern Epirus frontier.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

Greece Prepares To Ask Allies For Loan

PARIS, Jan. 6—The Petit Parisien declares that a note which Mr. Romanos, Greek Minister to France, handed to Mr. Briand, the Premier, protesting against the arrest of the German and other consuls at Salonica as a "violation of Greece's neutrality," was couched in much sharper terms than the Greek complaints to Berlin and Vienna regarding the Teutonic aerial raid on Salonica.

The newspaper adds that the Greek treasury "is getting empty and the government is thinking of applying to the Entente Allies for a loan, which, however is unlikely to be granted."

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Jan. 4.—Mrs. E. White and son Master Willie were the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Byres of Toronto, during the past week.

Wasn't Satisfied.

Young Jock had just returned from a painful interview with the minister to whom he had said in reply to a question that there were 10 commandments. Upon meeting another lad on his way to the minister he asked: "An' if he asks you how many commandments there are, what will ye say?"

"Say?" queried the other lad. "Why, ten, o' course."

"Ten!" retorted the first youth in scorn. "Ten? Ye will say hunt wi' ten? I tried him wi' a hundred and he wasna satisfied."—Harper's Magazine.

Says the Kaiser Has Cancer and Cannot Speak

Leading Specialists in Europe Have Been Consulted Regarding the Affection to His Throat

PARIS, Tuesday, Jan. 4— (Delayed.)—The Matin affirms, notwithstanding denials, that the German Emperor is suffering from cancer of the throat and is no longer able to speak.

"In February, 1911," according to the Matin, "the physicians were considering whether it was necessary to remove the entire larynx in order to stay the progress of the disease. That raised the question as to whether the Emperor would be able to speak if such an operation were performed. The leading specialists of every capital in Europe were consulted.

"It was learned that an eminent surgeon of Paris had, with an artificial larynx and a breathing tube opening into the trachea, restored the power of speech to cancerous patients who had undergone total ablation of the affected organs.

"This surgeon, whose name the Matin withholds for reasons of professional etiquette, was asked to go to Berlin by the German Ambassador. He was offered 100,000f. ($20,000) and all his expenses, and was requested to bring with him a patient who had been fitted with the apparatus, so that the Emperor himself might see if he was able to speak.

"Meanwhile, as a result of a minor operation with a bistoury and a few weeks' absolute rest, the Emperor's condition improved, as is often the case in this disease, the progress of which is implacable, but slow. It is another operation of this kind which has just been performed. But it is only palliative. The German Emperor must either make up his mind to complete removal of the larynx or be stifled by the growth.

"This explains why the Emperor went neither to Warsaw, Constantinople nor Brussels."

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother. See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs," because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

A Proof of True Love.—Little Edna one day turned to her mother, who was a widow, and said—"Mamma, do you really and truly love me?" "Why of course, my dear! Why do you ask?" "nd will you prove it to me?" "Yes if I can." "Then go and marry the man around the corner who keeps the candy store."

No "White Sales" in Berlin in Year

BERLIN, via London, Jan. 6.—The inventory sales, which at this season of the year usually crowd the streets of the shopping districts with bargain hunters have been prematurely ended this year by an order of the military authorities forbidding during January all kinds of special sales, such as inventory and season sales, also linen sales, peculiar to Berlin and Paris under the name of "white week" sales and other specially advertised closing out sales.

The prohibition also affects advertisements of reduced prices on woven and knit goods and clothing made of them. The downtown district, which yesterday, the first day of the inventory sales, was unusually crowded, to-day bore a decidedly subnormal appearance.

That is to submit to themselves, as they think they find themselves, or struggle for the best in life.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"And you, too," Unterberg went on—"you too. You try to steal my trade. You come here with your samples and your impudence and take away my best customers."

"Ain't it an open market?" Morris asked, but Unterberg brooked no interruption. Besides, he had just conceived a happy idea.

"Yes," he continued, "you come here to Kugel & Fishblatt, one of my best and oldest customers; always buy of me a big bill of goods—a thousand, two thousand; bought a thousand of me this morning, and always prompt pay. And you try to take 'em away under my very nose."

"Ain't it an open market?"

"Mr. Unterberg, do me the favor," Morris commenced again conciliatingly. He renewed his clutch on Unterberg's elbow, but the latter shook himself free and strode angrily away. Morris gased after him, shrugged once or twice and, resuming his sample case, continued toward the buyers' office, with his assistant close at his heels. Mr. Fishblatt greeted him in person.

"Ah, Mr. Perlmutter," he said, extending a large patronizing hand, "glad to see you, even though I'm afraid I can't do much business with you today. We're somewhat overstocked in our cloak department."

"Mr. Fishblatt, don't say that!" Morris cried. "A busy concern like this ain't never overstocked. Wait, now, just a moment, and I'll show you our style forty-twenty-two, especially in sizes sixteen, seventeen and eighteen."

Mr. Fishblatt leisurely examined Perlmutter's line, and when Morris departed he had procured a record breaking order. It had been obtained only after much protest from Mr. Fishblatt and a great deal of anxious persuasion by Morris, so that he felt justly proud of his achievement.

"Well, Mawruss," Abe said ironically as his partner re-entered the store, "I suppose you got rid of all them forty-twenty-twos."

"Why not?" Morris murmured.

"A fine chance," Abe retorted bitterly.

"And all sixteens, seventeens and eighteens," Morris went on calmly; "also them old princess styles and one gross style forty-one-twenty-five."

Abe's lower jaw dropped.

"You struck it good, Mawruss, what?" he said.

For answer Morris spread out to his partner's astonished gaze a thousand dollar order.

"Mr. Fishblatt himself gave it to me," Morris said.

Abe took the paper and read it over twice; then he went to the customers' E to J first and second credit box and lit himself a fine cigar. For ten minutes he blew reflective rings at the patent sprinkler and finally gave voice to his thoughts.

"Mawruss," he said, "the Boston Store done always a good business, ain't it?"

"Yes," Morris replied.

"And Kugel & Fishblatt is two pretty good smart boys, ain't it?"

"Sure."

"And always pays prompt, ain't it?"

"That's right," said Morris.

"Then why is it they never buy nothing but seconds from us in two and three hundred dollar orders, and today they jumped us to a thousand? It looks suspicious anyhow, ain't it?"

Then it was that Morris told of his encounter with Unterberg.

"Abe, I give you my word," he said, "he abused me like a pickpocket. He says I'm always stealing his best customers. He just sold 'em a big bill this very morning, and you know, Abe, if Kugel & Fishblatt was at all shaky Philip Unterberg ain't looking for no orders from them. He gets it good last week already from Mengel Bros. & Gunst, and he ain't taking no more chances, ain't it?"

"You're right, Mawruss," Abe replied. "Philip Unterberg ain't going to get bitten twice. If Philip Unterberg can sell 'em, I guess we can, too; what? Vy don't you say somedings?"

"Sure," Morris agreed.

Inside of ten days the Boston Store, Kugel & Fishblatt, proprietors, received the last shipment of the Potash & Perlmutter order.

One morning, six weeks later, Abe Potash came down early, and proceeded at once to open the firm's mail. First he shuffled the envelopes over, but on none of them could he see the trademark of Kugel & Fishblatt. By the time his partner arrived he had opened every letter. Not one envelope contained the information that he desired.

"Mawruss," he said, "why ain't we got no check from Kugel & Fishblatt yet? Their account is two weeks overdue."

"You must have always something to worry about," Morris replied. "They're all right. I seen Philip Unterberg this morning. He don't look worried. Why, he smiled at me and shook hands like we was lodge brothers."

"I know," Abe said. "That's all right, too; but just the same I like to see a check from them people. I ain't feeling good about that account, Mawruss. I'm feeling rotten."

Morris said nothing, but busied himself about the stock. He was engaged in bullying the shipping clerk, when a shriek, half rage, half despair, came from the office. Morris took the intervening fifty feet in six jumps, and found Abe seated in his revolving chair brandishing the Daily Trade Register.

"What's the matter?" Morris asked, but the unfortunate Potash was too busy fighting off an imminent fit of apoplexy to reply. Instead he pointed a trembling forefinger at a black headline on the front page of the paper:

BIG DRY GOODS FAILURE—BOSTON STORE SUSPENDS.

Kugel & Fishblatt, Proprietors, File Petition in Bankruptcy.

IV.

There was a notable gathering of jobbers and wholesalers at the first meeting of the Boston Store's creditors which occurred a month later. Abe and Morris were both there, and they vainly scanned the faces of the assembled host for the features of Philip Unterberg. They also made careful examination of the schedules of indebtedness, but nowhere could they find the name Unterberg.

"Ain't Philip Unterberg in it with the rest of us?" Abe inquired in trembling tones of Louis Marcus, a fellow creditor, who was standing near by.

"Why, no," said Marcus. "I seen him yesterday, and he told me that the last time he was in Kugel & Fishblatt's he collected a hundred dollar bill that was three weeks overdue. He said he met Morris going in and wanted to give him warning, but he forgot about it. He says, too, that I should tell you from him that Kugel & Fishblatt is two good, bright boys, only they ain't exactly millionaires. But so far what Unterberg bears, they ain't never done nobody for a cent up to now. Unterberg also says that I should tell you from him that any goods what you might of sold Kugel & Fishblatt you shouldn't be afraid for, because it won't be no use."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This puts the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

SIR JOHN FRENCH IN HIS NEW COMMAND.—On the 15th of December, Field Marshall Sir John French assumed his new command as chief of the armies in the United Kingdom, after seventeen months on the field as commander-in-chief of the British Expeditionary Forces in France. Our unrivalled picture service connections enables us to publish to-day the above first picture of Britain's popular soldier at his desk in his new position.

LANDSTRUM'S YULETIDE FEAST IS TEARFUL

With the Crown Prince of Bavaria's Army in Belgium, Dec. 25. (by Courier to Berlin.)—ast night, when I passed from the rain, chill, and cheerlessness of the out-of-doors, smelling of death and war, into the cozy, warm, light-flooded hall where a large Landstrum family was gathered about its Christmas tree, trying hard to seem merry away from home in the enemy's land, and most honestly failing, I felt that my long journey to take part in a German soldiers' Christmas tree was to be—as it was—well rewarded.

The Germans had tried to take away the French atmosphere of the place and make it feel like Germany by screening the clean, whitewashed walls with evergreen boughs, by draping rainbow-coloured paper garlands from pillar to pillar, by hanging up chromos of Hindenburg and the Kaiser in the proportion of two to one, but chiefly by the star attraction, a bit twelve-foot hundred-candle-power Christmas tree dressed in Teuton tinsel.

On a raised stage in a corner of the room was posted a little eight-piece German band, recruited from the Landsturm ranks. The company, 250 strong, sat at fourteen long, bare, pine-board tables in military order, one squad per table, with their officers and their American guests at the head. Other long tables were burdened with "Liebesgaben," (love-gifts), from home, each batch labeled with the name of the recipient and arranged according to squads.

But one's neutral interest in the proceedings was whetted chiefly by the thought that the festival of this Landsturm company, ready instantly to respond to an alarm, was typical of the German soldiers' Christmas in the field; that the same songs were being sung, the same trees were shining—a hundred thousand of them—from the Swiss border to the Belgian Coast, from the North Sea to the Baltic, across the wasted Russian plains to Galicia, and along the Greek border.

A programme of fifteen numbers opened with a military march. Then a Landsturm private who in peace times is a professor at Gottingen, read a Christmas message from the Gospel, while the grizzled Landsturmers sat with heads bowed over large beakers of their favourite brew. Then a field-gray choir of twenty voices intoned an anthem, after which the stage was cleared for their Captain, who made a short address. In peace times this gray-haired reserve officer is a bookseller and publisher.

His only son having just fallen in battle, his voice quivered a bit as he led off with "My dear, brave Landsturm company. But his audience was with him, and he had the happy faculty of expressing the thoughts in every man's mind there.

"If any one had told us a year ago," he said, 'that we should spend our second Christmas here in the enemy's land we should have thought him mad."

The Landsturmers nodded in solemn assent. The Captain then painted a picture of their families about the home Christmas trees, and the bearded veterans brushed away furtive tears with their heavy hands. The tears ceased to be furtive when the Captain spoke of dead comrades and of fatherless and husbandless homes, where this Christmas was one of heavy hearts. The Landsturm men swallowed hard, particularly the huskiest of them all, a six-foot-five musketeer, bulked proportionately. He was the right wing man and the pride of the company rejoicing in the nickname of "Chicken," because of his prowess in disposing of poultry. He, too, sat with his face buried in his hands; for the German is not only intensely sentimental, but makes no attempt to hide his feelings.

But "The Chicken," and his comrades straightened out rigidly, and their relaxed features hardened grimly as their captain, having worked the vox humana to the limit, sounded the stern call of duty. "Germany is fighting for her existence against a world of enemies," he said, "against four continents—some say five"—this last being a veiled reference to American ammunition, which courtesy to the guests prevented being put more specifically and pungently.

Then the Captain, snapping his words like a lash, pictures the war-ravaged countryside and mentions the neighbouring French villages where they have fought and bled in the past year.

"Thank God!" he says, "that German homes and German women have been spared this fate! Continue to do your duty and hold out, no matter how long this terrible, useless bloodshed may last."

Man's Inconsistency—Bride: There I knew how it would be. We have not been married a month, and already you have ceased to care for me." Young husband—"Why, my love, what can you be thinking of? You are dearer to me than ever." "It isn't so; I know it isn't. You took meals at our house lots of times before we were married, and you scarcely touched anything. Ma said she knew you were truly in love because you had no appetite." "Of course, dear, but—". "nd now you are actually complaining just because I forgot to get anything for breakfast."

Shook His Head.—Johnny stood beside his mother as she made her selection from the greengrocer's cart, and the latter told the boy to take a handful of nuts, but the child shook his head. "What's the matter? Don't you like nuts?" asked the greengrocer. "Yes," replied Johnny. "Then go ahead and take some." Johnny hesitated, whereupon the greengrocer put a generous handful in the boy's cap. After the man had driven on the mother asked: "Why didn't you take the nuts when he told you?" Johnny winked as he said: "'Cause his hand was bigger'n mine."

It Was on a Local Train.—The ancient engine having wheezed laboriously over equally ancient rails, jolted to a restful spot at no place in particular. Time passed tediously. Some of the passengers looked anxiously out of the windows, while others drew hats down over their eyes and tried to forget it. When a half-hour had elapsed the guard came along. "Hi, guard," said a querulous-voiced old man who had been invited to partake of the Christmas fare at a very old friend's, and feared he would miss the dinner, "as near as you can tell, what's the trouble?" "We're taking in water," was the explanation. "Well, why on earth don't you get another tea-spoon?"

Mamma—"Oh, George, poor little Johnny has jammed his finger in the door." Papa—"Indeed? Which door?" Johnny (sobbing)—"It was the—the—pa-pa-n-try d-door!" Papa (grimly)—"Ah, I thought so! He didn't get the sort of jam he was looking for that time."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Edward Temple, Scamp

Showing How Sometimes a Rogue Will Win

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

Ned Temple at twenty-one inherited a fortune, which he proceeded to spend lavishly. Ned was one of those lovable fellows who cannot refuse any one a favor, and the most of his money went in satisfying the cravings of the needy and in loans to his supposed friends. When his money was all gone he proceeded to live on credit, and when his credit was gone the bailiffs got after him.

One of Ned's creditors, his tailor, whose profits on Ned's orders had been large, not being especially grateful for past favors, trumped up a charge of swindling against him in order to force him to pay a bill of $16 and swore out a warrant for his arrest. Ned got wind of the matter, and, throwing a few articles into a suit case, he made for a train and the same evening found himself in another city.

He had been there before in his halcyon days and had spent a lot of money there. Not having a cent in his pocket, he was obliged to find shelter and food by means of his assurance. Marching into a club where he had several times been "put up" by a friend, he called the gentleman up on the telephone and desired the same favor. Not succeeding in getting him, Ned told the manager that his former introducer would be around in the morning to introduce him again.

During the evening he fell in with Lord Tinterton, a young English nobleman, who possessed letters of introduction to prominent American families. One of these was to the Merriweathers. Ned had heard that there were several pretty girls in the family, and it occurred to him to put in a brief period as a guest at their house by borrowing his lordship's letter. Tinterton, being assured that Ned wished the introduction to assist him in a love affair, consented. Ned sat down to a table, wrote a note on club stationery, inclosed the letter and dispatched it by special messenger.

The next morning Miss Grace Merriweather was driven up to the club in a limousine, and the chauffeur called for Lord Tinterton. Ned, who was on watch, responded, went out to the car and was invited to transfer himself during his stay in the city to the Merriweather domicile. Returning to the club, he left word for his friend, who was to "put him up," that he would not be able to avail himself of his kind act. Then a servant carried his suit case to the car and he and Miss Merriweather were driven away.

Miss Merriweather proposed a drive before going home, to which Ned cheerfully assented, and before they drew up at her residence the couple had entered upon a desperate flirtation. No one could spend an hour with Ned without a flirtation, and to girls he was irresistible. He remained all of three days with the Merriweathers, then received a letter from a friend to whom he had loaned $500, containing a check for the amount. He bade goodby to his hosts and, returning to the city, showed himself boldly on the street, stopping at the tailor's to settle his bill.

In the three days spent with the Merriweathers Ned had carried Miss Grace completely off her feet and had left her engaged to him as Lord Tinterton. Had not the scamp been oblivious to future exposure he would have been much troubled, for he could not always remain a lord and his deception must soon come out.

However, he forgot the deception with as much ease as he forgot his debts. He was recalled to the former by receiving a note from Miss Merriweather addressed to him as Lord Tinterton, expressing wonder and reproach that he had not written and summoning him to her presence at once on pain of having their engagement broken. Ned had enough left of the loan repaid him on which to make the journey and took the next train to visit his fiancee.

Now, it happened that soon after Ned had left Miss Merriweather she had heard that Lord Tinterton was being entertained socially in the city, and naturally she wondered. Ned had seen Tinterton before going home, thanked him for the loan of his letter, which he returned to him, informing him at the same time that it had enabled him to pass several days with the girl he loved and begged his lordship not to give him away. Tinterton, who was a jolly good fellow and a bit of a scamp himself, promised that on no account would he see Ned suffer if he could help it.

One morning Tinterton received a note from Miss Grace Merriweather stating that a man had delivered a letter of introduction from him to her family. He seemed to be an entirely different person from the one she now addressed. Would he kindly explain?

Tinterton saw at once that Temple was on the brink of exposure and, remembering his promise, racked his brains for a method to protect the man who had used his letter. He finally wrote Miss Meriweather that he would explain the matter on her promise to keep it a secret. Receiving an assenting reply to this, he wrote her that he was Lord Tinterton's secretary and that his lordship had brought him to America with him for the express purpose of personating him at such times as he might wish to escape the attentions of "tuft hunters." Lord Tinterton was a very retiring man and, having found himself importuned to accept invitations that would be irksome to him, had requested his secretary to relieve him of the onus, thereby sparing his lordship the necessity of offending a number of persons. The secretary closed his letter by stating that he hoped the lady would be careful not to let the matter get out, since his lordship had so far honored him as to tell him that he had won the heart and hand of one of America's fairest daughters and an exposure during Tinterton's absence might cause a good deal of trouble. The note was signed "Henry Brewerton, secretary."

When Ned returned to his fiancee she told him of her correspondence with his secretary and expressed a desire to see the man who had been so successful in personating him. Ned held his breath till the story was finished, then remarked with perfect assurance that Brewerton was very useful to him when an avalanche of invitations came down, and he didn't know what he would do without him. He came of an excellent family in England, and his breeding rendered him capable of playing the part of a king.

Miss Meriweather approved his lordship's plan of escaping the hordes of persons who were hunting him and expressed a desire to meet his secretary. She asked his lordship to extend to Mr. Brewerton an invitation for tea to dinner. At this Ned looked blank, but only for a moment, saying that he would be most happy to do so. He was commissioned to ask Mr. Brewerton to dine on the first day that he had no other engagement.

On leaving his fiancee Ned at once sought Lord Tinterton and pressed his hand gratefully, praising his marvelous tact and ingenuity in getting him out of the scrape. "But we are not out of the woods," said Ned. "There are more quicksands to get over. I say this because by your letter to Miss Meriweather you are now involved with me. I have promised to bring you—my secretary—ha, ha!—to dine with my fiancee. Isn't it funny?"

"But, man," said his lordship earnestly, "when are we going to reach the denouement?"

"The denouement! There is an adage 'Never try to cross a bridge till you get to it.' Let that be our guide."

His lordship was not reassured by this, but since he saw no way out of the matter and had the advantage of being the real lord, while Ned was the spurious one, he gave him authority to accept the dinner invitation for him.

It is to be confessed that, notwithstanding this advantage, Tinterton on meeting Miss Meriweather was more ease than Ned, who introduced him with a flourish and bestowed upon him encomiums that made his lordship wince, considering that he was simply a man of the world bent on pleasure. But when the lady indicated by her manner that she was especially taken with the secretary it was Ned's turn to wince, and he felt like bestowing on his rival blows instead of praises.

However, the dinner passed off without anything occurring to give away these two precious deceivers, and there was no ill feeling except a bit of jealousy on Ned's part. This was stimulated by Miss Meriweather inviting the secretary to go with her for a spin in her car the following morning. Ned departed in company with his rival with his nose in the air, and, notwithstanding the delicate position he occupied, had the latter not been very good natured, would have quarreled with him.

When Tinterton returned to his room after the drive with Miss Meriweather he found Ned waiting for him. Tinterton did everything to reassure Ned that he was not trying to win his girl away from him, but the green monster had fastened his fangs on Ned's heart and would not let go his grip. Tinterton bore a message to Ned from Miss Meriweather that she desired him to call upon her the same evening.

Ned believed that she had accepted him, supposing him to be a lord, but notwithstanding this faith was about to throw him over for a lord's secretary, with whom she had become infatuated. He would have kicked him out, but he was certain of nothing, and curiosity prompted him to go to her.

On being ushered into the drawing room, what was his surprise to see Tinterton sitting with Miss Meriweather. Ned entered with a scowl at the nobleman and a look of contemptuous reproach at the lady. Both rose as the spurious lord entered, Tinterton looking embarrassed. Miss Meriweather maintaining a reserved dignity.

"I have sent for you, Lord Tinterton," she said to Ned, "to make a confession. Captivated with the idea of being Lady Tinterton, I accepted your offer without loving you. I have decided that this would be unjust to you therefore"—

"You have transferred your affections to that blooming Englishman!"

Both the real Tinterton and Miss Meriweather burst into a laugh. Ned real angry beet, turned and was making out of the room when Miss Meriweather threw her arms about him and held him.

"That was an awful game for you to play," she said, "and I didn't see it till the day I invited you and the real Lord Tinterton to dinner. Yesterday when we drove out together I confided my knowledge of the situation to him. I suppose I should have you arrested for false pretenses, but instead I"—

With her arms still around Ned's neck it was evident what she intended.

Ned stepped from a hall bedroom into a four story stone front house. His motto is, "Dishonesty is the best policy."

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into 16 ounces of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of $2. A day's use will usually overcome a severe cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat

When you wake up with the backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

TEN DOLLARS FOR PATRIOTIC SOCIETY

AIDING THE VETERANS

Quebec Province Chose a Young Manufacturer and Politician

The appointment of the Hon. G. A. Simard as chairman of the Quebec Province Commission in charge of making arrangements for finding employment for returned soldiers, was an appreciation both to the Government and the people of Quebec. Mr. Simard was one of the first to recognize the value of good roads, and through his early efforts he gathered around him a body of public opinion that soon made itself felt. He is a large property holder on the south side of the river across from Montreal in the vicinity of Laprairie, and in 1913 was appointed a member of the Legislative Council of Quebec.

He organized the Franco-American Chemical Company, and is general manager of the St. Lawrence Drug Co. The former company is a world-wide concern with branches in Europe and the United States. Mr. Simard is said to have a genius for organization and he has ample scope for his powers, for the task of securing employment for returned soldiers is no easy one. Mr. Simard has great faith in the possibilities of technical education, and planning by that means to help soldiers who otherwise might have to spend their days as mere laborers, janitors, or the like. Mr. Simard was but 44 years old when he became a Legislative Councillor.

Italian Consul Hears of Novel Method Used In Hospitals

Each country has its peculiar patriotic work, as is shown in the following letter received by Dr. V. V. Rentaldi, of the Italian Consulate, in Montreal, from his sisters in Turin, Italy. "We take our turn in assisting the wounded, and begin at 5 a.m., to finish at midnight, because we wait for the last train in at Porta Nuovo Station. There is no lack of work, and it is a little fatiguing, but what would one not do for the poor things fighting up high in the mountains, suffering with the cold and with gangreene, and who, for the greater number, arrive with frozen feet in the saddest condition! Besides the wool work we are always busy making the scalderanci, so very useful in the winter season and in great request by the committees. The scalderanci are made from old newspapers folded together in several thicknesses, cut in a special way, compressed and saturated in a solution of paraffin, and then dried. They burn a slow, steady flame. One is sufficient for heating three meals."

An Italian Invention

An Italian engineer is said to have invented a machine by which he is able to explode a mine from a distance, or divert from its course or explode a torpedo fired from a submarine. The invention is important, and its utilization for the protection of the ships of the allied fleets will not be long delayed.

500,000 TO ATTACH SUEZ, PARIS HEARS

PARIS, Tuesday.—Telegrams from Bucharest declare Field Marshal von Mackensen is directing preparations for a powerful expedition against Egypt, says a Havas despatch from Rome. Advices to the Messaggero from the Roumanian capital, it is added, are that numerous trains loaded with munitions have been sent to Turkey, including one train of twenty-five flat cars laden with the parts of two 16-inch mortars and shells for the use of the guns, the shipment being destined for use in the Egyptian campaign.

Reports that Germany is preparing to move against the Suez Canal and Egypt with the mixed force of Turks, Germans and Austrians are current in Paris. Some of the reports go into various details, it being said, for instance, that the army is likely to consist of from 500,000 to 800,000 men, and that a four-track railway is being built across the half-desert region toward Suez.

Retaliation.

A singer, who recently passed an evening at the house of a lady stayed late. As he rose to go the hostess said:

"Pray, don't go yet, Mr. Basso. I want you to sing something for me."

"Oh, you must excuse me to-night. It is very late, and I should disturb the neighbours."

"Never mind the neighbours," answered the lady, quickly; "they poisoned our dog yesterday."

NEW OBSTACLES FACE AN ATTACK ON SUEZ CANAL

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 10, 1915.—A campaign of Turkish and German forces against the Suez Canal would not be as difficult an enterprise as the factors involved would seem to indicate, according to the opinion held by military authorities here. They say those contending that such an undertaking would be next to impossible are unfamiliar with the means of communication between Constantinople and the canal, and overlook that the food resources of Arabia and Syria are fully sufficient to meet the needs of a large army.

Last May and June a correspondent traveled over the greater part of the route which an army marching against the Suez Canal would have to use. He found the following:

From Constantinople to Bosanti, in the Taurus Mountains, over the Anatolian railroad and its Bagdad connections, would require about forty-eight hours for military trains. At Bosanti the old pass road, through the Cicilian Gate to Taurus would be used. The road was then being improved by thousands of Armenians who had been drafted into the Ottoman army for this purpose and whose work was being directed by Turkish, German and Austrian engineer officers. Motor trucks could make the trip from Bosanti to Tarsus in from six to eight hours, especially if, as asserted, they will be assisted up the steeper grades, of which there are three.

In June the tunnels of the Bagdad railroad near Entilly and Karababa, and a large bridge near Rodjo had not been completed. The railroad facilities from Tarsus, on the Mersina, Tarsus and Adana line, ended for this reason at Osmanie and later at Mamori, points in the Amanus Mountains. But an excellent road connected these places with the terminus of the Bagdad railroad at Rodjo. Heavy traffic might find traversing the Giaur Dagh Pass, at Entilly, a severe strain but no insurmountable obstacle. The same is true of the pass near Rodjo.

Building Line Across Desert.

From Rodjo the railroad runs to Aleppo, then over the Hama and Home Extension to Ryack. Here a narrow gauge to Damascus would necessitate transshipping. At Demascus the Hedjas Railroad begins. It would serve the expedition as far as Maan, Arabia, or some point directly east of Jerusalem. At the latter point the railroad through the Hebron Valley is reached. It is this line which the Turks, under a leadership of Meissner Pacha, a German engineer, who built the Hedjas Railroad, have extended into the desert east of the Suez Canal. How far this line is completed at this date is unknown. According to a statement made by Miesner Pacha at Dera, Arabia, last June the railroad had been surveyed and graded far into the desert and about one hundred and fifty kilometers were ready for traffic. Little is known of the line beyond the fact that in the Hebron Valley it runs over a survey made for a French company. One of the purposes of the road might be to carry water into the desert in case the water supply system established in the vicinity of the canal should prove unable to meet the demand.

A table of days needed last June in transit from and to the various points on the Constantinople-Suez Canal line of communication is here given:

Constantinople to Bosanti by rail	2
Bosanti to Tarsus by road	1
Tarsus to Mamori by rail	1
Mamori to Rodjo by road	2
Rodjo to Ryack by rail	1
Ryack to Damascus by rail	1
Damascus to Jerusalem by rail and road	2
Jerusalem to end of railroad line	2
Total	12
Or, Constantinople to Damascus (see above)
Damascus to Maan, by railroad	1
Maan across desert, by motor vehicle, to the canal	4
Total	18

Tunnel Shortens Trip Two Days.

But since June work on the Mamori-Rodjo line of the Bagdad Railroad has been pushed as hard as possible, notwithstanding the fact that the Italian workers of the Entilly and Karababa tunnels left their posts. Difficulty in obtaining rails and bridge steels were also experienced. But last July the Entilly tunnel, about 5,000 yards long, was broken through and the bridge near Rodjo was completed in August. The statement made some time ago that trains were running from Rodjo as far as Karababa tunnel was also finished; either that or a track was laid over the pass, which here is rather low.

Since then it has been learned that track is being laid in the Entilly tunnel, which means that train communication will soon exist, or is already established, from Tarsus to the end of the military line in the desert. Should this be the case then the trip to the Suez Canal will have been shortened two days, the time given in the above table including in all cases the hours lost in transferring troops from train to road and vice versa.

But the possibility exists that a further improvement has been made in this line of communication. Work was being pushed last June with all energy on the Bagdad line beyond Bosanti that is to connect with the Mersina, Tarsus and Adana railroad at Dorak. Of the seventy tunnels, three of which are 3,800, 3,700 and 1,700 yards long, many were completed, so that trains were already able to proceed beyond Bosanti, and it was expected that supply trains would soon be running as far as Dorak, on the Mersina, Tarsus and Adana line.

Great Engineering Difficulties.

A narrow gauge road serving the needs of the builders of the railroad was already in operation. Though the engineering difficulties presented by the Tshakyt gorge through which this section of the Bagdad line runs, are many, they may have succumbed to the will of the German and Swiss engineers in charge of the work. The completion of this line would further reduce the time of the transit from Constantinople to the canal by two days, cutting the total on the all-rail line down to the following number of hours:—

	Ordinary Speed	Ex-press
Constantinople-Bosanti	48	36
Bosanti-Dorak	*10	4
Dorak-Ryack	76	27
Ryack-Damascus	*10	4
Damascus-Jerusalem	§24	24
Jerusalem to end of line	48	48
Total	176	143

Or 7 days 8 hours, ordinary speed, and 5 days 23 hours express.

*Includes four hours for transshipment.

"Sandy Desert" a Myth.

Due to the fact that the Anatolian Bagdad, their connections and the Hedjas railroads are all single tracked and for this reason highly susceptible to the delays incident to a heavy traffic, an additional allowance of time would have to be made. But since the first traffic would be all in one direction and rolling stock would be available in plenty this circumstance would not become a problem, especially if German railroad battalion officers were in charge of the traffic, as no doubt they would be. Meanwhile the Taurus Pass road and the Mamori-Rodjo road could relieve such congestion as might ensue.

Transportation conditions in the desert itself also could be mastered easily, the correspondent is informed. From German officers and engineers who took part in the Turkish advance on the Suez Canal last winter it was learned that the popular conception of the "sandy desert" is a myth, so far as it concerns the territory east of the canal. There are large stretches of loose deposits of course, but in the main the floor of the desert is a clay which the hot sun has baked almost into brick. The result is that an automobile or motor truck may be taken anywhere without trouble. Only the lack of water has made wagon transportation feasible, since draught animals require more water than the desert affords. Air cooled motors would overcome every obstacle wheel transportation has encountered. With them the rapid moving of artillery, equipment and supplies could be undertaken successfully near the canal with but a slight increase in its vehicle park.

A greater number of troops would probably exhaust the desert's water supply and thus add the carrying of this necessity to the duties of its commissary. There remains the ordinary means of travel and traffic in the desert, the camel. With its assistance the offensive against the Suez Canal last winter was carried on. Thousands of these animals are at the disposal of the Ottoman government, and since each can carry an average load of 500 pounds the camel would be likely to play an important role.

With the supply machinery in good working order troops in the desert would experience no great hardships. The climate of the desert in winter is good and the germicidal effect of the ever shining sun would prevent ground pollution, from which most army diseases spring. The terrain itself is favorable to the offensive tactics which the Ottoman troops and their German allies would employ, the topographical main feature of the country being an undulating plain with many "dongas," ancient and dry water courses. Through these attacks could be developed should the British and Egyptian troops decide to cross the canal instead of waiting on the western bank. After mastering the Danube during the Serbian campaign there is no riverlike body of water which the Germans could not throw troops across. For long stretches the Suez Canal is no more than 100 yards wide.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

7355

We are having considerable variety in skirts this season and the many pleated models are among the favorites. One reason of this is that the materials, in the main, are of much lighter weight than for several seasons past. Perhaps this is due to the scarcity of wool.

The model shown in the accompanying design has five gores. The adjustment of the waistline is a matter of taste. Some women still prefer the raised line and others insist upon the normal. This last is the more usual. The yoke is in two parts with seams at the sides, and the closing is placed in either one of these.

This lower portion is made with a reversed box pleat turned under at the centre of the front and back and at each side. The result of this treatment is a skirt with four large box pleats with slot effect seams between them.

The lower edge of the skirt is slightly shaped, but hangs straight all around, measuring 2½ yards at the hem in the medium size.

The skirt pattern, No. 7355, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 2⅝ yards of 54-inch material.

This pattern can be obtained by sending 10 cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

SELL OLD MASTERS FOR RUSSIAN CAUSE

Prominent Russian Brought a Million Dollars Worth of Paintings to N. Y.

Will Spend Large Sums in United States for Munitions of War.

Thirty old masters, formerly of the collection of the late Count Galmitcheff Koutousoff, secretary to the Dowager Czarina of Russia, were brought to the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York, in charge of Nicholas Riabouchinsky of Moscow, who has come to America to buy munitions of war. He would like to see the thirty paintings, surrounded by fine hand-carved frames, changed into American dollars to aid the Russian cause.

The catalogue of these works gives as the painters Fra Felipo Lippi, Luini, Sodama, Lucas Cranach, Hans Memling, Paul Potter, Saloman Ruisdael, Van Dyck and others.

According to the valuation of Mr. Riabouchinsky himself, the canvasses and the objects of art which adorn his hotel suite are worth about $1,000,000. Many of the paintings were in the possession of the late Count's family for generations, and several, said to have been presented to him by the Czarina, bear the Imperial coat of arms on their backs.

On War Committee.

Mr. Riabouchinsky is accompanied by his wife, a charming Italian woman. His credentials show him to be a member of the Organizations of the War Committee of Moscow, which is active in providing a part of the national war budget. He says he expects to invest several millions of rubles in the United States in the purchase of machine tools and other appliances for turning out shrapnel, shells and weapons of war generally, in the arsenals of Russia.

Mr. Riabouchinsky is the editor of a Russian art publication and he has written on art subjects for the English and French press. Recently he gave an exhibition of Russian primitives in Paris, which attracted much attention.

To bring thirty paintings from Petrograd at this time involved much trouble and expense, for they travelled with the owner in fifteen trunks as personal baggage. Mr. and Mrs. Riabouchinsky and their distinguished company left Petrograd on September 25, and for nine days were passengers on the Trans-Siberian railroad. They embarked from Harbin for Japan, and after remaining in the realm of the Mikado for a few days, went to San Francisco and then journeyed to New York. The charges for the transportation of the thirty immortals were $4,500.

Bronze Crosses.

Among the objects of art at the Knickerbocker are several crosses of bronze to which is given a history dating back to the fourteenth century. They bear the names of great mediæval craftsmen.

One of the most interesting objects of art is a small Limoges enamel bearing the signature of Leonard Limousin and representing Henry IV. and Jean de Poitiers. It is unusual in that most enamels of this period are devoted to religious subjects. The colourings are in rich purples and reds. There is also a small door ornament of bronze taken from the ducal palace at Urbino and declared to be the work of Michael Angelo.

The collection includes investments of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, among which is one of Venetian velvet embroidered with gold after Russian designs.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Get a 25-cent bottle of Danderine at any drug store, pour a little into your hand and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips. By morning most, if not all, of this awful scurf will have disappeared. Two or three applications will destroy every bit of dandruff; stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Three Tons of Milk Going By Mail

When the report of the detention of the steamship United States at Greenock, with the removal of about three thousand packages of mail by Great Britain, was called to the attention of the Citizen's Committee for Food Shipments, in the Woolworth Building, yesterday afternoon Dr. Edmund von Mach, executive chairman of the committee, said:—

"Nothing has been done with regard to the parcel post between here and Germany and Austria-Hungary, or even the carrying out of the Allies' intentions regarding the seizure of first class mail passing through neutral countries, will interfere with out work.

"There are two million suffering babies in Germany and Austria-Hungary who need milk, and we are bending every energy to get it to the mat the earliest possible moment. We have arranged to ship at least 180 packages of milk powder, amounting to more than three tons of milk, by the Stockholm, steaming Saturday for Sweden. These packages all will be sent as first class mail, at letter postage and registered. They will reach Germany and Austria-Hungary through some Baltic port, none of which is blockaded.

"To-day a grandmother called on me and asked whether we could assure her that a package of milk, sent to her infant grandson in Berlin, would go through without detention. She was exercised over the newspaper reports.

"We explained to her that in spite of the temporary suspension of United States parcel post to the Central Empires that the allied government could have no intention to stop the shipment of milk to babies. On that assurance she made her contribution to cover the exorbitant cost of shipping two packages of milk powder by letter post, praying that they would get there in time."

Toronto prices this week are: Ontario wheat No. 2, winter, $1.05; Manitoba wheat No. 1, Northern, $1.31; oats, No. 2, 51c.; peas, No. 2, $1.50 to $1.75; Barley, 57c to 60c.; buckwheat 76 to 77 cents.

With Winnipeg wheat advancing, and a heavy demand for flour, has caused an advance of 40 cents a barrel. This makes a total of 80 cents rise in one month. Millers are still booking orders for delivery several months ahead and mills are running at full capacity day and night.

Bran and shorts have acted in sympathy, advancing $1 to $2 a ton.

The embargo on hay has not caused any disturbance in that line.

Prospects that the Suez Canal would become part of the war zone had much to do with the general advance in wheat on the outside market. Dealers assumed that as a result of the increasing war risk, which had caused the trebling of insurance rates on vessels routed by way of Suez, any active competition from Australia or India would be largely shut off.

The sugar crop in Cuba promises to be a record breaker. It is being harvested at the present time and it may look for a slightly lower price provided England and France do not get busy and make huge purchases. In that case, good bye to the price, for it will be bound to go up.

If the Germans continue to send British ships to the bottom in the Mediterranean, freight between India and England will have to go round by the Cape. In that event we look for a stiff advance in tea.

CLOSE SHOOTING AT DARDANELLES

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Jan. 4.—Remarkable performances in the way of close shooting upon the Gallipoli Peninsula are recorded of the New Zealand howitzers and field guns. The New Zealand official war correspondent, Malcolm Ross, reports that toward the end of August a major of Infantry telephoned calling attention to the fact that the New Zealand howitzers were dropping shells into a Turkish trench only five yards in front of the trench occupied by his men. He therefore asked the battery to cease firing at that particular trench of the enemy. The reply was that the firing was being done purposely, in as much as the battery commander fully trusted his men and his guns even with a margin of only five yards. The reason for this close fire was because the infantrymen in the front trench had apparently run out of bombs and were being severely dealt with by the Turks.

Good Shooting.

During the Turkish counter-attack on the night of May 19 the New Zealand No. 2 Battery of Field Artillery fired 611 rounds of shrapnel at Turkish trenches only 20 yards distant from the Australasian trenches. The shells shrieked continuously over the heads of the Australasians crouching in their trenches and throughout the night there was only one premature burst. As it was a dark night and the range only 1,000 yards, giving necessarily a very flat trajectory, "the fact," the correspondent says, "involved accurate and careful 'laying' on the part of the gunners. The slightest error such as the short setting of a fuse would have been serious under such circumstances."

But that close shooting in the Dardanelles operation occasionally accidentally worked havoc among the British forces is shown by the fact that on the afternoon of August 8, when Col. Malone with a handful of New Zealand infantrymen was actually within sight of the Narrows, having surmounted the Sari Bahr ridge, he was killed by shrapnel being fired by British warships at the heavy Turkish counter-attack, and that there were numerous other casualties among the New Zealanders from the same cause.

OPPOSITION TO CONSCRIPTION BILL

Trade Unionists Are Strongly Against The Conscription Bill

Resolution Condemning the Government Measure Has Met the Approval of the Unionists---Russians Have Pierced the Austrian Lines in the Neighborhood of Czenowitz

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The Daily Mail declared to-day that the Government is facing the gravest internal crisis of the war. "The Labour conference to-day will vote overwhelmingly against the compulsion," said the Mail. "What will be the task of the Government that tries to enforce it against the insurgent Labour world convinced that it is not a military, but a political weapon."

The Chronicle, the Daily Express and the Morning Post attacked the Government Bill, but it was supported by the Times and Daily Telegraph. Despite the bitter opposition of both Labourites and Irish party leaders in the Commons, it is considered certain that the Conscription Bill will pass the Parliament. The Government was somewhat worried to-day, however, over the reports of possible defections of members who advocated a more drastic compulsion law, calling into service both married and unmarried men.

In commenting on the Conscription Bill, the Daily News says it is evident the Bill pleases nobody. The News predicts a general election on this issue within a few weeks.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Labour leaders struck a heavy blow against conscription to-day. A resolution, protesting "in the name of 3,000,000 Trades Unionists" against compulsory enlistment, was introduced by the executive committee when the National Labour Congress met in Central Hall, Westminster. The resolution contained expressions of regret that the "solidarity of the nation has been gravely imperilled, and industrial and political liberty menaced by the attitude of the conscriptionists." Nine hundred delegates representing 400 labour organizations were present.

The resolution, however, declared the sentiment of the Congress that Labour members of Parliament be permitted to vote according to their own convictions. This feature was decidedly pleasing to conscriptionists.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Postmaster-General Herbert Samuel, Liberal, will enter the Cabinet as Home Secretary, succeeding Sir John Simon, who resigned because of his anti-conscription views, the Daily Express said to-day.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Americans must adopt voluntary military training or face conscription. This was Secretary of War Garrison's warning to-day when he opened the Army National Defence hearing before the House Military Committee. He declared a large standing army was undesirable and "utterly futile." He asserted reliance upon the National Guard or State Militia "utterly unwarranted" as an "unstable foundation." The War Secretary read a long statement to the committee in opening his examination outlining the Administration army preparedness programme, including the increase of the standing army to 140,000 men, a continental army of 400,000 volunteers, and the increase of munition supplies, and the strengthening of coast fortifications.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—J. W. T. Watson, war critic of the United Press says to-day: "Great Britain's Conscription Bill cannot be regarded as the result of failure of voluntary enlistments in the British democracy. The voluntary system has not failed, and it would be a serious mistake to interpret the conscriptionist measure as a criticism of demacricy's reluctance to offer itself freely, for the sacrifice of the battle fields. Nearly six million Britishers either have volunteered for the army since the outbreak of war or have attested their willingness under the Derby scheme to respond when called to the colours. In all other belligerent countries compulsion has been used from the beginning of hostilities. Only in the British Empire has service been left to the free choice of the citizens. The millions who have voluntarily responded to the British call compare fully with the size of conscript armies of the other warring nations in proportion to population."

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Eight of nineteen passengers of the liner Persia, who clung to an overturned boat for several hours, gave up the struggle some time during Thursday night and sank to their deaths, Lord Montagu reported from Malta to-day. With ten other survivors Lord Montagu was rescued by the Holt liner Ningchow and taken into Malta. The Admiralty has no confirmation of a Milan report that another boat load of survivors has reached Malta. It is believed possible this report refers to the landing of Lord Montagu and others at Malta.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—That representatives of three million British Trades Unionists will adopt by a large majority the resolution condemning conscription, was indicated at the Congress here.

MARSEILLES, Jan. 6.—The French steamer "Karnak," carrying 250 passengers, was chased all night in the Mediterranean by a submarine, but eluded the submarine and arrived here to-day. She brought survivors of the British vessels "Middleton" and "Abelia," submarine victims.

The submarine abandoned the chase at dawn to-day. When the "Karnak" put into Marseilles many of the passengers were hysterical from fright. The submarine was a big boat about 250 feet long. The sinking of the British steamer "Abelia" was reported from London on January 1, but a despatch from Marseilles is the first news of the sinking of the British steamer "Middleton," which displaced 2,506 tons, and was registered at Hull.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 6.—Russians have pierced the enemy's position in the immediate vicinity of Czernowitz, compelling their opponents to fall back to their second line and definitely assume the defensive. The despatch dated Wednesday says that the enemy's losses have been enormous in these engagements, and also in the neighbourhood of Czartorysk, where he was pressed back westwards for several miles.

GIRL SHOT IN NECK WHILE RIDING IN SOUTH PARK

Clover Tschirky, Daughter of "Oscar of the Waldorf," in Gotham Hospital.

BUFFALO, Jan. 6.—Clover Tschirky, daughter of the noted Oscar of the Waldorf, was shot in the neck while riding in the South Park boulevard, according to a dispatch received here last night from New York. Miss Tschirky is confined to St. Luke's hospital, New York, where she was operated on yesterday afternoon and a small bullet extracted from her neck. Her condition is not serious.

Miss Tschirky was here during the holidays, visiting Evelyn Everitt, daughter of C. H. Everitt of 296 Auburn avenue. Thursday afternoon before Miss Tschirky boarded a train for New Ybrk, she Miss Everitt and William C. Gehring went out for an automobile ride in South park. While on the boulevard at the approach of the park those in the automobile heard a sharp report and Miss Tschirky said she felt a pain in her neck.

Geehring took Miss Tschirky at once to the office of Dr. Jay Johnson and Miss Tschirky was advised to submit to an operation, but she refused and returned to her parents. Miss Everitt stated last night that she has kept in communication with St. Luke's hospital since Miss Tschirky was sent there and has been advised that her condition is not at all serious.

Police Chief John Martin had not been notified of the case this morning and until he is, no investigation will be started by the authorities.

It is believed that Miss Tschirky was shot by a boy with an air rifle, who shot wild.

CAPT. BURNHAM WOULD REFUSE COMMON RIGHT

Has Enlisted For Freedom But Would Deny It to Liberal Council Who Are Organized in Welfare of Country, Says R. R. Hall

GOVERNMENT NEEDS ADVICE

Captain Burnham's resolution to disestablish the recently organized Liberal Advisory Council was briefly commented upon this morning by Mr. R. R. Hall. The latter gentleman passed over the local member's questionable profession of solicitude for the welfare of the Liberal party, and referred simply to the people's right to carefully consider and criticize the actions of the Government.

"Mr. Burnham has donned the khaki," said Mr. Hall, "for the purpose of fighting for the cause of freedoms and of all that it involves. But with his usual inconsistency he would prevent, if he possibly could, prominent Liberals from all parts of Canada exercising that liberty by getting together in Ottawa to discuss what would be for the general welfare of this country. When we take into consideration the great issues that are before the country to-day, and the blundering that has been done by the present Dominion Government since it has been in office, I do not know of any body of men that needs good advice more than Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues.

It is a well-known fact that the party in opposition plays a very important part in securing good government, and the present Opposition would be negligent of its duty to the people and be unfaithful to their trust if they did not take steps to secure the fullest possible information on all questions that affect the welfare of Canada. And such information cannot be better obtained than through the prominent business men in all parts of Canada, who will be able to offer suggestions to the Opposition relative to the great questions before the country. Mr. Burnham would prefer to have everybody walk in a German straight-jacket, and would prevent men from assembling to discuss public issues which are of most vital importance."

ASKED FOR RESIGNATIONS

Examiner Special:

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—Superintendent of Prisons Riley, who the other day dismissed Warden Osborne of Sing Sing Prison, was to-day asked for his resignation by Governor Whitman for alleged breach of regulations in connection with the transferrence of prisoners from Sing Sing.

5—Attachments—

Until further orders Lieut. J. M. C. A. C. Cools will look after the records under the supervision of the Acting Adjutant.

6—Military Police—

Until further orders No. 198280, Pte. John McFadden, "A" Company, will act on the Military Police.

7—Aggends—

Reverting to D. O. Part II., Jan. 4th, Sub-section I. Louis Fewlings should read Louis Fewings.

8—Guards—

In future men coming off guard will not loiter or linger around or about the public thoroughfare. Men will remember that they are on duty 24 hours every day, and will govern themselves accordingly.

9—Command—

The following men will be shown on command from the 4th inst. in order to recruit and instruct recruits at Apsley:

Sergt. W. Theobald.
Pte. Frank Tanner.
Private Tanner.
Pte. E. Bronson.
Pte. George Carr.

C. R. WIDDIFIELD,
Lieutenant.
Acting Adjutant for Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F.

Mr. C. H. Patterson, 675 Water street, left this morning for Cobourg, where he has enlisted in the 139th Battalion as Quartermaster Sergeant. He was employed by the Imperial Insurance Co. His brother, Mr. Russel Patterson, is also in khaki, and is stationed at Cairo, Egypt.

One of the best known members of the non-com's staff of the 57th Regiment, Orderly Room Sergeant R. Matchett, has enlisted with the 93rd Battalion, and has been appointed quartermaster sergeant of C company Q. M. Sergeant Matchett has been a member of the 57th Regiment for many years, for a long period as stretcher bearer sergeant and for the last few years as orderly room sergeant. He will be a welcome addition not only to the 93rd Battalion as a whole, but also to the sergeants' mess of the 93rd.

The Government of Canada has purchased a number of rapid fire guns of the Lewis type, and these are being issued to the Canadian troops now in training. It is not the intention of the Government to have this type of rapid fire gun take the place of the machine gun proper, but to supplement its use by this small and easily handled English product. The Lewis gun is really an automatic rifle, and not a machine gun. For aerial work, such as attacking aeroplanes, it is a splendid weapon, but for assailing a large target in the form of a large body of troops it lacks the destructive and demoralizing effects of the machine gun with its belt feed and fixed platform. The Lewis rapid fire gun is practically an ordinary rifle barrel with a rapid firing attachment, surrounded by a metal tube, with a fan apparatus for air-cooling the barrel. Over the loading mechanism is a large disk, which is loaded with a clip of 48 bullets. The loading is a simple matter, and all that has to be done is to replace the disk, point the rifle, and pull the trigger, and the gun will maintain fire until the disk is exhausted. In emergencies several disks, ready loaded, can be kept on hand, so that firing may be almost continuous. The whole gun weighs about 29½ lbs. and can easily be carried on a man's shoulder. It has an extreme range of 4,000 yards, but is most effective at short ranges. Whilst the Lewis gun can be used on a fixed platform, it is really intended to be used as a rifle, and as a rifle the human element handicaps it in competition with the machine gun proper and its fixed platform, and an entire absence of the human element in driving at a target under the most exciting conditions. One Lewis gun with every machine gun section will, however, be a valuable addition.

Fifteen members of the Salvation Army band rushed to the platform at a recruiting meeting in Kingston the other night and signed enlistment cards and had the colors of the 146th pinned on their breasts, and a number of other recruits pushed to the front eager for enlistment. Ensign Smith with tears in his eyes said, "I am proud to think my band has enlisted. My brothers are in the trenches, and what kind of a man would I be to hold back my bandsmen. I hope everyone will go. I am going to have a petticoat band now, and will start at once."

LINDSAY, Jan. 5.—Lady Eaton has presented the officers and men of the 109th Overseas Battalion at Lindsay with cap and tunic badges. Some time ago she donated the band instruments for the unit and presented the regiment with colours. Lady Eaton's home was in Omemee and she has been very good indeed to the Victoria and Haliburton counties unit. Col. J. J. H. Fee, of Lindsay, is the officer commanding. The battalion is now over 600 strong. It will winter in Lindsay. Lieut. Roy Anderson, a graduate of McMaster University, Toronto, has a commission in this regiment.

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 5.—Fifty-five Vancouver Japanese have signified their intention of joining the Japanese Battalion being raised in Canada for overseas service, and over 500 applications have been received from elsewhere in the province.

The many friends of Sergt. Harold Knapman of the 33rd Battery, Kingston, will be sorry to learn that he is ill with diphtheria.

Lt.-Col. Johnston and Lieut. Widdifield are in Havelock to-day swearing in recruits for the 93rd Battalion.

Capt. Neilson of Norwood and Capt. Bygott of Lakefield, both members of the 93rd Battalion, were at the armouries to-day on business.

An interesting event took place at the armouries this morning when the non commissioned officers and men of No. 4 platoon, A Co., said farewell to their platoon commander, Lieut. S. J. Raymond, who has transferred from the 93rd to another battalion. Lieut. Raymond was presented with a handsome silver cigarette case, a silver match box, a box of cigars and a large box of cigarettes, the presentation being an evidence of the high esteem in which he is held by the men of No. 4. He acknowledged the gifts in a neat speech, after which the men of No. 4 gave three hearty cheers for Lieut. Raymond.

MORE C. P. R. CONDUCTORS IN TROUBLE

MONTREAL, P.Q., Jan. 5.—C. P. R. Passenger Conductor Wm. Wallace appeared before Police Magistrate W. W. O'Brien of Fort William, and pleaded guilty to a charge of theft and was fined $100. Conductor T. Reynolds, also charged with theft, appeared before Police Magistrate S. Weegar, at North Bay, on January 4 who committed him for trial to a higher court.

REINFORCEMENTS NOT SENT WHEN THEY WERE NEEDED

General Sir Ian Hamilton Gives That As a Reason for the Collapse of the Campaign at the Dardanelles.

MAKES HIS REPORT

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Failure of the British government to send 50,000 reinforcements he had requested, caused the collapse of the Dardanelles enterprise, Gen. Ian Hamilton asserted in his final report to-day.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—The British commander made an equally sensational disclosure concerning reasons that led to his recall as Commander-in-chief of the British forces on the Gallipoli peninsula. On October 11th Lord Kitchener sent me a message suggesting the possibility that we evacuate Gallipoli and abandon the attempt to reach Constantinople, said Gen. Hamilton. "I replied that it was unthinkable, whereupon I was recalled from command. When I reached London I was informed that the government wanted fresh, unbiased opinion from another commander on the possibilities of an early evacuation."

MAYOR-ELECT WILL PRESENT THE PRIZES

Peterboro' Poultry Show Will Conclude This Evening—Bird Shown Here Took First Prize in Madison Square Gardens, New York

HEAVY PRIZE-WINNERS

Mr. J. J. Duffus, mayor-elect, will be present this evening at the closing session of the Poultry Show. To Mayor Buller's successor has been delegated the duty of presenting the prizes, consisting of a varied assortment of silverware. A similar duty devolved upon Mayor Buller two years ago, following his election to his present position. It is somewhat singular that Mr. J. J. Duffus, mayor-elect, should be called upon to officiate at a similar function. The mayor-elect and his retinue will arrive at the Market Hall about eight-thirty this evening. After an inspection of the exhibits the distribution of prizes will take place.

Large Exhibitors.

Two of the heaviest prizewinners are Thomas Rotrell and Sons of Bowmanville, and Harry Lush of Peterborough. They have in the neighbourhood of a hundred prizes each, to their credit. Mr. J. J. Hartley, candidate in the recent mayoralty contest, won four prizes for Silver Dorkings.

A White Leghorn, owned by F. D. Marsh of Napanee, and a first-prize winner at the recent show held in Madison Square Gardens, New York, carried off a red ribbon at the local show. He might have figured in the sweepstakes only his feathers were badly ruffled as a result of being penned up for several weeks while in transit to the various shows.

Good Quality Manifest.

Mr. George McClelland is also a large exhibitor. Yesterday he was offered seventy-five dollars for a cockerel, which he refused, claiming he would not take twice that amount. He showed a fine pen of Buff Orpingtons.

Mr. A. B. Curtis of Warkworth, is another large exhibitor; also Mr. George Buller of this city. The former expects to attend the poultry show at Ottawa.

Mr. J. T. C. Lang, secretary of the Peterborough Poultry Association, is of the opinion that this year's show is superior to previous shows from point of quality. In the words of Mr. J. H. Minshall, "the birds were never in better shape, and never showed up to better advantage as they have this year."

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

A special meeting of the Board of Health will be held this afternoon, when the tenders for the cottages to be erected in connection with the Isolation Hospital will be opened.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

The vital statistics for the past year in Brantford show two births for one death.

Cut in Salaries.

The new City Council of Regina, Sask., dismissed the entire civic staff except those on active military service. This was done for economy, the civic pay roll being annually $464,000. The majority of the staff, however, will be re-engaged at more economic salaries.

How Much Rye Do You Eat?

Most people eat little, if any, rye. Yet rye is one of the most healthful and nutritious cereals.

Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal, the most nutritious cereal food known to science, contains 35 per cent. whole berries of rye.

In addition it contains whole wheat, deodorized flax seed, and bran. It distinctly differs in composition from any other food on the market. It will positively relieve constipation or "money back."

Roman Meal looks different and requires a simpler way of preparation. So be absolutely certain to follow directions on package and do not stir while cooking—porridge or you spoil it.

Sold by grocers at 10c and 25c.

Made by Roman Meal Co., Toronto

TO-NIGHT AT BROCK STREET RINK

Another Enjoyable Night Arranged

—Ice is Good

At the Brock Street Rink to-night will be the first appearance of the 93rd Regiment Intermediates that will play the Electrics Junior O.H.A. team from 8 to 8.30 o'clock. After 9.30 there will be skating until 10.30 o'clock.

The band of the 93rd Battalion will be in attendance.

Admission to any part of the rink and for skating also, 25 cents. Skating only after 9.15 o'clock, 15c.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JAN. 6, 1916

THE PROGRESS OF CANADA.

Last year the Canadian and Provincial Governments, municipalities, railways, and public utilities borrowed 281 million dollars, says the Toronto Star. Of this amount 187 millions were absorbed in Canada. That is something new. We have been accustomed to borrow abroad and especially in England. It is customary for new countries to borrow from old countries. The old countries have the savings, the accumulated capital. The new countries have the opportunities, the vast resources to be developed.

But Europe now has no money to lend. Its financial strength is being hurled into the greatest conflict in the history of the world. Mr. Hirst, editor of the London Economist, says that Great Britain and its allies are spending 300 million pounds sterling a month, and that Germany and its allies are spending 180 millions a month. We cannot borrow from nations engaged in this conflict. We must even become creditors of our friends in Europe. We can afford to do it and the more we do it the more we strengthen our own position.

In this respect the war has only hastened a process which is always going on. Canada is about as large as Europe, and has potential resources nearly equal to those of Europe. Every year some part of those resources is converted into available wealth and the country becomes more self-reliant, and less dependent upon capital abroad. In the United States the process has gone so far that the nation has become a creditor instead of a debtor nation. The attainment by Canada of a similar position is only a matter of time; and the war has brought the time into the near future.

Canada, in fact, is passing rapidly from childhood to manhood, and is realizing the poet's saying that "strife comes with manhood as waking with day." Our development of a reign as large as Europe will bring with it vast power and also vast responsibilities. The centre of power in the world is bound to move some day from Europe, and we control a quarter of America, and are responsible for its development and settlement, and for the welfare of the hundred millions of people who will some day dwell between Halifax and Vancouver.

A RECKONING AHEAD.

There is some satisfaction in thinking now and then of the victory at the end of it all and the punishment says the London Advertiser, that must be meted out to the guilty. French investigators have been patiently ferreting out the authors of various outrages in Flanders and Eastern France, the officers and officials who issued orders for massacre or burning, for the shelling of cathedrals and hospitals, the use of Belgian and French civilians as screens, etc. The names of officers also are down in the great black book of retribution who were themselves personally guilty of atrocious acts. They are on the list, and if still alive at the end of the war will be brought to judgment.

Much more will come to light when Belgium is cleared of the enemy that the researches of French investigators can at present discover. Belgian tongues will be free and will tell.

When Germany herself lies prate, a curtain into the Government papers will bring to light the of those higher up, to the for submarine and Zeppelin as poison gas and the rest of it many innocent will of necessity but the really guilty will be in time, never fear. As for innocent rank and file, they are bad company, as well as under innocent commanders. We shall not very sorry for a rank and file in of whom it has been ascerbeyond question that they lamely and patiently, German-fashhacked rocking-horses and other toys to pieces in a nursery, little boys' hands and pinnedto doors with bayonets. The marine commander butchers wholesale, while the rank and file over the details of individual laughter. It is all an unholy horror. such deeds had been committed

Right here in Western Ontario with all the beastly insults to religion and womanhood that capped them should we not be filled with a holy zeal to punish and be revenged? The mutilation and crucifixion of Canadian soldiers is not to be forgotten, nor the loss of our citizens on passenger vessels. We also are among the plaintiffs and must have satisfaction.

GAINING STRENGTH.

The destruction of the armored cruiser Natal is a regrettable loss; but it is the only serious loss that the British navy has suffered in the last six months. In the meantime several vessels much superior to the Natal in fighting strength have been added to the navy.—Hamilton Herald

NEAR THE TRUTH.

Col. Roosevelt says the peace-at-any-price man is the kind who, when shipwrecked, sets upon the principle "Women and children last." The colonel has said many uncomplimentary things about anaemic people, who will not fight for honour, humanity, and liberty, but this is perhaps the most accurate.—Victoria Times.

GERMANY'S EBBING CREDIT.

Sight bills of exchange on Germany declined yesterday in this market to 75⅛ cents for four reichsmarks, the lowest ever recorded.

This equals a trifle more than 18¾ cents for a mark, as compared with a parity of nearly 23⅞ cents, so that the discount on the German currency measured by the exchange is 21 per cent.

Bills on Vienna sold here at 13 cents, or less, for the Austrian krone or crown, the par of which in our money is 20⅓ cents, the present price in exchange, therefore, making a discount of more than 35 per cent.

While the credit of the Teutonic allies is thus steadily sinking the exchange on London continues to rise—a further advance yesterday of nearly a cent in the pound sterling, to $4.74⅛. At this figure a sight draft on London is only 2½ per cent. under mint parity with the dollar—in fact, is at a normal peace-time level. The Anglo-French bonds issued here are also rising.

The enormous and continued fall in the exchanges on Germany and Austria reflects a growing conviction that the resources of the central empires are nearing exhaustion.—New York Herald.

ONTARIO'S TEMPERANCE SISYPHUS.

Sisyphus, everlastingly rolling his boulder up the hill by patient toil, only to see it go craching down again just as it neared the top, had no harder task than the temperance men of Ontario who are endeavoring, in face of the three-fifths handicap, to abolish the bar. The law declares that fifty-nine citizens who are opposed to the licensing of drinking places by the community shall be powerless to put their views into effect against the votes of forty-one who insist on the retention of the open bar is a fraud designed to hinder the work of temperance reformers. The pretence that it prevents the restoration of licenses once they are abolished—because a three-fifths vote is required to restore where a three-fifths vote has cut off the bars—is even more of a humbug. The bars once closed remain shut because the people experience the benefits of freedom from the drink curse, not because there is a handicap against their restoration.

In all Ontario since the adoption of the three-fifths clause the number of cases in which it was been of advantage to temperance reformers could be counted on the fingers of one hand. The number in which a majority of the electors have been forced to suffer the evils of the open bar because a minority insists upon its retention increases greatly after every annual municipal election. What justice is there in a law which prevents 3,135 citizens of Brantford who are opposed to saloons from closing them because 2,177 citizens cast their votes in opposition? Here is a majority of close upon a thousand made subject to the will of the minority in one of the most important things affecting the public health, morals, and prosperity. Were the will of the majority to prevail there would be no bars after May 1 in Belleville, Brantford, Port Arthur, Sarnia, Woodstock, Oakville, Oshawa, Parry Sound, Thessalon, Whitby, Glencoe, and several townships, as a result of Monday's voting. The minority in these municipalities will be able to keep almost a hundred barrooms open that ought to be closed under the sound democratic principle of majority rule.

What is Mr. Hearst going to do about it? Does he propose that Ontario's temperance Sisyphus shall be left to his ineffective toil year after year, the jest of the liquor interests and a byword to the minority? The Premier of Ontario had better wake up. If he does not close the bars by direct legislation at the forthcoming session of the Legislature he will from this time forward encounter the growing hostility of temperance reformers within his party as well as outside of it. The liquor interests are powerless to protect him. The open bar is a lost cause in Ontario. If Mr. Hearst fails to join the ranks of its enemies he will fall with it.

The vote on Monday makes that certain. The people will not much longer continue to roll up great majorities against the bar and suffer an unjust law to defeat their will. If Premier Hearst stands by the bar he cannot remain Premier Hearst.

JUST A FAIRY TALE.

HAMILTON, Jan. 5.—A rumour was current here that the government had decided to close the bars after May 1. Premier Hearst, when seen, stated that it was a highly imaginative tale.

The Army Stationer At The Front is a Marvel of System

Hundreds of Kinds of Forms Needed at Front Supplied by Him —52,000,000 Post Cards

LONDON, Jan. 6.—A correspondent at British General Headquarters writes:

You must not judge the importance of the army stationer by his shop. He lives on a first-floor back up the narrow staircase of a queer little house at G.H.Q. Yet the small old-fashioned room with its spare office furniture is the brain centre of an organization which, by the figures of its output, is one of the largest of the different services of the British army in the field.

You have probably never reflected on the essential importance of the stationery services to the army in the field. A shrewd observer once remarked that an army marches not on its stomach, but rather on its army forms. For at every step the army has need of the stationer. He must supply it with its thousand and one varieties of army forms for writing orders, despatches, requisitions, with labels of all descriptions, from the labels for the trucks consigned to the different formations in the field to the labels attached to the wounded, indicating the nature of their wounds, and those attached to the kit of men killed in action. An individual can generally beg or borrow pencil and ink or indelible pencil.

In all its forms and posters and labels and publications you keep coming across the romantic, the exciting side of war, the posters in French and Flemish offering a reward of 2,000 francs for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a spy, the secret documents, of which perhaps only a score are printed for the use of the highest commands, the short service for the burial of the dead slain in action, the field postcards printed in the world-old languages of the East.

Staff of 280

The army stationer's organization comprises a score of officers and some 280 men, dealing daily with a hundred different branches of the stationery department, but so perfect is the organization that its builder and head can control it without confusion or fuss from his little first floor back at G.H.Q.

The army stationery services attend the soldiers from the moment he reads the recruiting poster until he is pensioned out of the army. It produces the recruiting posters, the soldier's attestation form, his small book, his pay book, his acquittance roll, his casualty sheet, his field service postcard and "green envelope" his wounds card, and, if he is sick in hospital, his temperature chart and hospital notepaper for writing home, his form of discharge from hospital, and if he is evacuated to England, a card showing the printed address to which he is sent, and, finally, his form of discharge out of the service or the form by which he rejoins when certified fit for duty.

His spiritual side is not neglected. Through the stationery services he receives his Bible or Gospel in pocket form, a prayer card to carry in his cap, and his little hymn-book, while the Jewish soldier gets his khaki-bound Prayer Book printed in Hebrew and English. Through the same source the soldier is supplied with the form on which he makes an allotment of pay to those at home, and, if he is thrifty, application forms for war loan.

On the hygiene side the stationery services' posters warn him against the dangers of ices, shell-fish, uncooked fruit, unboiled milk, and tell him what to do should he be 'gassed' or suffering from frost-bite.

For the administrative purpose of the army in the field the stationery services supply an unending variety of army books (108 types), army forms (about 700 different kinds), books of regulations (136 varieties), and 80 different sorts of writing paper, 10 of envelopes, 21 of pencils, and no fewer than 26 of inks in powder form (black, blue, red, green, and violet waterproof ink, drawing inks, etc.).

Figures speak, they say. Up to last June the stationery services had supplied some 52 million field service postcards (printed in English, Hindu, Urdu, and Gurmukhi, the last three for the different races among the Indian troops), nearly 100 million army message forms, 7 million message envelopes, 2 million war diaries and intelligence summary of events (for army record purposes, and 50 and 35 million respectively of two different types of army form.

These figures have, of course, increased proportionally with the large augmentation of our army in the field since the Summer.

Red Tape for Respirators.

Even the famous red tape, also supplied by the stationery services, has at times to be diverted from its original uses in the interests of the army. Here is a copy of an application received from the ordnance.

"Kindly let bearer have 4,000 yards of tape, red, for use with respirators for urgent issue to the front to-night."

This application was made at the height of the second battle of Ypres during the first German gas attacks. The 4,000 yards of "tape, red," were supplied instantly and reached their destination in time.

With regard to trade labels, the confusion that would result if trucks went to the wrong railheads in the field is the measure of the care that must be taken to ensure the right labels being issued. There are several hundred different kinds of label in use, and the stock usually stands at somewhere about 2,000,000.

It will probably come as a surprise to those who have visions of army commanders pencilling despatches in tents at dead of night to know that there are considerably more than a thousand typewriters (in special traveling cases) in use in the field at present. They are kept in order and repaired by traveling mechanics in the stationery services. There is some question, I believe, of forming a central bureau for typewriting to relieve commands in the field of clerical work.

A word must be said about the pamphlets printed and sent out by the stationery services. These range from confidential documents, each one separately numbered and carefully guarded, to leaflets distributed by the hundreds of thousands. Three-quarters of a million of a brochure entitled "How to Combat Asphyxiating Gases" were turned out in forty-eight hours.

The printing of this mass of matter of all kinds is done by the local printing sections of the base stationery depots either on their own presses or in conjunction with the French printers in the towns in which they are quartered, and also by Government printers in London. Composition is cheap in France, but paper is extremely dear, therefore an arrangement by which the stationery services supply the paper to the French printers is often found to be a means of saving the public money.

GERMANY KNOWS.

Mr. Balfour, in praising the work of the British fleet, says he doubts if the world fully realizes what it has accomplished since the war began. Perhaps he should make an exception with respect to the enemy. The Germans know what the great navy has done, and would be willing to pay heavily if they could only get it out of the way. It must be the Kaiser's nightmare.—Montreal Gazette.

Fred McKee's Thanks

To the Electors of Smith:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Accept my sincere thanks and appreciation for your kindness on my behalf on Monday, Jan. 3rd.

Wishing you a Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

Yours truly,

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 5.—The returns on church union show a majority of 4,416 in favour of union. In the entire province only two churches showed themselves opposed to union, namely at Stonewall and West Kildonan.

HEROIC BELGIAN ARMY IS STILL DEFENDING FLANDERS

(By a Belgian Journalist, to the Editor of The New York Times.)

BILLERICA, Mass., Dec. 25, 1915.—For some time America has heard relatively little about the Belgian Army, which, under King Albert, still defends the last inches of Flanders soil, thus maintaining the illusion for all Belgians that their country still exists, even though its greater part is under domination of the invader. After the days of Liege, where Belgian soldiers made their country world-famous, followed the great retreat from Antwerp, and there were days of agony, the cruelty of which can only be felt by those who were there. However, death did not follow this agony; an almost superhuman revival brought back strength and courage.

All forts made by the hands of man fell before the German guns, but nature gave the Belgians a fort which held and still holds—the little River Yser. It was there that they took up a position from which at last they had not to retreat and did what they had been doing all the time—bar the way to those who had no right in their country. It was due to these few worn-out soldiers that the Germans never reached Calais in spite of the Kaiser's order that "Calais must be taken whatever the cost." The few Belgian soldiers kept on saying "No" to a much stronger foe till at last help came, a line of defence was properly made up, and at last they could have a little rest.

One might think that King Albert would then have said, "We have done enough now; we will leave the rest to our Allies." But no. I know that King Albert was full of pity for his brave men. He even exclaimed: "What will become of my poor country and my brave army?" But he consulted his men, and I know, through my mingling with Belgian soldiers, that they answered "No" when asked if they wanted to go home.

"Our homes are destroyed," they said. "Our wives and children are in exile, waiting till our country is free, till we can build new homes on the smoking ruins. That is our job, and we are going to do it."

The same answer was given to King Albert when he held the most tragic but the grandest review he or any King ever held of his army—of "all that are left of them," as he expressed it himself.

It was in the market place at Furnes and never shall I forget that sight. There was no glitter of gold, no display of military splendour. The men's uniforms were soiled with the mud of the trenches; their faces told the tale of the hardships endured; but when the King came along and the order "Attention!" rang proudly over the place, every soldier drew himself up as he had never done before, and looked his King in the eyes as only men can do when each knows that he has done his duty. I have seen King Albert's face many a time, and on different occasions, but never did his eyes shine so full of pride, and—for the first time I saw deep lines of sorrow.

And then began that marvellous reorganization of the Belgian Army that made it what it is to-day: Fully armed and equipped, well fed, well clothed, and more than ever determined to "stick to it," as they have learned to say in English from their English comrades. For every Belgian soldier who fell in the early days, two others who never dreamed of being soldiers have stepped into the vacant place.

As soon as the new line along the Yser was made, King Albert asked for volunteers, and they came—from all the ends of the earth. I have met several who had arrived from the United States. What they had read about the old country and about the glory of their fellow-countrymen had proved too much for them. They had left Belgium because it was too small a field for their ambition, but the voice of blood had the better of the temptations of fortune.

Thousands of the refugees who at the outbreak of the war had gone to England and France rushed to the colours. All were sent to special training camps, situated in different parts of France, where they received full training before going to the Front. Now they have gone to fight with almost the same military knowledge as the regular soldier, and with a spirit of patriotism which fully makes up for what they may lack in experience.

The wish of King Albert even reached further. It was heard by those young men whom the invasion had taken by surprise and who were under German domination in Belgium's invaded section. Their only desire was to join their brothers in the field, but they knew that to get out of Belgium with the intention to join the Belgian army was punished by death. The Germans made that quite clear to them. Yet more than 10,000 took the risk and tried to cross the frontier into Holland, whence the road lay open. Most of them succeeded, but more than 100 paid for their desire with their lives, for Belgium is separated from Holland by electric cables. In spite of all precautions some were struck and their bodies were found burned. Others were discovered by the Germans revealed by the electric bells on the cables. Most of these were shot before they reached Holland; others were taken and shot afterward for high treason. All of them willingly laid down their lives for King and country before they ever had a chance to draw the sword.

The Belgian Army grew in numbers daily in spite of all this. More training camps had to be created. I must add here that all these were volunteers. No compulsion had yet been exerted, King Albert asking—not ordering. Yet if the war had not broken out Belgium would have had general compulsory service, and it was not fair to the men of Liege, who were conscripts of a partial conscription system, that the reorganization of the army was not done by a compulsory system.

The Belgian Government still exists at Havre, France, and a new law was proposed and passed. Compulsory general service was to be introduced, but with consideration to the losses already sustained by Belgium this compulsion would exempt all married men and include only single men up to the age of 25. To the honour of the Belgians it must be said that there were very few unmarried men of that age left, and this compulsion became merely a form of justice.

Thus the Belgian Army finally increased, so that to-day it is larger than it ever was, although no army has lost in such a terrific proportion as the Belgian Army. In the training camps no Belgian soldier is sent to the Front unless he chooses to go. The choice is left to them to do work outside the trenches or to go into the firing line, but more compulsion is needed to have the "civilian jobs," as they are called, done than to make a move toward the enemy. The new Belgian soldier feels the "noblesse oblige" of the heroes of old time, and he is much better off.

The gunners now have the same guns as their enemy. What a difference it would have made if the men of Liege had had them! The infantrymen have never an empty rifle, while in the trenches around Antwerp some were mowed down by German machine-guns because they had no bullets left, as a Belgian officer told me. There is more food for them than they can eat, while I myself have seen in the beginning Belgian soldiers dig potatoes out of a field, bake them in a wood fire, and have nothing else for supper. The new Belgian soldiers are dressed in khaki; and although some miss that unique uniform to which every man all over the world once took his hat off, they feel the comfort of the new one.

As for the spirit within the Belgian Army to-day, it is enough to say that it is as good as it ever was, in spite of all the rumours spread by the German press, especially in Belgium, about rioting in the Belgian Army. Let me tell here the only case of riot I ever heard of (although there may be a few more); it shows one of the finest features of the Belgian Army.

They were two men who, in the heat of the battle, had temporarily lost their sense of duty and had retreated when the order to charge had been given. In war time there is only one punishment for such, and the two men found themselves in prison. At nightfall an officer came to them in their cell. He was a tall man. His voice was full of pity when he spoke to them, and the look in his eyes comforted the two. This tall officer asked them why they had failed in their duty. Were they not soldiers? Was death even not far better for a soldier than the shame of cowardice? And he told them how severely such acts had to be punished in war time.

The two men told the officer how they regretted their momentary fear. They were soldiers in their hearts, and they felt ashamed in the presence of their officer.

And the tall officer said: "Promise me that if you are released you will do your duty, even in the face of death."

The two men did promise, with tears running over their hard faces, and the next morning they were told that they were free. The tall officer was no one less than King Albert. He had given them their freedom where in any other army they would have been shot. And his trust proved true. For the next day the two men went back into the firing line, and they did their duty.

Such is the spirit of the Belgian Army, from King to soldier. There is no difference. There are only "men" in that army—some who order, others who obey; but all obey the call of the country that suffers and cries for freedom and relief.

The Belgian Army does not desire to conquer. Belgian soldiers do not fight for riches or glory, but for their homes, their wives, and their children. That is the reason why they still hold along the Yser, and why the mighty German army has never been able to drive them out of Belgium. It is an omen of what will come one day—the resurrection of Belgium. It may be long, but the dawn of liberty will break, as sure as the sun rises and sets.

Egbert Hans.

Approximate Music.—The worshippers in a certain chapel had some trouble to keep their faces straight a short time ago. During the service some commotion was caused by a gentleman who accidentally ignited a box of wax matches in his pocket, and was trying to put them out, while his alarmed neighbors struggled equally hard to help him. The minister, being short-sighted, could not make out the reason of the disturbance, and thinking to diplomatically cover the incident, he innocently said: "Brethren, there is little noise going on. Until it is over let us sing. "Sometimes a light surprises."

Aged Resident of Percy Township

Has Passed Away—Death of Mr. Archie Waddell—Hastings News

HASTINGS, Jan. 5.—Another aged resident of Percy has passed away in the person of Mr. Archie Waddell who had reached a very advanced age, and who was highly respected and widely known. Since the death of his wife, some years ago, deceased has made his home with his son Matthew, where he died on Sunday morning. Several sons and daughters survive him, who will mourn the loss of an affectionate father. Mr. Waddell was a member of the Presbyterian Church, here, and will be much missed by those with whom he associated. Particulars regarding the funeral have not yet come to hand.

New Year's Day passed off very quietly here, many of our people spending the holiday with friends out of town.

The Sunday morning service in the Methodist Church took the form of a Covenant Service—a fitting beginning for the New Year.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jas. Metcalfe, Norwood Road, was held on Saturday afternoon to the Norwood cemetery, and was largely attended. Deceased lady had only been ill a short time with pneumonia, and the attending physician was hoping for her recovery, but, contrary to all expectations, she suddenly became worse and soon passed away. Quite a large family of grown-up sons and daughters survive, who with her husband, have a large circle of sympathizing friends.

Schools have re-opened for another year and the teaching staff is feeling better for the holiday.

Monday was a busy day in Hastings, the election being warmly contested. At 5 o'clock the result of the polls stood thus: For Reeve, Mr. Walter Fowlds; Councillors, Messrs. J. J. English, Pat. Howard, Charlie Fowlds and Charlie Plant.

The Hastings hockey team went to Norwood on Thursday evening for a game with the boys there, but were defeated.

Those who attended the "At Home" in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening report a pleasant time.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Patrick Crowley is confined to his room through illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Atkinson spent New Year's Day with friends in Havelock.

Miss Mae Beavis is holidaying with friends in Peterborough and Lakefield.

Miss Myrtle Hess spent Saturday with friends in Norwood.

Miss Helen Chapman of Hamilton spent the holiday with her parents.

The travelling agent for the Massey Harris Co. of Toronto, was in town last week in the interests of the firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly and son spent Sunday with Warkworth friends.

Miss Lily Tate of Peterborough was the guest of her sister, Mrs. L. T. Huycke on New Year's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doherty have been visiting friends in Keene.

Miss Elsie Laing and Miss Marjorie Miller of Norwood were in town on Monday.

Mr. G. Mikel of Ottawa, a former resident of Hastings, has been renewing acquaintances here, a guest at the home of Mr. R. C. Doxsee.

Owing to the icy condition of the pavements pedestrians are in danger of serious bruises.

LOSS OF LIFE ON THE PERSIA STILL MATTER OF DOUBT

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The loss of life in connection with the sinking of the British steamship Persia, torpedoed in the Eastern Mediterranean on Thursday afternoon is still a matter of doubt. Latest advices from Cairo and Alexandra indicate that 168 survivors have been landed, of whom 59 were passengers. Hope that others have been saved is diminishing, as four days have now elapsed since the vessel was destroyed.

No further word has been received concerning Robert N. McNeely, American Consul at Aden, Arabia, and there seems to be little doubt that he was drowned. The safety of Charles Grant of Boston, having been established, it is thought Mr. McNeely was the only American who perished.

It is still impossible to give even with approximate accuracy the loss of life, as the number of persons on board has not been established. The passengers numbered something more than 200, and there were between 200 and 300 members of the crew, so that apparently the death list will run largely in excess of 200.

Sank Rapidly.

Such fragmentary accounts of the disaster as have been obtained from survivors furnish little new information concerning the circumstances of the sinking. All agree, however, that the Persia sank with extraordinary rapidity, within about five minutes of the time she was struck, affording small opportunity for rescue work. None of the survivors who have thus far reported their experience saw any sign of a submarine.

The extent to which popular feeling has been aroused in the allied nations by the sinking of the Persia is indicated by the unrestrained tone of press comment. There is much speculation as to the possible influence of this event on the negotiations which are in progress between the United States and Austria.

At the home of her sister, Mrs. A. E. Pearson, Calgary, the marriage was solemnized on December 28th of Florence Foster, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Foster, of Norwood, and Frederick A. Ogilvie, of Calgary. Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie will reside at 510 22nd Avenue West, Calgary.

The election took place on Monday and the following were elected:

Reeve—B. W. Squire.
Councillors—J. R. McKelvie, R. Tedford, T. Elliott.
School Trustees—J. F. Elliott, F. P. Cuffe, J. O'Keefe.

WOMAN INJURED BY PET ANGORA CAT

Animal Springs at Owner and Claws Face and Hands.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 6.—Mrs. William Portz, 352 Summer avenue, is suffering from severe wounds on her face, hands and head inflicted by a pet Angora cat. The cat was placed on a rear porch for an airing. A large rope fastened to its collar kept it from straying away.

While Mrs. Portz was entertaining a caller, Mrs. Frederick Stelling, they were startled by a commotion on the porch, and found the Angora and a stray cat clawing away at each other. With the aid of several pails of water they succeeded in driving the other cat off.

When Mrs. Portz attempted to pick up her pet the animal flew at her, fastened itself on her head and clawed and bit her. It took doctors nearly two hours to dress her wounds.

The cat was chloroformed.

Hanover Court Decides Cities Can Set Maximum For Local Products Only

HANOVER, via London, Jan. 6.—In passing upon a petty case of the owner of a delicatessen shop who was charged with violation of the municipal maximum price regulations the Supreme Court has rendered a decision which may become of the utmost significance for the entire empire. The defendant had been found guilty in a lower court of selling Brunswick sausage at a higher price than the maximum for Hanover. She appealed on the ground that the city of Hanover had no right to fix prices of goods brought to Hanover from outside point. The Supreme Court sustained this contention.

The court holds that a municipality may establish maximum prices for local products only.

Every city lives almost entirely on imported products, and the custom has been to establish maximum prices suitable to the peculiar needs of each case.

The difficulties in the way of drawing up national laws applicable to all cases will be very great. Until the necessary legislation is enacted there probably will be great confusion everywhere as a result of the court's decision, as maximum prices for a majority of articles of food have been established by all municipalities.

REFLECTIONS ON THE ELECTIONS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—One of the pleasing features of our recent Mayoralty contest was the absence of bitterness and abuse in the conduct of the campaign. This applies to all three candidates, none of whom so far as I know, could be charged with scurrility or bad language. In other respects, so far as could be seen, the candidates, themselves, refrained from any wanton misrepresentation or took any undue advantage of each other previous to or during the day of the election. To the credit of each, it can be said that their election tactics were fairly clean and good tempered. Each of the candidates' election address was free from offensive references, the language guarded, and respectful, and nothing calculated to irritate or rouse invective, or acrimony could be imputed. The same can be said of their election after-thoughts. The successful candidate thanked his supporters modestly and in praiseworthy form, avoiding any appearance of a boastful spirit and giving voice to the high ideals he entertained for harmonious activities in the civic service. His opponent, Mr. Green, who might have been excused had he chosen to reflect somewhat in the language of a defeated candidate, refrained from anything like animosity or a hostile spirit, closing his Card of Thanks to the electors with congratulations to his opponent on his elevation to the Mayor's chair, and wishing him "clear-sailing" in his new civic position.

I would like to mention one other thing in connection with Mr. Green's methods in his canvas for the Mayoralty, which you will admit, was most unusual, and which, perhaps, were not generally known. Mr. Green claims that he never personally solicited an elector to vote for him. His method was simply this: To state the bare legal facts regarding the election; that the elector had his record before him as an alderman; and that on that record he wished to be judged as to his fitness for the position of Mayor of the City. In no case was the elector embarrassed by the straight question as to whether he could promise him his support or not.

Yours respectfully,
ONLOOKER.

How Proud I Felt.—When I was a little girl of eleven I had a surprise which still remains the biggest that I have ever had. Some American teachers were visiting our school, and the headmaster was showing one of them, a lady, round. When they came into our classroom the master, to my immense surprise, called me out, and introduced me to the lady as "one of the most promising scholars we have in the school." The visitor talked to me for about ten minutes, and when I returned to my place I vaguely wondered whether I had been dreaming, for I had never imagined that I was thought so much of.

CHINESE HAVE CURIOUS CUSTOMS AND BELIEFS

Among the many extraordinary customs of the Chinese, says the Newark Call, is that of banding years together in groups of twelve, called 'cycles' and naming each year of the series after some animal. Thus, the first year of a new cycle is the year of the rat, the second the year of the ox, the third the year of the tiger. Every Chinese born in the year of the rat belongs to the order of the rat, and so on. The animal class of every Chinese man and woman is thus recorded and is held to be of great importance in foretelling the future. Another curious fact about the Chinese reckoning of time is that in the Celestial empire a child is held to be one year old as soon as it is born, with the absurd superstition so dear to the Oriental mind, a baby boy is frequently given a girl's name in order to decieve the evil spirit, who apparently, have an objectionable habit of making it as hard as possible to rear a male child successfully.

HOLD UP NURSES AND ROB HOSPITAL OF $3500

Armed Robbers Make Off With Cash-box From Chicago Institution.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Two robbers armed with revolvers ran into the office of St. Luke's Hospital and held up Miss Mary Tobin, cashier, and compelled thirty nurses to hold up their hands. They escaped with a cash box containing $3,500.

It was payday at the hospital and Miss Tobin had $5,000 in her custody. She had paid about $1,500 when the robbers entered and found the line of waiting nurses and other employeeh.

"Up with your hands, or you'll get shot!" was the order of one of the men. It was Miss Tobin who notified the detective bureau. That was two or three minutes after the holdup. All the employees were so astounded by the suddenness of the holdup that they did not move for a time.

MOTHER DIES AFTER SEEKING SON 12 YEARS

Fruitless Search Hastens Death of Rochester Woman.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—In a furnished room in the home of Mrs. Alice Olsen, at No. 112 Front street, is the body of an aged woman, whose 12 years quest for her missing son ended in death. The woman is Mrs. Helen M. Walsh, 78 years old, of No. 100 High street, Rochester, N. Y.

She came here last month in a final effort to find her son, Frank P. Walsh 48 years old. He left home 12 years ago without explanation and while many clews were received by his mother, she was never able to locate him. Her quest took her over many parts of New York and neighbouring states. Several times she arrived in a town or city a day or two after her son had left.

Worn with grief the aged woman left her home in Rochester a month ago and told her daughter she would make one more effort to find her son. She heard of a rivet pilot who was known as "Frank P." and thought she was on her son's trail. When she returned to her room Sunday night, weary and discouraged, she confided to Mrs. Olsen that her search would end to-day at the Sailor's Snug harbor on Staten island. Mrs. Olsen heard her weeping as she lay in bed.

When Mrs. Ilsen knocked on the door there was no response. Entering the room, she found Mrs. Walsh dead. Dr. Tobias of the Volunteer hospital said she died of a broken heart.

BARD IS NO LOVER OF CATS

Kipling Calls Them Animals That Walk By Themselves.

Rudyard Kipling, says the London Chronicle, is evidently no lover of cats, for the tale of "The Cat Who Walked by Himself" is based on the latent hostility between the cat and the man. He describes how the dog, the horse and the cow in turn are attracted to the cave of our ancestors and become domesticated, but the cat still retains his freedom. Even though he has fallen a victim to the seductions of the fireside, and agreed to accept the terms imposed by the man and the dog, he never becomes really friendly.

You remember the lines: "He will kill mice and he will be kind to babies when he is in the house, just as long as they don't pull his tail too hard. But when night comes he is the cat that walks by himself, and all places are alike to him. Then he goes out to the wet, wild woods, up the wet, wild trees, or on the wet, wild roofs waving his wild tail and walking by his wild love."

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Knowledge the Fount of Fervency.

Simson—Now, Bobbie, remember that when we sit down to dinner the Bishop will say a blessing.

Bobbie—Does he know what we're going to have?"

Simson—Certainly not.

Bobbie—Better let me do it. He won't put half the heart in it that I will.

FATHER SAVES HIS CHILDREN FROM BLAZE

BUFFALO, Jan. 6.—Martin H. Richter, a wall paper and paint dealer of 586 Walden avenue, rescued three of his children from being suffocated when fire was discovered in his store and smoke poured into the family apartments on the second floor. Richter wrapped blankets around the three children who were in bed and made his way down a rear stairway. The children were cared for at the home of Dr. Earl D. Danser, 595 Walden avenue. They suffered slightly from shock.

Chandelier Causes Fire.

A broken chandelier is said to have caused the fire. Richter, his wife and four children were having breakfast in the dining room on the second floor while the three babies were in bed in the front of the house. The blaze had gained considerable headway when it was discovered by Richter.

Smoke poured through the store and into the stairways and someone sounded an alarm, from box 281, Walden and Bailey avenues. Before the firemen arrived Richter had the children out of the house with the assistance of his wife and Mrs. Danser. The whole family of nine were driven out.

The interior of the store was gutted and considerable damage was done to the contents on the second floor. The damage is estimated at $5,000. There is insurance.

An Epitaph.

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired,
She lived in the house where the help was not hired.
Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends, I am going
To where there's no cooking, no washing or sewing;
But everything there is exact to my wishes,
For where they don't eat, there's no washing dishes,
I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But having no voice I'll get out of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now. Oh, mourn for me never;
I'm going to do nothing forever and ever."

DON'T PUT GARBAGE CAN ON SIDEWALK

Nor Nearer the Street Than the Three Feet Back From the House Line Get This

When you put out your garbage tins to-morrow or the next day remember that you don't have to decorate the sidewalk with them. In fact the new regulations were designed to obviate this unsightly practice. But it has become habitual to carry the cans and boxes out to the sidewalk line, and doubtless it will be some time before they become accustomed to the recent change. Under the new contract citizens are required to place the garbage containers just back of the house line. That is they should be at the side of the house and not more than three feet back from the front line of each house. If this is not generally adopted now the contractors may be led to forget the terms of the contract and demand that the garbage utensils be put out on the sidewalk. Last year's Council made an effort to keep the city clean and tidy, and the co-operation of house holders in this matter of garbage should receive every co-operation.

Weather Man Slipped Rapidly Over Scales In Yesterday's Change

The technique of the weather man was displayed last night in his dashing cadenza over the thermometer's scale. From 41 deg. down to 3 deg. above zero was a well sustained effort, passing from 'p' to 'ff' with well defined gradations, ending with sustenuto vigor and the pedal down. If rapid changes of weather are unhealthy, the past twenty-four hours have not been the most beneficial to struggle through. On the other hand, remembering the downward plunges of other years, there must be some real zero stuff tucked away somewhere between now and the seventeenth of March in Old Prob's trick bag.

BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings for the week ending January 6th totalled $644,855, an increase over the previous week of $215,640. The same week last month the clearings were $560,789, while for the same week last year they were $534,607. The total clearings for the year were $20,970,877.

The Coming of Harry Lauder

Every man and woman who delights to rock with laughter for more than an hour at least, will welcome the announcement that the greatest comedian of his time, Harry Lauder, will be seen in this city at the Grand on Jan. 24th.

Mr. Lauder is making his eighth annual tour of America, under the direction of William Morris, and his popularity grows with the years, for not alone in New York, but in every city in which he has appeared, he has played to the largest audiences of his career. In many places it was easier to turn people away from the theatres than to supply them with tickets, and had the opera houses been twice as large they would have failed to accommodate those who clamoured for admission.

In addition to the songs which have not only made him famous but have been sung and whistled throughout the world for years, Mr. Lauder will present an entirely new budget, of which he has written and composed the greater number, and in presenting them, he wears entirely new costumes and takes up a novel line of character work.

Mr. Morris has given Mr. Lauder a vaudeville company of international artists which has never been excelled, and which include the Al Golem Troupe, a company of 16 daring performers, dancers, acrobats and comedians, who give glimpses of the Far East and its customs and who have never before been seen in this country; Mlle. Lucille and her marvelous talking Cockatoo; Dave Genaro and Isabelle Jason, in a series of Dances; Selwyn Driver, in his humorous piano specialty; and Albert Donnelly in comedy shadowgraphy.

SPEND MONEY SLOWLY IS MAYOR'S ADVICE

LACKAWANA, Jan. 6.—As there is only a little over $4,000 on hand to run the city until the taxes begin to come in in February, Mayor Toomey advised the Council last night to go slowly in making expenditure as it requires over $5,000 to cover the payrolls for one month.

He stated that some means would have to be taken to raise money until next month.

ONE THOUSAND SHELL-MAKERS FROM CANADIAN TROOPS

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Canada is helping Lloyd George by releasing for munitions work in England about one thousand skilled mechanics from among the Canadian troops who have gone overseas. The request for their release came some days ago, and was promptly acceded to by the Minister of Militia. Today the following cable of thanks from Lloyd-George was received by the Minister of Militia:

"I thank you most warmly personally as Minister of Defence, and the Canadian Government, for the ready response which you made to my request, made to you through Sir Max Aitken, to release certain highly-skilled mechanics from the Canadian forces for work in our factories.

"I thank you again for your quick co-operation, which is another sign of the ties that bind the Dominion and the motherland. The resolution of our men in the field and in the factory is more powerful than ever, and we look forward to undoubted victory.

"(Signed) Lloyd George."

Preparing For The Session

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.—Preparations are in active progress for the assembling of Parliament on Wednesday next, for the election of a Speaker, and for the formal opening on the following day. This week's Cabinet Councils are being devoted to the legislative programme, and the final revision of the estimates which will be submitted. Interest centres mainly in the extension of the term of Parliament for a year, as well as war appropriations. The budget speech is not expected to make any extensive changes in the tariff, but some important announcements on war finance are anticipated. There will be no railway or general legislation, apart from routine, and if the term extension is agreed to—as expected— the session it is thought, will conclude by Easter. The uncertain element is the attitude of the Liberals in regard to committee enquiries. If these are proceeded with, the session may be lengthened.

The address in reply to the speech from the throne will be moved by Dr. Thompson, of the Yukon, and probably seconded by F. J. Robidoux, of Kent, N.B. Richard Blain will likely succeed the late Mr. Lancaster as chairman of the Railway committee.

OILED STREETS STAND SEVERE STORM TEST

Appropriations for the oiling of 500 miles of streets in St. Louis, Mo., will be asked of the next municipal assembly, the street commissioner of that city has announced, as a result of the acid test given to the 100 miles of oiled streets by recent record-breaking rains. The storm ruined some unpaved and unoiled streets and washed many others badly, while the oiled roads were none the worse for the week-long downpour.

SOLDIER IS HELD FOR QUEBEC MURDER

Over Fifty Revolvers Were Found in the Battalion.

QUEBEC, Jan. 6.—A coroner's jury is deliberating on the appropriate verdict to be rendered in the case of James Kane, a member of the 33rd Battalion, from London, Ont., who is held here in connection with the death on New Year's Day of a local Greek restaurant-keeper. Witnesses of the shooting swore Kane was the slayer.

This particular shooting affray, attributed by the police to this member of the 33rd, leads Le Soleil to comment on the conduct of this military body.

After reviewing the brutal circumstances of the murder, Le Soleil says it would be childish to blame the whole military corps for excesses, but says that since its arrival here from London, whence it came following a number of encounters with the police, the battalion has conducted itself in no way exemplary.

The newspaper adds that the soldiers themselves are not so much to blame as the officers, whose duty it would be, to inspect the troops more frequently to remove all weapons from the men. Le Soleil says it learns that yesterday in the course of an inspection no less than 50 revolvers were found in the hands of the men of the 33rd.

The article closes by saying that Quebec expected the 33rd was sent here for embarking, but it seems that as far as this battalion is concerned Quebec is more of a place of deportation than a point of embarkation.

FINANCIAL CONDITION REMARKABLY GOOD

OTTAWA, Jan. 6.— The financial statement of the Dominion shows a betterment of $38,400,000 compared with a year ago. Taking expenditure and revenue together, exclusive of war costs, the financial condition is remarkably good.

The revenue for the nine months ending Dec. 31 was $123,000,000, and for the same period in the last fiscal year $89,600,000, an increase of $22,400,000 in revenue.

Payments on ordinary expenditure for the nine months was $74,000,000, as against $86,000,000 during the corresponding period of the previous year, a decrease of $11,000,000.

Capital expenditure was $28,000,000, and last year $33,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000.

A BONAPARTE ENLISTS.

Montreal, Jan. 6.—E. P. Bonaparte, a member of the famous Bonaparte family of Corsica, from which Napoleon sprang, is one of the recent recruits with No. 5 Universities overseas company. He came to Montreal from the West.

Tenders For New Cottages

Board of Health Will Consider Tenders This Afternoon

Tenders for the cottages to be erected in connection with the Queen Mary Isolation hospital will be opened this afternoon. A special meeting of the Board of Health has been called for this purpose. The cottages, if erected, will be used for the treatment of spinal meningitis, smallpox, and other virulent diseases. The cost is not expected to exceed four or five hundred dollars.

The Meeting Was Adjourned

Health Association Will Hold Their Annual Meeting Next Wednesday

Last evening a meeting of the Peterborough Health Association was to have been held, but owing to the failure of many members to attend, the meeting was postponed until Wednesday, Jan. 12th. Arrangements had been made to show a number of lantern slides concerning cases that have been successfully treated by the two district nurses.

On motion of Mr. W. H. Dunsford and Rev. Father Phalen, it was decided to adjourn the meeting one week in the hope that a more representative gathering might be obtained.

RILEY SAYS KIRCHWEY WILL REMAIN WARDEN

Superintendent Denies Story Appointment is Only Temporary.

ALBANY, Jan. 6.—John B. Riley, state superintendent of prisons, was indignant when he read statements purporting to come from Dean Kirchwey, the new warden of Sing Sing prison, that he was merely the temporary occupant of a position which Mr. Osborne would again assume after his exoneration of the charges made against him by the grand jury of Westchester county. Dean Kirchwey was quoted as declaring that "I am not warden of Sing Sing, but Thomas Mott Osborne is my warden."

As soon as Judge Riley read this statement he had a talk over the wire with Dean Kirchwey. The superintendent said later that Dean Kirchwey insisted he had been misquoted and misrepresented in the newspapers; that he fully understood that he was the actual warden at Sing Sing and if he had any doubt about it, Judge Riley made the fact plain over the telephone.

Judge Riley said Dean Kirchwey was having new committment blanks and letter heads printed which would bear his name as warden.

JOFFRE'S ORDERS ON DAY OF OPENING OF GLORIOUS YEAR

For France—Enemy Is Everywhere Held—Hour of Chastisement Is About to Strike

PARIS, Jan. 6—The order of the day issued by Gen. Joffre, the French Commander-in-Chief, to the army on New Year's Day has just appeared in an army bulletin.

"Soldiers of the republic," says the order, "at the moment when this year of war is terminating, you may consider your work with pride and measure the grandeur of what you have accomplished. In the Artois, in the Champagne, in the Woevre, and in the Vosges you have inflicted upon the enemy resounding blows and caused him sanguinary losses, losses incomparably greater than ours. The German army still holds out, but sees its numbers and resources diminish ing each day. Obliged to succor weakening Austria, Germany must seek in secondary theatres temporary and easy successes that she has failed to gain on the principal fronts. All the German colonies are either isolated from the world or in our hands.

"On the contrary, the Allies are reinforcing themselves unceasingly. Incontestable masters of the sea they can easily obtain supplies while the central empires, financially and economically exhausted, are reduced to counting only upon our discord or fatigue. As if the allies who have sworn to fight to the bitter end, were disposed to violate their oath at the moment when the hour of chastisement was going to strike for Germany; as if our soldiers, who have waged the hardest of combats, were not of the stuff to hold out in spite of cold and mud.

"Let us be proud of our might and our right. Let us think of the past only to find in it reasons for confidence. Let us think of our dead only to avenge them. While our enemies are talking of peace, let us think only of war and of victory.

At the beginning of a year that will be, thanks to you, a glorious one for France, your commander-in-chief addresses to you from the bottom of his heart the most affectionate greetings.

(Signed) "J. JOFFRE.

"General Headquarters of the French Army, Dec. 20."

Forward With God.

In the order of the day issued on Jan. 1 Crown Prince Frederick William said:

"Comrades of the Fifth Army, for the second time we are in the enemy's country on New Year's Day. The past year has strengthened the ties of friendship between us. I know that I can rely upon you.

"If the new year brings a decision with the help of God, then only one thought must inspire us; forward with God, for the Emperor and Germany towards a great future."

No German Flag To Fly Seas Until Indemnity Is Paid

LONDON, Jan. 6.—No German flag is to be permitted to fly on any ocean; no neutral vessel owned in whole or in part by Germans is to be permitted to ply the seven seas until the indemnity which the allies will demand is paid in full—this is the authoritative plan of the British Admiralty outlined to-day to the correspondent of The Mail and Empire.

The British navy, to use the words of the source of this news—an official high in Government circles—will hereafter constitute itself an army of occupation of the high seas, both during and after the war. Germany may take and occupy countries and exact monthly indemnities as she has been doing in Belgium, but the British navy proposes to go a step further. With the full consent of the Government it will stranglehold Germany's overseas trade even after the war, if necessary, until the peace terms enunciated by Premier Asquith are fulfilled to the letter.

In a word Germany may continue her occupation of territory in Europe, but the might of England's sea power will be steadfastly exerted and the Mail and Empire correspondent has every reason for stating that the highest authorities believe it will be a decisive factor in the world struggle that is now being fought.

THIS MORNING'S POLICE COURT

Fred Eastland Was Fined Two Dollars on the Usual Charge

Fred Eastland appeared in Police Court this morning and was fined two dollars for being drunk in a public place. Failure to pay the fine will entitle him to a meal ticket at the local bastile for a period of ten days. This is Eastland's first appearance this year. Last year he faced Magistrate Dumble on nine different occasions

EIGHT WERE DROWNED

Special to The Examiner.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 6. Eight persons were drowned when the Ohio River steamboat Kanawha was blown against the pier of a dam near here last night and sank. The accident occurred during a howling rainstorm that prevented the cries of those on board the vessel from reaching shore.

CONSIDERS SUEZ CANAL SAFE

Suicide for Teutons to Invade Egypt, Says E. Ashmead-Bartlett.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6—"It is foolish to believe that Germany will make an attack on Egypt. Such a campaign could not possibly be successful," said E. Ashmead-Bartlett, who arrived here yesterday from England. "This war has shown that a strategic defensive is the greatest move. This has been demonstrated by Germany. Very little impression has been made on their lines on either the western or eastern front because they have assumed a strategic defensive. Electrically charged barbed wire and three lines of well constructed trenches have the strength of Gibraltar. This condition prevails in Egypt. England has more troops guarding the Suez Canal than she needs, and they are all looking for trouble. Strategic defence is the answer to the British position at the Suez and it would be suicide for Germany or Austria, or Turkey, to attempt such a campaign."

Eggs are naturally bad and must be won over to goodness even by artificial good sense.

HOCKEY

The Campbellford Herald says. On New Year's afternoon the Junior O. H. A. team of Peterborough played the Campbellford Intermediates, the locals losing by the score of 5—3. The Peterborough Juniors are much stronger than the Cobourg Intermediates. Campbellford was stronger in this game as Manager Cole had chanced several players around. The game was fast from start to finish, and the locals had just as much of the play as Peterborough, but were not as good as the visitors when getting into the nets.

"BILLY" SUNDAY RAPS HYPENS

Says Disloyal Americans Should Set Sail for Home.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 6.—Rev. Billy Sunday, in addressing a large audience here last night, said that the young American who goes out to war for his country does it because of his oath—because it is for his country.

"And now," continued the evangelist, darting to one side of the platform and shaking his finger and then bounding to the other, "I want to say that we must all be American or sail at once for Europe.

"Germany said she would soon be drinking coffee in London They are still sipping tea in London," he said with a smile. "Germany said she would be in Paris by Christmas, but everyone still speaks French there. She said, 'We will drive England from the seas,' but they still sing 'Rule Britannia.'

"Do I believe in preparedness?" he asked. "I do, with a great big P. I believe in this country having the biggest gun that can be built, the greatest battleship, the biggest torpedo in the world, big enough to spit 250 pounds of guncotton; the greatest and best submarines, so they can turn into junk the strongest and most powerful battleship ever put together.

"We must prepare ourselves. Jesus Christ is the greatest recruiting officer of the universe. In this day of wars and rumors of wars, with everything degrading arrayed against the good, all hell against all heaven, the devil gainst Christ, God must have soldiers who will stand pat."

WHY WAS PARLIAMENT FLOUTED?

Last March Parliament voted a hundred millions for the war. In April the Prime Minister took authorization for 150,000 men, enough to absorb the vote. In October the number was increased, to 250,000. It has now been raised to 500,000; or three hundred and thirty-three per cent. more than Parliament had any knowledge of. And this authorization is made while the last levy is twenty-five thousand short; and it is done only twelve days before the Parliament meets.

What is the reason for treating Parliament in so cavalier a fashion? If it is due to so common a failing as want of thought, it is a perfect illustration of how immersion in details can observe the lustres of our cause. If it is a meditated intimation that Parliament is beneath those who do its bidding, it recalls the individual of whom it was written that his eyes were in the ends of the earth. No government in London, Liberal, Tory or Coalition, in the midst of the gravest emergencies would ever dream of trebling the army without the immediate sanction of Parliament. Members would revolt against being treated as puppets on the very eve of their being called together. Public opinion outside would be swift to assert its appreciation of what is involved by such a violation of all the arcana of Parliamentary government.

The war has brought many surprises, but this is the most astonishing of all. No such negation of British Parliamentary government has occurred in our time; nor, I fear in any time; for there can be no comparison between Charles the First and Sir Robert Borden. There was no warrant for it. The readiness of the country to concentrate all its powers to the fight should have secured to the whole body of its representatives the prime responsibility of vindicating the freedom wherewith we are free.—Arthur Hawkes in Ottawa Free Press.

Officer Shot Five Times

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—The city is paying the death claim on the life of Lieut. R. N. C. Davis "D" Company of the 3rd Battalion. Considerable difficulty in proving the young officer's death was experienced owing to his having been killed in no man's land between the British and German trenches.

It was on May 2th when a surprise attack by the British was planned. Lieut. Davis left the trench with his platoon, but unfortunately as they came through the hedge the Germans let up flares and discovered them. The enemy opened a murderous machine gun fire, but the Canadians advanced. Davis got to the German trench, but was shot down. A private named Green laid him on his back and sought to get him back to the Canadian trenches. When within fifteen yards of his objective Davis said that his pain was too great to go farther. Green laid him tenderly in an excavation torn out by a shell and there he perforce left him.

In the identification papers is a document from the German Red Cross stating that they took off an English lieutenant named Davis a watch, ring and disc. These were found one kilometre northeast of Festubert and northeast of Cinque Rue. The body could not be interred owing to being close to the Canadian barbed wire entanglements.

Lieut. Davis was shot five times.

Perfect Ice For To-night's Game At Brock Street Rink

93rd Battalion Intermediates Will Go Into Action Against Peterborough Junior O.H.A. Team---Lively Battle Promised for To-night--Skating Afterwards With the Full Band of the 93rd Battalion in Attendance.

The change to cold weather has made it possible to provide the best sheet of ice of the season for to-night's game between the 93rd Battalion Intermediates and the Peterborough Electrics Junior O.H.A. team, which is called for 8 o'clock sharp at Brock St. Rink. The result will be that the game will be played under ideal conditions, and the prospects are that a big crowd will take advantage of the opportunity to see a fast hockey game, and afterwards enjoy a skate on perfect ice to the music of the full Band of the 93rd Battalion, which will be in attendance during the game and afterwards. The fans are anxious to get a line on both the soldier team and the Peterborough Juniors, and to-night's game will afford a splendid chance to size them both up. With an intermediate team stacked up against a junior outfit, the fans may rest assured that the competition will be of the keenest, as the youngsters will work their heads off to try and score a win over their older and heavier opponents. The game is called for 8 o'clock sharp, and there will be skating afterwards until 10:30 o'clock. A big squad of the 93rd Battalion men will be on hand to cheer for the boys in khaki, while the local youngsters will not lack friends in the crowd. Altogether it looks like a big night's sport at Brock St. Rink.

The teams will line up as follows:

93rd Battalion—Goal, Lieut. Widdifield; defence, Lieut. Matthews, Lieut. Dupuy; forwards, Lieut. de Puyjalon, Lieut. Ketchum, Lieut. Stevenson, Pte. Anderson, Pte. Blewitt, Pte. Wedlock.

Electric Juniors—Goal, C. Montgomery; defence, Lowes, Legros, F. Montgomery; forwards, Rose Hamilton, Graham, Cherrett, Bartley, Kennaley, Smythe.

CAMPBELLFORD RUNNING EXCURSION FOR THE GAME HERE TO-MORROW

The Campbellford intermediate O.H.A. team is so confident of earning a decision over the Electrics in to-morrow night's game at Brock street rink that they are running an excursion to Peterborough on a special G.T.R. train to-morrow and the Easterners will be on hand with a big bunch of rooters. Campbellford have strengthened their line-up and feel that with Tobin, Montgomery and Baillie off the Peterborough line-up they can breeze home with the bacon. Tommy Moffatt promises some surprises for Peterborough fans to-morrow night, but the Electric's management are confident that the genial Tommy will get a little surprise on his own account when he sends his braves into action to-morrow night. Peterborough fans have commended the Electric's decision to go ahead and fight out the district in spite of the O.H.A.'s action and the Peterborough team will have good support from the citizens who are in favour of a home-brew team.

LINDSAY JUNIORS BEAT BELLEVILLE BY 6 TO 1

LINDSAY, Jan. 5.— Before a large crowd Lindsay opened the hockey season here to-night, defeating Belleville in a junior O. H. A. game by 6 to 1. the winners leading 2 to 0 at the end of the first, and by 6 to 0 at the end of the second period. The ice was sticky and honeycombed, with the boards bare in a number of places, and the ice covered with slush and water.

The game was one of the cleanest seen here in many years, Lindsay decorating the fence twice, while Belleville did not have a man in the box during the whole game. Combination playing was almost out of the question, as the slushy ice held the puck, and play dwindled down to one and two-man rushes. Flavelle and Carew, for Lindsay, excelled at this kind of going, both men using their weight to good advantage. Griffis and Haugh of last year's team, were also well up in the game, while the three new men —Mills, Reid and Mitchell— played good hockey, Mitchell in goal stopping many hard shots, and clearly nicely. Belleville have a well-balanced team good skaters and stick-handlers, and on harder ice would have made a better showing. The teams:

Referee—Lou Marsh.

ELECTRIC PLAYERS JOINING THE 93rd BATTALION

What has been the Electric's loss in regard to the action of the O.H.A. in refusing certificates to certain of its players will probably be the 93rd Battalion's gain, as W. J. Tobin, the goalkeeper, and R. Montgomery, right wing of the Electrics, are enlisting with the local battalion and will be therefore eligible to play with the 93rd. Montgomery will likely play for the soldiers against the Electric juniors in to-night's game if he signs his attestation papers to-day. He will be a tower of strength to the soldiers' team.

A Notice For Junior Players

All junior O.H.A. players who are to take part in to-night's game at Brock street rink are asked to be in their dressing room at Brock street rink at 7.15 sharp to-night. All players who have not handed in their O.H.A. certificates are asked to bring them with them to-night in order that they may be registered as soon as possible.

CURLING

The Ladies' Curling Club will hold their first meeting at the Curling Rink on Saturday afternoon at 2:30. All players or ladies who desire to join are asked to be on hand.

Hard, keen ice has returned to the Curling Rink, and the scheduled games will be resumed to-night. There was water on the ice last night, but with the sudden drop in temperature it quickly froze.

A meeting of the Club will be held to-morrow night when two new applications for membership will be considered.

LEWIS FEARS NONE OF THEM

BUFFALO, Jan. 6.—Before Jimmy Johnston, manager for Ted Lewis, the whirlwind English welterweight left town for New York he made an agreement with the Queensberry Athletic club, offering to box anyone it may name. Lewis said "make it 136 to 300 pounds."

So far as could be judged at the conclusion of the bout in the auditorium, the public boxing fancy was fairly well split up as to the justice of the award. Half thought Brennan and half Lewis. The Lewis chaps thought the Englishman had not only outboxed and outhit Brennan, but that a feature which should be counted heavily in his favor was the chaos into which his skilled defense frequently threw the attack of the East Sider. The Brennan boys, on the other hand, declared emphatically that after the third round, when Brennan rallied to his work in the face of an opening which would have discouraged a less courageous battler. Kayo had the better of it and that his continuous pursuit of Lewis and his heavy exchanges when he cornered the visitor cut down the other's lead at the start. Both boys undoubtedly showed evidence of the hard going in the last round and neither looked particularly sorry that the battle was ended.

"TURKISH CARPETS" MADE IN IRELAND

DUBLIN, Jan. 6.—Ireland is no longer incurious of her own things, but once in a while she still overlooks a native achievement. For instance, Manchester has just told Dublin that Ireland now manufacturers "Turkish carpets" which would decieve the elect of Constantinople.

Turc-Irish carpets are now added to Turc-Irish cigarettes. It is a bold bid for the capture of enemy trade in war time. Costly carpets can hardly be regarded as a war industry, but the Donegal factories, from which the Turc-Irish specimens come, are conquering the instinct of economy by sheer merit. Even now there are enough orders to keep the workers employed. The skill and beauty of the work made steady progress in the calm highlands, where George Russell spent his summer holidays. The design and color of the carpets which was exhibited at Manchester ravished the expert eye, and we are told charmed an order from an Egyptian connoisseur.

The manufacture of hand tufted carpets is about 15 years old in County Donegal and has given employment to hundreds of peasants who have inherited through all the troubled ages of Irish history the subtle flair for form and color that distinguished their Celtic ancestors. The Kildare carpet factory, which was reorganized on a commercial scale about five years ago, has succumbed to the stress of war. It specialized in large carpets of the gorgeous and expensive sort which finds patrons in American millionaires and the managers of international hotels. To-day even these personages and institutions are cutting their carpets according to their cloth. So the Kildare industry languished, but it has now come into the hands of the firm which deals most extensively in Donegal carpets and will be reopened with a good backing of capital. The successful struggle of the Irish carpet industry in war time is made still more noteworthy by the fact that like all other textile industries, it is suffering from the scarcity of dyes.

War industries are booming in Ireland. The woolen factories are humming night and day. The only shadow on the growth of the munition shops is the fear of the publicans that Dublin may be made a scheduled area. Irish agriculture is enjoying golden hours. Naturally, however, the smaller and more artistic home industries have suffered. The men are at the war or in the fields and workshops. Many of the girls are making munitions.

The demand for the minor luxuries of life is declining with every new pamphlet that issues from the Irish war savings committee. There is talk of a commercial glass factory in Dublin, but the little industries in stained glass and enamels have fallen on evil days. The lace industry, a very important affair in rural Ireland, has been hard hit, and there is some depression in the famous centres in Kerry, Cork and Limerick.

There is one cheerful feature in the outlook for Irish home industries and it is mainly due to the enterprise and energy of the country's educated women. They have called a new industry into existence to redress the balance of the old. In the notable Irish number of the Times which was published on March 17, 1913, a writer wondered why Ireland had never adopted the industry of toy making. Soon after the outbreak of war the great millinery shops in Dublin and Belfast were obliged to dismiss a large number of seamstresses and many of these probably would be destitute to-day if a band of good ladies—including the leading suffragists—had not come to their help. Workshops for the manufacture of dolls and other toys were started in Dublin and Belfast. Some hundreds of girls are now employed and the number is increasing rapidly. Fortunately the financial results are most encouraging. The industrial associations, which are the barometers of Irish industry, say that most of the new toy factories are selling as quickly as they can produce. One may hope that the toy industry is now firmly established in Ireland.

HOCKEY

Frank Hefferman, the former Victoria defence player, is playing with the Crescents, of New York. The latter are scheduled to play in Boston to-night, and yesterday President George R. Hallock, of the American Hockey League, wired President James Sutherland, of the O. H. A., regarding Hefernan's status. Sutherland wired back that Hefferman was under suspension by the O. H. A., but was not professionalized.

The Toronto Star says: Harry E. Watson, better known as "Pudge" Watson, has the unique distinction of being the only municipal controller in Ontario playing hockey in the O. H. A. Watson, who has played right wing for Whitby ever since it was a flag station, is serving his second term in Council, and he has headed the poll both times. He is sturdy-set, good-natured, silent fellow, who plays the game of life like he plays hockey. On the ice he sticks right where he belongs, checks his man vigorously, but fairly, and when he gets the puck takes the nearest way to the goal. If there is anyone in his way Watson plows into him and somebody goes down. If the unfortunate happens to be "Pudge" he clambers up without a squawk, and goes right back to business with his whole heart. Watson was married to-day to a well known Whitby young lady but right up to the time the wedding bells rang out even his closest friends were not certain that he would join the ranks of the benedicts. He kept a close tongue in his head, and did not even tell his own brothers positively when the wedding would take place. Why. Secretary Bob Daverall of the hockey team did not even know if he would be available for the next game.

To-day--The Epiphany

or the Manifestation of the Infant Saviour to the Gentiles —Tales of the Three Magi or Wise Men

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

To-day, January the sixth—the twelfth day after Christmas—is celebrated by the Anglican and Roman Churches, as being the date fixed for the Festival of the Epiphany, or the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, when the wise man (or Magi) from the East, offered gifts. It is a day almost universally observed, there being special additions to the usual Offices.

History of the Term.

As its name suggests, the Greek word 'Epiphania,' (or appearance, manifestation, acceptation), had its origin in the Eastern Church. Among the Syrians this feast was termed the 'denho,' or up-going—a name to be connected with the notion of rising light, expressed by St. Luke, in his Gospel, Chap. 1, v. 78. At the present time a fair is held, at this period, in Rome. How far the practice there observed in the selling and buying of all sorts of earthenware, images, whistles, etc., all representing some type of Roman life, may be connected with the old Roman December feast of the Saturnalia, is difficult to say.

Date Only Problematical.

The reason for the fixing on this date—January the sixth—is impossible to discover. Those who read my article on the "Present Month," in the issue of "The Examiner," on January the third, will remember I commented on the fact that once March was the first month of the year. It is assumed that the dates of December the 25th, for Christmas, and January the 6th, allocated to the Epiphany, were arrived at by a backward calculation from the 25th of March, and the 6th of April, respectively.

The Old and New Styles.

Prior to the year 1752, when the "style" was changed in England, the year began on March 25th. It had been altered by Pope Gregory, in 1582, but not adopted by England, until nearly 200 years later.

For further details of the "old" and "new" styles, the reader may see an article in to-morrow's "Examiner" on the "Russian Christmas Day."

The Feast of the Sun.

It was the custom of the heathen to celebrate the birthday of the Sun on December 25th, and on it they lit lights on account of the feast. In these solemnities and festivities the Christians also participated. When, therefore, the teachers observed that the Christians were inclined towards this festival, they took counsel and decided that the Birthfeast be kept on December 25th, and the Feast of the Epiphany on January the sixth.

Other Manifestations.

At much about the same period of the year, as the Epiphany of which I am now treating, were other manifestations of Christ's Divine power. Tradition has it that His baptism by John Baptist, in Jordan, the miracle at Cana, in Galillee, when water was turned into wine on the occasion of a marriage feast, took place on what were practically anniversaries of the visit and homage of the Magi.

"The Three Kings of Cologne"

Is the name under which the wise men of the East have been popularly known, although it is, to a certain extent, a misnomer. There does not appear to be any Biblical sanction for this attribute of royalty, although tradition has endowed them with specific kingdoms, and give them names which the Evangelists were apparently ignorant of, and as regards their connection with Cologne, this will appear later on.

According to the authorities these three Wise Men were Gaspar, Caspar, or Jaspar, King of Tarsus, the land of Myrrh; Melchior, King of Arabia, where the soil is coloured with gold; and Balthasar, King of Saba, where frankincense flows from the trees. Anyway they were wise and learned men.

Foretold in the Psalms.

How these gifts and their sources were foreshadowed in the Psalms of David? I quote from Cranmer's or the Prayer Book version: "Then shall the princes come out of Egypt: the Morian's land shall soon stretch out her hands unto God." Psalm 68, v. 31.

"The Kings of Tharsis and the isles shall give presents: the Kings of Arabia and Saba shall bring gifts."

"He shall live and unto Him shall be given of the gold of Arabia; prayer shall be made ever unto Him, and daily shall He be praised."—Psalm 72, v. 10, 15.

"Star of the East, the Horizon Adorning."

When they beheld the wondrous star, they appear to have risen joyfully and mounted their camels, or dromedaries, and set forth on their long and dangerous journey. The Star 'went before' and they arrived at length in Jerusalem. From two to three years is supposed to have been occupied in this pilgrimage. On their arrival they had lost sight of the star, and they asked "Where is He who is born King of the Jews? We have seen His star, but we have lost it." This disappearance of the star was in accordance with the will of God, who desired that the nativity of His Son should be made known throughout Jerusalem.

Naturally it soon

Came to the Ears of Herod

that these Three Kings were enquiring as to the whereabouts of a Child whom they called the King of the Jews. Accordingly, he called together all his learned men, and enquired as to where the prophets had foretold that the Messiah should be born. He was told "In Bethlehem." Herod was much troubled, and summoned the wise men before him, telling them to go to Bethlehem, and if they found the infant they should return and tell him "that I may come and worship Him also." What Herod's pretended worship was, I told in the narrative of the Holy Innocents, (Dec. 28).

But it appears that in a dream, the wise men were warned to seek out Bethlehem, as being the 'ultima thule' of their perigrinations, and not to return to Herod, and we eventually find them—still led by the wondrous star—at the manger bed in the stable of the inn, in that comparatively small city.

Tales of the Magi.

Around no characters of the Gospel has legend more exuberantly flowered. First, we find them promoted from mere "wise men," members of a sacred caste to "princes." This appears to have been the idea of Tertullian, a famous Latin historian, which he evolved to fit in with the language of the prophets who foretold the advent of Eastern Kings with gifts of gold and incense to the Messiah.

Thus the Feast of the Epiphany becomes the "Feast of the Three Kings."

Why Were These Three?

In a sermon by Leo the Great, their unrevealed number is fixed; Hilary, of Arles, finds in them a symbol of the mysterious Trinity; the Venerable Bede harmonises their number with that of the threefold gifts of the Holy Spirit; the three parts of the then known earth—Europe, Asia, Africa; the three great Noachic divisions of the human race—the descendants of Shem, Ham, and Japhet.

Symbolic Meaning of the Gifts.

Then the gifts themselves put on their symbolic meanings. The gold is offered as to a King. The myrrh prefigures the bitterness of the Passion; the frankincense proclaims the Divinity and the Priesthood. This is the view taken by Suicer, in his 'Thesaurus under Magus.'

Others read the symbols with feelings less fine; the gold helped the poverty of the Holy Family; the incense was to sweeten the stable's noxious air; the myrrh was a herbal preparation to strengthen the newly-born.

Their Names.

Next, the three, like the two thieves, the Rich Man and the Centurion at the Cross must be named. Bede, in his 'De Collectaneis,' a kind of miscellaneous Catchism, derives the names most probably from reports of eastern pilgrims, and Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthasar became the travellers' patron Saints. The first is said to have been Melchior, an old man with a long beard and white hair, who brought gold from Arabia to the Lord, the King. The second, by name, Gaspar, of Saba, a beardless, ruddy youth, honoured the God with incense. The third, a black man, bearded, by name Balthasar, by myrrh, confessed the Son of Man destined to die."

The Meaning of Their Names.

Thus Bede, who continues with a description of their dress, drawn either from some early painting, or from a miracle-play he had seen. Names, in such representations, were essential, and they were probably invented at random.

These familiar names of the Magi, given by Bede, mean, respectively Gaspar, the White One; Melchior King of Light; Balthasar, Lord of Treasures; and the three are said to be descendants of Balaam the Prophet.

Symbols and Detail.

If the desire of the West has been to find symbolic meanings in the story, that of the Eastern Church has been to develop its detail. Here tradition takes on a different character. Zoroaster had foretold that his descendants should see the Star, which in the latter days, was to herald the Coming of the Mighty One.

Their Arrival at Jerusalem.

Accordingly, the Magi arrived in Jerusalem with a retinue of a thousand men, having left, it is said, seven thousand behind them, beyond the Euphrates. Another story brings them from the furthest East, near the ocean's borders. An ancient tradition, written by Seth, has presaged to them the Star. On the "Mount of Victory" a tall rock, twelve of the holiest of them, had kept watch from time immemorial, with fasting and prayer.

The Star at Length Appears.

It bears the image of a child with a cross; from it a voice proceeds "Go to Judea." Throughout their two years' journey their food and drink have never failed them. Their gifts are those given by Abraham to his sons by Keturah, whom he sent into the "East Country"; the Queen of Sheba had, in her turn, presented them to Solomon, and they had found their way back again to the children of the East. On their return, these Magi are found in Parthia, or India by St. Thomas. It will be remembered that in my article on St. Thomas' Day, (Dec. 21st), I mentioned that St. Thomas had the duty assigned to him of evangelizing India. The authority for this striking story, as to the baptism and ordination of these three kings, by St. Thomas, is an unfinished work, quoted by St. Chrysostom.

A Tale of Two Cities.

The history of the "bones of the Magi" is a tale of two cities. The pilgrim-passion of the fourth century, inspired by St. Helena, discovered them in the East, and brought them to the Church of St. Sophia at Byzanturm (Constantinople), whence, as a mark of Imperial favour, they were translated to Milan. The institution by Pope Julius of a day for the celebration of the Epiphany in A.D. 338, together with the absorption of the old Roman Saturnalia into the Feast of the Nativity, made the precious relics a centre of enthusiastic veneration.

Transfer of Relics to Cologne.

When, in 1162, Barbarossa took Milan in Italy, the Archbishop of Cologne prevailed on him to permit the transfer of the remains to that Teuton city. Later, the Milanese formed a confraternity to perpetuate the memory of their loss by the performance of an annual "Mystery Play"; but it is to the superbly magnificent Cathedral in Cologne, which took hundreds of years to complete, that the Shrine of the "Three Kings of Cologne," gleaming with gold and jewels, has drawn the devotees of six centuries.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL BRINLAN.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital this morning of Michael Brinlan, at the age of 83 years. One sister, Miss Ellen Brinlan of this city, and one brother, Mr. Alex. Brinlan of Lindsay, survive him.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception to St. Luke's cemetery, Downeyville.

MRS. ELZIA McMANN.

The death of Mrs. Eliza McMann took place Tuesday morning, in Lindsay, after a short illness, she having suffered a partial stroke of paralysis a few days ago. The deceased was a highly respected lady of 77 years and for a number of years has been an esteemed resident of Lindsay.

The late Mrs. McMann was born in Wiltshire, Eng., coming to Canada with her parents. Her early youth was spent in Peterborough, after which she came to Lindsay in 1868. She was married to the late Wm. McMann, in Lindsay, on Oct. 6, 1881, by the first minister of the Presbyterian Church—Rev. Wm. Johnston. For a number of years Mr. McMann was caretaker of the local post office.

The deceased is survived by four brothers, three of whom live in Michigan, and the other, Mr. Jas. Billett, in Verulam Township. One sister, Mrs. John Lamb, of Verulam, Township, also survives.

The funeral, which will be held this (Thursday) afternoon from her late residence on Riddut Street, will be private.—Warder.

Military News

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—A big conference of representative men and women of Toronto military district, has been called for January 14, at the University of Toronto, to consider a great scheme for relieving the great army of men of military age in this district and replacing them by women. Such occupations as sales clerks, street car conductors, office employees and various semi-professional pursuits are aimed at in this scheme. Careful estimates say fourteen thousand men would be released in Toronto alone by this scheme.

Lieut. C. R. Widdifield of the 93rd Battalion, who recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, was the recipient of a splendid gift from the officers of the 93rd Battalion yesterday in the shape of a three-piece silver tea set. The address was made by Major R. P. Watt, while Capt. K. G. Lech made the presentation.

Avoid Sneezing

By Dr. Woods Hutchinson, M.D.

To avoid sneezers and sneezing sounds at first like an impossible counsel of perfection, but as a matter of fact it isn't, if we all get together and co-operate including the sneezers.

One highly expert and somewhat irascible sanitarian declares that the time will come when to cough or sneeze in any one's face, or presence, will be held to justify shooting on the spot.

In the first place, although to sneeze is one of the most overwhelming and irresistible impulses at times, and particularly when it has gathered full headway, avalanche fashion, yet on the whole it is really surprising to what an extent the problem "To sneeze or not to sneeze" lies within our own decision.

It would not be too much to say that we can stop the explosion, or turn loose the blast, as we choose at least seven times out of ten.

And as the explosion does no good whatever except in the rare instances when a grain of dust or a speck of lint is the cause of the irritation, but is a purely ancestral and animal reflex, we can do no harm to anyone by endeavoring to reduce sneezing to its narrowest possible limits.

The Educational Way.

Just how far education will go in this line we do not know, because it has never yet been systematically tried, but we have an encouraging parallel in the case of the similar explosion of coughing.

In our sanitariums for tuberculosis we have been able to educate coughing almost out of existence, so that visitors frequently comment upon how seldom they ever hear one of the patients cough.

This, of course, is partly due to the fresh air life and the improved throat condition brought about by it, but a large share of it is due simply to gentle, persuasive training, and the good examples of other patients.

It has been done for the simple reason that coughing does the consumption not only no good whatever in the way of clearing his lungs, but a great deal of harm; exhausting his feeble resources of strength, breaking his sleep, and increasing the danger of both ulceration of the throat and hemorrhage.

That the habit can be stopped for a time at least by purely educational means, without any improvement of the condition of the throat whatever, is pathetically shown by the tuberculosis patients who go to health resorts.

They are soon told or quickly find out by bitter personal experience that any one with an audible cough will find great difficulty in getting rooms at any hotel or boarding house, or even in renting a house, and the rapidity and completeness with which their cough disappears, in public, at least, is something astonishing.

Their education even begins on the transcontinental trains, when some fellow sufferer who has been to the coast before, passes the word down the line, and before they cross the desert most of them have stopped coughing, except the few unfortunates whose condition is hopeless and whose disease is stronger than they are.

Other Ways.

Even if the sneeze cannot be stopped, it can at least be smothered in a handkerchief, which is almost as good as far as saving others is concerned, or the about-to-sneeze can make a leap for an open window or door and sneeze out into the open.

If he does this at the beginning of the first titillation or preliminary gasps, he will usually reach it in time, and there is little danger of infecting the wide, wide world.

JAPAN SUPPLIES RUSSIA WITH KRUPP ARTILLERY

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Among the passengers was Dr. Phillip Newton, of Washington, D.C., who since the beginning of the war has been a surgeon in the Russian army. For may months he was stationed at Kieff, where he was head surgeon of a hospital. There were 700 beds in the hospital, and in ten months time, Dr. Newton stated, 6,400 wounded soldiers had been nursed. Dr. Newton now is an active surgeon in the Russian army with the rank of brigadier general. This rank was conferred upon him for excellent service. He also wears on his breast the Cross of St. Anne, a Russian decoration pinned there by the Tsar. During the Russian retreat from Warsaw Dr. Newton was head surgeon with the Forty-second Division of the Sixth Army of Russia.

When the retreat began the division numbered 15,000, and when the Sixth Army made their final stand, which they held, there were but 3,500 left in the division. The remainder were numbered among the killed, wounded and missing.

Ammunition is pouring into Russia at present both from America and Japan, according to Dr. Newton. Many pieces of artillery have been brought into Russia from Japan, among them scores of Krupp guns, manufactured for the Japanese in Germany. Russia has between four and six million men in the field and is equipping nine hundred thousand more, he said.

Those who talk about the "Good old times," are wrong with themselves.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

EYE TALKS SERIES

No. 6. Thoughtless Neglect of the Eyes

AS a general rule 99 out of 100 people are procrastinators. They intend to do things but put it off. That is just why so many people have needless trouble with their eyes. They have warning headaches, dry, strained feeling of the eye-lids, dimness of vision, eyes tire quickly and letters all blur together when reading, and they resolve at each reminder, that they will have their eyes attended to, at first opportunity. Those opportunities are a long time coming themselves, you must make the opportunity. The neglect only aggravates the trouble, and puts off the day of comfort, ease and perfectly restored eyesight that comes when Fowler's Peblo Glasses are supplied, to exactly correct whatever weakness your eyes may have. Don't be a procrastinator.

Not Fugitive From Justice

Manitoba Politician was Ordered from French Hospital to England, where he was Arrested.

LONDON, January 6.—In Bow Street Police Court, Robert Mills Simpson, aged 46, Surgeon Lt.-Col. the Canadian Medicals, appeared on a warrant under the Fugitive Offenders Act, charged with stealing $100,000 belonging to "the King in the right of the province of Manitoba." Accused was arrested in Folkestone upon his arrival from France last week and when the warrant was read to him remarked "This is a political matter."

The magistrate said that depositions had not yet been received from Canada and ordered a further remand of a week. Walter Frampton defended and applied for abtl, pointing out that although the accused had been proceeded against as a fugitive offender he could not under any circumstances be considered a fugitive from justice. For 25 years he had held a very high position in Winnipeg where he practised in partnership with two well-known surgeons and was chairman of the Board of Health and president of the Winnipeg Conservative Association. He had joined the Canadian forces in Sept., 1914, as a medical officer and came here in May, proceeding to France. He had been promoted from lieutenant to colonel and had been performing as many as 30 or 35 operations daily on soldiers in France.

He was told on Dec. 23 to return to this country. No suggestion of any charge was made against him but upon landing at Folkestone he was arrested by Inspector Lawrence of Scotland Yard. He was at a loss to know how the charge of conspiring with a number of prominent citizens in Canada had arisen.

The magistrate questioned why the matter of the defendant's return to Canada had not been left with the military authorities as he was still under their jurisdiction. He offered to allow bail in one surety of 500 pounds.

A Friend, (Collegiate Institute).	2.00

The League are in receipt of two letters from Belgium and one from France, during the past week, and in all three letters the boys have the same sad complaint—the uncomfortableness of their feet—nothing but wet or frozen sox to put on.

Who of the ladies of Peterborough can hear our boys crying out for warm, comfortable sox and not feel that she is required to do her bit under such existing circumstances.

The League is anxious to have a box of sox ready to send, at least once a month, and they ask all articles that can possibly be ready to be turned in the latter part of next week.

The League has plenty of yarn on hand and will be pleased to give it to any who wish to help make our boys in the trenches and training camps more comfortable.

Yarn can be obtained from the President, Mrs. Jos. Knox, 481 Gilmour Street, or from (Miss) G. Mowat, The Peterborough Creamery.

The Coming of The Holy Spirit. Acts 2:1-13.

Golden Text: Know ye not that ye are a temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? 1 Cor. 3:16.

1. Verse 1. What was the day of Pentecost kept for? (See Ex. 24:22, Lev. 23:15, Num. 28:26, Deut. 16:10.

2. Would you say or not, and why, that a barren, or an unprofitable meeting is impossible when Christians meet "with one accord"?

3. If there had been any division among these first Christians, how would that have affected the coming of The Holy Spirit on that day?

4. What, if any, reason is there to believe that the Holy Spirit will not come to any church where there are divisions and discord?

5. Verse 2. Was the "sound from heaven" made by the coming of The Holy Spirit, or was it a great wind storm as one of the attendant circumstances?

6. What other scriptural account is there of God's coming being accompanied with a great wind storm? (See 1 Kings 19:11,12.)

7. Verse 3. These cloven tongues were clearly not part of The Holy Spirit, but how do you account for the singular phenomenon? Could it have been caused by forked lightening, or was it wholly miraculous?

8. What did the sound of the wind, and the flashes of fire in the shape of tongues typify?

9. In these days of multitudinous books and papers, which is more successful in propagating the gospel, the printed pages or the human voice when both are inspired by The Holy Spirit?

10. If a pastor of a church, a Sunday School teacher or any other invariable result of his work?

11. Verse 4. What is your conception of the meaning of the phrases, "They were all filled with the Holy Spirit"?

12. Does the phrase, "began to speak with other tongues," mean that they spake in foreign languages, or that in their ecstasy their utterances could not be understood? Why?

13. Granted that it is the privilege and duty of all men to be filled with The Holy Spirit, would you say or not, and why that it is also the privilege of all to speak with other tongues? (See 1 Cor. 12:9-10,14:4,5,13,14.)

14. Verse 5. What reason, if any, is there to believe that there are still "devout men in every nation under heaven," including countries that have never heard of the historic Christ?

15. Verses 6-12. Is it possible in these days for one or more men filled with The Holy Spirit, and speaking with tongues of fire, to be in any community and not make a commotion? Why?

16. What is the great need to-day of Christian churches in order that there may be a perpetual revival in every community, without the aid of an imported Evangelist?

17. Which is the least of the two evils, and why, an highly educated ministry but lacking Pentecostal power, or a poorly educated ministry filled with The Holy Spirit?

18. The churches are putting forth great efforts to-day for a highly educated ministry and properly so, but why are they not putting forth as much earnest effort that ministers be filled with the Holy Spirit?

19. Verse 13. What resemblance is there between a man filled with the Holy Spirit, and one under the influence of strong drink?

Lesson for Sunday Jan 16, 1916. Peter's sermon at Pentecost. Acts 2:14-47.

The biggest fool is the one who thinks he can fool others with impunity without them knowing and resenting it.

SUCCESSFUL FARMERS' INSTITUTE MEETINGS HELD AT ENNISMORE

Splendid Addresses By Dr. Brown and Mr. J. A. Ferguson, Department Speakers—A Good Attendance

A meeting of the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute was held in Ennismore Township on Thursday afternoon and evening. The special speakers for the occasion were Dr. Caroline Brown of Toronto, and Mr. James A. Ferguson of Osgoode, Ont. The attendance, while not so large in the afternoon, was very gratifying at the evening session. At the afternoon meeting Dr. Brown spoke to the members of the Women's Institute on "How to Keep Well," explaining home sanitation in an instructive and interesting manner. Mr. Ferguson spoke on "Farm Management," his remarks being followed by a discussion in which the farmers asked a number of questions which the speaker answered.

The Evening Session.

The capacious town hall at Ennismore was crowded to the doors for the evening session, Dr. Brown and Mr. Ferguson both delivering addresses. Mr. J. A. McGregor, president of the West Peterborough Institute, presided. In his address, Mr McGregor explained that the Department had made no provision for a meeting at Ennismore because the Township had been given a judging course. Then Allan B. Mann, the hustling young secretary-treasurer, got busy, and after an interchange of letters with the Department, the meeting of yesterday was secured. Mr. McGregor was complimented by Dr. Brown, who said he had made one of the best addresses she had ever listened to on such an occasion.

Plea for Recruits.

Dr. Brown, who has spent years as a teacher, spoke on "Character Building," and dealt exhaustively with the training of those national assets, the members of the rising generation. In her introductory remarks, however, she made a strong appeal for recruits. There were two candidates for the chairmanship of the Toronto School Board, one the oldest the other the youngest member. She supported the former because she believed that the place for the other is in the ranks of the Empire's defenders. She believes that the old men should be left to guard the public interests and that the young men should fight, unless they can work on a farm. Production of supplies is as essential as military duty.

Dr. Brown says that the Toronto School Board will take up a measure which she will support, and that is that no male teacher of military age shall be engaged or retained in the service of the city. These men cannot farm it may be, but they can fight if trained for a few months. The work of teaching can be done in the meantime by women and the older members of the profession.

Opposed to Corporal Punishment.

Dr. Brown does not believe in the old maxim "Spare the rod and Spoil the Child." It is useless to attempt to mold character by whipping. Obstinacy in a child is developed by blows, just as fanaticism is by persecution. Corporal punishment is not a deterrent from wrongdoing. Its effects are temporary because the memory for pain is short. Ridicule will never reform a culprit. Rewards for good conduct will tend to develop in the child an improper motive to do right—the securing of a material benefit. It will give him, too, a wrong idea of the future, because in real life good is not always rewarded, nor is vice punished. You cannot bribe a culprit into good conduct any more than you can frighten him into it.

Lessons From the Boer War.

One of the lessons learned by Britain in the Boer war was that so many of the recruits offering their services were physically unfit. This led to medical inspection of pupils in the schools, a system first inaugurated in England and now the most perfect in the world. The tendency of the times is to train the will of the child instead of suppressing it, to develop individuals rather than automatons.

Making Farm Life Attractive

Mr. Ferguson spoke on the subject "How to Make Farm Life More Attractive." He said the patriotic duty of Canadians would not cease with the close of the war. The debt in money must be paid, and the only way this could be done was by increased population. The country's exports would settle its war bills.

The speaker explained how to treat seed grain in order to prevent smut in the crop. Full information on this important subject can be had by any person who will write to Ottawa for Bulletin No. 73.

Beautifying the Homes.

The speaker told how the homes of farmers could be improved by the removal of rubbish, the levelling of lawns, and the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers. Roadsides, too, can be levelled and seeded and all weeds kept down.

A Word for the Women.

Mr. Ferguson says that the farmer who fails to provide conveniences in his home, who allows his wife to lug in water, split and saw wood and perform such other properly masculine tasks may be laying up for himself treasures in heaven, but he runs a terrible risk of failing to connect with them.

Rural Depopulations.

Young people will not leave the farm if their rural home is made attractive. Every farm should have a name, the same as a factory, and every farm should be made worthy of that name.

Compliments for Ennismore.

With rare tact, Mr. Ferguson, who is a graceful as well as an effective speaker, complimented the people of Ennismore. The interval between the sessions he had spent in a local home, where there was a gathering of the young people of the community. There was singing and dancing and all enjoyed themselves so thoroughly that Mr. Ferguson is satisfied that there is no social starvation in that section.

He said, too, that after riding out from Peterborough, noticing the well-kept farms, with their trim and modern buildings, he felt that it was almost unnecessary for any lecturer to advise the farmers of Peterborough County on the subject of efficient Management.

18 POUNDS OF BLOOD

is the average quantity in a healthy adult, but it is the quality of the blood that determines our strength to resist sickness. With weak blood we find cold hands and chilly feet; in children an aversion to study, and in adults rheumatic tendencies.

In changing seasons get abundant fresh air and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals, because Scott's Emulsion is a rich blood-food that will increase both quantity and quality of the blood while it warms the body and helps carry off the impurities.

When multitudes of people are today taking Scott's Emulsion to avert winter sickness, and are giving it to their children, it is careless to neglect its benefits. Look out for substitutes.

Russian Offensive in Galicia, Becoming More Violent

Russians, Twelve Ranks Deep, Hurled Against the Austrians —Brief Despatches

ZURICH, Jan. 8.— An increasing violence marks the Russian offensive in Galicia. Russians, twelve ranks deep, were hurled against the Austrians after a fifty hour bombardment by four hundred guns.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.— The German Ambassador this afternoon told the State Department that Germany had instructed sub-commanders in the Mediterranean to observe international law.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Montenegrin official statement last night reports the repulse of all Austrian attacks and the capture of an Austrian aeroplane.

CHILD FATALLY BURNED IN CRIB

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—In his crib in the annex of the Children's Hospital on Blackwell's Island, Benjamin Busso, one year old, was fatally burned while under treatment in the hospital for pneumonia and croup. Investigation showed an alcohol burner, attached to a vaporizing apparatus, had become disarranged, and set fire to the bedclothing.

Although the blaze was discovered and extinguished quickly by Miss Mary Abbott, the child's nurse, who was badly burned in the effort, the weakened condition of the little patient made it impossible to save his life.

Miss Abbott was attending another child in the same ward when she saw flame enveloping the crib in which the Busso child was lying. Shouting for help, she seized the imperilled baby and lifted him from the crib. She tore the blazing clothing from the child's body, burning her hands and arms as she did so.

A telephone call was sent for the engine company stationed on the island, but employes of the hospital extinguished the fire before the firemen arrived. Dr. Walter Conley, superintendent of the ward in which twenty other children between one and five years old were patients, treated the child, but it lingered less than an hour.

The child's parents lived at No. 200 East 107th street, and it had been a patient at the hospital for a week.

EAT BIG MEALS! NO SOUR, ACID STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

"Pape's Diapepsin" is Quickest, Surest Stomach Relief Known—Try It!

Time it! Pape's Diapepsin will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach surely within five minutes.

If your meals don't comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

Fierce Fighting On A Twenty Mile Front Along The Styr, Says Petrograd

Russians Are Assailing the Austrian Lines Fifty Miles East of the Important Railway Town of Kovel, the Objective of the Offensive in Volhynia.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Fierce fighting on a twenty-mile front along the bend of the River Styr was reported in despatches from both Petrograd and Vienna to-day. The Russians are assailing the Austrian lines fifty miles east of the important railway town of Kovel, the objective of the offensive in Volhynia. Petrograd reported to-day that after capturing the town of Czartorysk the Slavs pressed on and captured a range of hills west of the town. They are now assailing the main heights barring the advance to Kovel. The capture of Kovel by the Russians would cut the railway supplying the Austro-Germans in the fortresses of Lutzk and Dubno, and threaten the envelopment of the Germans around Pinsk. No early decisive successes for the new Slav offensive are expected here. The strength of the Austro-German defenses being well known. It is considered likely, however, that the continuation of the heavy Russian attacks will delay the beginning of an Austro-Bulgarian-German invasion of Greece by preventing the transfer of troops from the Russian front.

PROHIBITED FROM SPEAKING.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Jan. 8.—Maximilian Harden, a brilliant German journalist, is prohibited from public speaking or writing for the remainder of the war by an order issued to-day. His weekly magazine Zukunft has been suppressed for attacking the government.

ZEPPELIN WAS WRECKED.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 8.—A German Zeppelin was wrecked in descending in a heavy gale near Namur, Belgium, according to advices received here to-day. Two of the crew were killed.

SUBMARINE CONTROVERSIES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The complete and final settlement of all submarine controversies with the Central Powers, including the Lusitania and the Persia incidents, seemed near to-day. Pessimism over threatened breach of diplomatic relations was largely dissipated.

STRIKE SITUATION IN YOUNGSTOWN.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 8.—Two thousand two hundred troopers took charge to-day of the steel strike situation in East Youngstown, where rioting last night caused at least one death with injuries to 37, and half a million dollars' damage.

Italy's War Bill Is $561,000,000

Expenses From May Till the End of December Were Covered By Loans and Taxes

ROME, Jan. 8.—The sum of $441,500,000 is, according to statistics just made public, the expense sustained by Italy for her army and navy from June 1 to November 30. Adding $120,000,000 spent in May and December, the total of the war to Italy is more than $561,000,000; without including the expense of the military preparations before the opening of the hostilities.

These expenses have been covered by war loans and new taxes. Besides, economies have been introduced in all departments except that of instruction, which in the last five months spent $3,000,000 more than in the same period last year.

St. Mihiel Swept By War's Angry Waves

War waves have rolled forward and backward around the little town of St. Mihiel, like angry surf against a rocky shore, and the struggle here has been as stationary as that between a granite headland and the sea. A primer on war geography just issued by the National Geographical Society describes this village, grown famed during the past year as the starting point of innumerable German assaults, and as a position bearing the brunt of many a fierce French answer. The primer reads:

St. Mihiel, in its youth, was a place of much military importance, a feudal stronghold of good revenue and fair renown. In those days, it possessed massive fortification, and two castles, about which cling a wealth of traditions of bravery, stories of romance, and tales of unbridled revelry. The fortifications and the castles were destroyed in a quarrel between Louis XIII. and Charles IV., Duke of Lorraine, in 1635.

"Modern St. Mihiel formed an important link in the long, closely-woven chain of French defences toward the German frontier. The chief fame remaining to it at the time of the world-war's outbreak, however, was that of its age—mellowed abbey, the Benedictine Abbey of St. Michael, to which foundation the town owes its name. The abbey was founded away back in the infancy of Central Europe, in the year 709. The present abbey buildings, in which the municipal offices house, date from the seventeenth century.

On the road to Verdun, the dominant fortress of the whole region, are seven huge rocks, in one of which a sepulchre has been hewn and a life-sized figure of Christ carved. Miraculous powers are ascribed to the image, and to it the peasants of the neighbourhood take their troubles and their petitions.

St. Mihiel lies on the right bank of the Meuse and the Canal d'Est, in north-eastern France, some 23 miles south east of Verdun. In peace times, it has a population of 6,000 and a large garrison.

REDUCE TYPHUS IN MEXICO CITY

Reports to Mexican Embassy at Washington Show Decrease—American Destitute in Piedras Negras.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8.—Typhus cases in Mexico City and its suburbs, which during December totalled 3,241, now have been reduced to about 2,500, according to official advices to-day to the Mexican Embassy. Deaths from the disease in the city proper, the records show, decreased from 404 in November to 305 in December, although there was an increase during the latter months in the number of cases.

The American Consul at Piedras Negras reported to-day that many Americans, attracted to Mexico by published reports that laborers were needed, now were practically destitute, most of them lacking even funds sufficient to return to the United States. The Consul said there was no demand for foreign labor, the work offered being insufficient to give all native laborers employment.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANDRUFF

Try This! Your Hair Gets Wavy, Glossy and Abundant at Once

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair — sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

Cor. GEORGE & CHARLOTTE

WINS $5,000 ON HOBBLE SKIRT CAR

A verdict of $5,000 was awarded to Mrs. Ella H. Frankel against the Nassau Electric Railroad Company by a jury in Justice Callaghan's part of the Supreme Court, in Brooklyn. This was the first verdict recovered in Kings county as the result of an accident on one of the new side door, hobble skirt surface cars. Mrs. Frankel asserted that the conductor of a St. John's place car pressed the button while she was alighting, with the result that the doors slid shut and she was dragged and hurt.

HOW YOU MAY THROW AWAY YOUR GLASSES

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefit from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind or nearly so, or who wear glasses, might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late. Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only crutches, and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better use if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Talmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

The Canadian Tonic. A. J. Dawson, author of "Jan: A Dog and a Romance," looks upon Canada as a valuable training school for British valor. "For young and healthy men," he says, "there is perhaps no other country which has more to give than Canada in the shape of discipline; of that kind of metal, moral and physical tonic which makes for swift, sure character development, and the stiffening and bracing of the human fibers. In English life there has been of late years a rather serious scarcity of this tonic influence. Canada is very rich in her supply of it; but the tonic is too potent for the use of weaklings."

OUR SERIAL STORY

"What did it look like?" Abe said.

"I didn't see it," Morris replied. "They sent it direct from the store, but I took Minnie's word for it. She said it was fine value."

"And Minnie," Abe concluded, "is a fine, up to date woman!"

III.

Two days later Abe Potash spotted the name of Marcus Bramson in the "Arrival of Buyers" column of a morning newspaper.

"Mawruss," he cried, "he's come!"

"Who's come?" Morris asked.

"Marcus Bramson," Abe replied, reaching for his hat. "I'm going over to the Bingler House now to meet him. You wait here till I come back. I bet you we sell him a big bill of goods."

As Abe went out of the store by the front door an expressman, bearing a square wooden box, entered the rear alley. He brought the package straight to Miss Cohen, who signed a receipt and summoned Mr. Perlmutter. Morris proceeded to pry off the cover.

"This is something what Mrs. Perlmutter bought for Hyman Maimin's wedding present," he explained. "I ain't never seen it yet."

"Oh, Mr. Perlmutter," Miss Cohen exclaimed, clasping her hands, "what a beautiful bonbon dish! What a lovely wedding present!"

"Ain't Mrs. Perlmutter got good taste?" Miss Cohen went on enthusiastically.

Morris said nothing, but picked up the silver dish. Examining the polished center carefully, he discerned the indistinct initials "M. P." almost but not quite effaced by buffing. Undoubtedly, it was the same bonbon dish.

He gathered up the tissue paper and carefully arranged it in the box as a bed for the silver dish. Then he put the cover on and nailed it down.

"Ain't you going to let Mr. Potash see it?" Miss Cohen asked. "He ain't never seen it before neither, has he?"

Morris frowned.

"I think he has," he replied. "Anyhow, I'm going to send it right uptown by messenger boy."

"Do you think they'll exchange it?" Miss Cohen inquired.

"Oh, I guess it will be put back in stock all right!" said Morris, turning away.

IV.

The next morning when Morris entered the store Abe was busy figuring on the back of a torn envelope.

"Hello, Mawruss," he cried, looking up. "Ain't it a beautiful weather?"

Morris agreed that it was.

"That Mr. Bramson," Abe went on. "That's one fine gentleman, Mawruss. He ain't what you'd call a close buyer neither, Mawruss."

"No?" Morris commented.
